THE BUDGET SPEECH.

A Grand Showing for Canada.

Further Protection for our Industries.

Great Results of the N. P.

OTTAWA, March 30.—The House met this afternoon, and after routine Mr. Cameron (Huron) said the bills relating to the amendment of the law of evidence had yesterday disappeared mysteriously from the order paper, and therefore he would move that the House will on Monday next resolve itself into a committee further to consider those bills. It was objected that the motion required notice. The Speaker thought that the bill had become as it were a dropped order, and that, therefore, the motion did not require notice. On a division there appeared for Mr. Cameron's motion 74, and against it 101, which gives Mr. Cameron's bill its quietus for a season.

BUDGET SPEECH.

At four o'clock Sir Leonard Tilley began the Budget speech. His explanations of the reasons why this year the speech is made more than a month later than it was last year will be satisfactory, and will show that the Government have proceeded with when it hastens and when it delays. It will be gratifying to the people to find that the Government's purpose to reduce the taxation by another million and a quarter this year has not been thwarted by the action of the Congress of the United States. It will also be gratifying to the people to find that in the changes proposed, mostly as to decreases and increases in duties, the great central principle of the National Policy has been steadily kept in view by the Finance Minister. No matter how great the outcry which could receive a benefit from the alteration of the duties, the industry has been carefully considered. A glance at the will afford the best evidence that the Government stand firm to their great purpose of fostering the labor of the country. The illustration of aniline dyes is a good one. If these dyes come into the country in five pound packages, they are free. If they come into the country in small packages they are not free. The paper used in putting up these dyes was foreign paper. The girls and boys employed in the work were from other countries; under the change in the tariff, the paper used will be home manufactured, and the boys and girls employed will be home manufacture too. This purpose of giving employment to our own people runs through all the changes, as will especially be seen in the free list, and in the list of articles upon which the duties are decreased. In the list of articles upon which the duties are increased, it will be found that, in several cases, greater protection is given, because the manufacturers of other countries have made a systematic war upon the manufactures of Canada, being resolved in many instances to sell at a loss rather than permit Canada to establish factories. The determination of the Government, as expressed in the tariff changes, will probably have the effect of putting an end to the injurious efforts of the outside manufacturer. Some of the changes are made with the object of

TARIFF CHANGES

REMOVING IRRITATIONS

among importers in passing their goods through the Custom-houses of the country, and others are made to prevent the system of false invoices, indulged in by some traders to the detriment of honest traders. A careful analysis of the changes in the tariff will show that the Government are wisely resolved to make the National Policy more and more fitted to the growing manufacturing purposes of the country. Forward is the motto of the Government. To set more industries to work is their great aim. The manner in which the Finance Minister has dealt with the book question will commend itself to the common sense of the country. The prohibition of the export of deer, wild turkeys, and quail will be satisfactory to those who have felt that great damage has been done to the game of the country by the previous plan. It is unnecessary to refer more particularly to the tariff changes, but for the bulk of readers it is sufficient to indicate by a few illustrations the principles upon which those changes have been made. In his remarks upon as seen in the results produced, Sir Leonard Tilley effectually disposed of the hostile criticisms of the Opposition at the inception of the tariff. The National Policy would, according to the Opposition critics, make the poor man poorer, in the fact that in four years the deposits in the Government savings banks have increased $13,163,965 is the best proof of the inability of the Opposition to gauge correctly the effects of any fiscal policy, as is the further fact that the increase in deposits in the banks of the Dominion in four years has been $30,475,628. A fact worthy, in the short space of four years, of $43,636,903 in in deposits in the Government savings banks and the other banks of the Dominion, is the best possible evidence that all classes have found prosperity through the workings of the National Policy. As with this objection, so is it with the others that were urged. The test of time proves with yearly increasing force that the tariff was just what Canada needed. The increase of our imports from Great Britain in five years has been $19,166,151, and the increase of imports from the United States during the same period has been $342,128. The disloyalty charge is thus summarily disposed of, while the fact of England has been as good that now our securities top the list of colonial securities, and if we wanted to borrow, which happily we do not, we could get all the money we asked at a lower rate than ever. Sir Leonard Tilley's statement showing the sound position this country occupies in respect to the

THE EFFECTS OF THE TARIFF

EQUILIBRIUM BETWEEN EXPORTS AND IMPORTS

will be received by the country, as it was by the House, with gratification, showing as it does that there is an excess of more than three millions of dollars in the amount of money received from abroad during the period of four years, over the amount we have had to pay to foreign countries during that period. The returns show that the imports of raw materials for manufacture have largely increased, and that the "hum" of employed labor in the country has gone on increasing, and yet that the revenue has been so great that the surplus over a considerably increased expenditure exceeded eight million of dollars in the last fiscal year. The imports of wool have increased 50 per cent. in four years, of raw cotton over 175 per cent. in four years, of hides nearly 100 per cent., while the increase of machinery imported has been nearly 700 per cent., notwithstanding the enormous increase in the output of home made machinery. The great increase in the coal consumed is another indication that the "hum" is a decided success. It also shows the accuracy with which the Finance Minister gauged the effects of the present tariff upon the coal industry. In one of his former budget speeches he prophesied that the increase in the development of the coal industry in Canada would reach in a few years 400,000 tons. The actual increase in four years has been 545,190 tons, while the price has been reduced and promises to be still further reduced. The Finance Minister dealt with and showed that the actual result was that for the year 1882, taking the prices ruling during that year in the United States, and which we would have had to pay if we had been supplied from the United States, the price was 67 cents a hundred pounds more than we had paid for our own sugar. In other words, the cost of sugar to the Canadian consumers was' decreased in the year a million dollars, whilsour direct trade with the countries of production of the raw material was 77 per cent., in 1882, as against 6 per cent. in 1878. Another of his tables was equally suggestive, as showing the increased purchasing power of the country. The increase of revenue collected on sixteen articles of luxury in the fiscal year 1882 over 1878 amounts to $6,689,018. The Finance Minister's statements as to the increased expenditure of the Government will be read with interest by those who deserve. The increased expenditure of last year was about one and a half millions of dollars in excess of the expenditure of the year previous. There was an apparent increase of $146,659 in interest paid; but this is merely a matter of account, the net interest paid being in fact $15,736 less than in 1880-1. The increase in militia is a real increase, but the militia service was starved in previous years, and if it is worth doing anything with the militia, it is worth doing it well. The increase of $50,000 in expenditure in public buildings is a good increase. The country has the buildings and the people have the increased accommodation, and they are getting it not an hour sooner than they needed it.

THE INDIAN INCREASE

of $378,317 is justified from the fact that we are dealing honestly by our Indian wards, and are reaping the result in their gradual reclamation from savagery to civilization. It is the best missionary money the country ever spent. The post office department increased its expenditure by $104,000, but each year the deficit in the department has been decreasing, notwithstanding the increased expenditure. In 1879 the deficit was $612,000, in 1882 it was $392,672. In the same way there was an increase on account of public works, railways and canals, but the increased receipts on the Intercolonial were more than the increased expenditure. In fact, the increased expenditure was caused by the increased business, and that increased business was so much greater than the increased expenditure that the usual deficit became a surplus. It is important that the public should keep in mind that the increased expenditures do not increase the taxation, and that is the true test. In point of fact the taxation per head of the population in the year 1882 was thirteen cents less than the average from 1874 to 1878. Among the important statements made by the Finance Minister was one relating to

OUR FOREIGN COMMERCE.

The efforts of the Government to secure as good terms as the most favored nations have not been as successful as the Government desired, and in order to mark their unwillingness to accept other terms from those nations the Government propose to ask Parliament next session to impose 10 per cent. additional on the products of those countries refusing to deal with Canada on as good terms to Canada as they give to any other people. This announcement was received with great applause by the House. The speech was received throughout with great favor, and the Finance Minister was frequently and loudly applauded and he sat down in a full burst of applause, after making a speech which will rank among the best of his efforts.

THE ESTIMATED SURPLUS.

for 1883 84 is $3,000,000, and the proceeds from land in the North-West $2,250,000, savings bank $5 000 000, total $10,250,000. This will meet the expenditure on capital, and the redemption of maturing debentures The estimated revenue for 1883-84 is—Customs, $21,500,000; Excise, $5,400,000; Post Office, $1,750,000; Public Works, including Railway, $3,000,000; interest on investments, $600,000; other sources, $800,000: total, $33,250,000. Sir Leonard concluded as follows:—Now I hold that the verdict given in June last was more emphatic, and proved more for my statement that hon. gentleman opposite must accept the National Policy before they can hope to come on this side of the House. The fiat has gone forth, and it will be perpetuated, and it is this, that the head must perish that attempts to remove one single stone from the foundation, or one single arch from the superstructure of the edifice whose foundation was so carefully laid, and superstructure so carefully superintended, by the right hon. gentleman whose name I need not mention. (Loud cheers.) And I believe it firmly to-day, that whenever an election came on this policy would be sustained; that after it had been five years on the statute book, and after having been perfected from time to time, it would never be repealed in Canada so long as Canada was Canada. Under these circumstances, I desire to lay upon the table of the House the resolutions that when we are in committee I propose to move in confirmation and perfection of that policy. (Long continued applause).

MR. PATERSON'S REPLY.

Mr. Paterson (Brant) followed Sir Leonard Tilley, and undertook to give his own theory of the prosperity of Canada. He showed that the Opposition are just as antagonistic as ever to the principle of the present tariff, and are as far away as ever from reconstruction. The tariff, he declared, had done nothing toward giving the country prosperity. The prosperity we enjoy is, according to Mr. Paterson due to other causes. It is a satisfaction, however, to find the Opposition advanced so far by the many wonderful cures it has effected, and the great reputation it has with the medical profession, stands to-day far ahead and the demand greater than any other preparation known, for the cure of consumption, bronchitis, asthma, coughs, influenza, hoarseness, loss of voice, dyspepsia, scrofula, wasting diseases of children, nervous prostration, paralysis, brain worry, and many other diseases of the Lungs, Blood and Nervous System.

Davy & Clark, Druggists, Renfrew, date of June 3rd, write:—"Burdock Blood Bitters, though comparatively a new preparation, has taken the lead in this locality as a blood purifier, our sales of it being equal to that of all other medicines used for the purpose during the last year."

The most wonderful curative remedies of the present day, are those which come from Germany, or at least originate there. The most important placed upon the market in this country, is the GREAT GERMAN INVIGORATOR, which has never been known to fail in curing a single case of impotency, spermatorrhœa, or any of the diseases resulting from self-abuse, as nervousness, debility, mental anxiety, languor, lassitude, depression of spirits and all disagreeable derangements of the nervous system. For sale by druggists, or sent free by mail on receipt of the price, $1.00 per box, or six boxes for $5.00. Address James Clark & Co., Sole agent for Belleville. Send for circular.

Would you avoid the Billary complaints incidental to spring and summer? Cleanse the system with Burdock Blood Bitters. It regulates the Liver, Bowels, Kidneys and Blood, and is the purest tonic in the world. Trial bottles 10 cents.

A Rope About Our Necks

A weak stomach or enfeebled circulation is like a rope about our necks. We are strung up and mustrung alternately till existence becomes unbearable. Burdock Blood Bitters will arrest all this misery. Burdock Blood Bitters is a boon to the sick. Let us remember this fact.

G. W. Mingay, Parkdale, Toronto, writes: "My wife had several very severe attacks of cramps in the stomach. Hearing of DR. AUSTIN'S PHOSPHATINE, and its pleasantness to take, I gave her two bottles, and she has not had an attack since, and her health is much improved." For sale by all druggists.

Prepare for Spring—After a long, severe winter the system needs cleansing of impurities. Nature must be assisted to recuperate, the Liver must be made to act, all surplus bile and impurities carried off. Zopessa must be a prominent remedy. The results of a few doses are most surprising. Ask your druggist for a 10 cent sample bottle, and try Zopessa, the most powerful remedy for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Constipation, Biliousness or Liver complaint ever introduced in this country.

CUT THIS OUT.

"Frank P. Warner came into our store to purchase a sample bottle of Zopessa for a friend, and stated that he (Mr. Warner) was afflicted with Kidney and Liver troubles for five years, and had paid $200 or $300 doctor's bills, and has now been completely cured by the use of two large bottles and one sample bottle of ZOPESSA. He was so bad at one time that he lost 37 pounds of flesh, but after using ZOPESSA claims that he is a sound man, and now weighs 145 pounds. He was loud in his praise, and readily consented to allow us to use his name for reference."

in their political education as to admit that the country is in a state of prosperity. It has taken them five years to make this discovery. Possibly by the end of another five years they will have advanced in their education sufficiently to apprehend the value of the present tariff as the chief factor in our prosperity. There was much laughter over one little slip made by Mr. Paterson. He was in the full tide of an indignant protest against the tariff, because, as he affirmed, the country had imported so many more pigs, cattle, eggs, &c., last year than in the first year of the tariff. He suddenly discovered that the figures he was giving were not those of the imports of the articles named, but of the exports. His efforts to show that the increased imports were injurious come to a speedy end, and he had at once to turn around and show the increased exports of the same things were injurious. It was too much even for the versatile successor of Sir Richard Cartwright.

MR. THOMAS WHITE'S SPEECH.

Mr. Thomas White replied to Mr. Paterson in an exhaustive speech, which was attentively listened to, and evoked constant applause. He dealt at length with the financial administration of the Government, contrasting it with that of the Liberals, and pointing out the great decrease in the cost of the collection of revenue effected by the present Ministry. He also examined minutely the character of the increase in expenditure in recent years, establishing the necessity to the progress of the country of the augmented charges. He also entered into the effect on the industries of the country of the present tariff, treating of every important branch of trade, and proving conclusively the advantages which have followed the adoption of the National Policy.

Daily Intelligencer.

BELLEVILLE, MONDAY, APRIL 2.

A Discredited Organ.

Like many others nearer home, those four leading Grits of Madoc have no respect for the Belleville organ of their party. The Madoc Review, in its latest allusion to the alleged bribery, brings out this fact clearly. It says:

Neither Messrs. Vankleek, Cross, Dale or ourselves care anything for the Ontario's gratuitous slanders, "clothed in vulgar and offensive language," but we do care a little for the INTELLIGENCER's good opinion, and we can assure our honest contemporary that we hold the subscribers of these gentlemen to say that they do not consider themselves under any obligation to make a public statement, considering the disgraceful and unwarrantable foundation for the slander; that they are entirely satisfied with the course the Review took in the late election, and consequently they being satisfied themselves, it matters little to them what lying reports are circulated.

Here we have something tangible at last. The gentlemen whose names were dragged through the mire by the organ of their party in Belleville express their contempt for it and give its statements a flat denial. What has the organ to say by way of justifying itself?

The Production of Pig Iron.

The most important of the changes in the tariff, as announced by Sir Leonard Tilley in his most excellent budget speech —a summary of which appears in other columns—is that under which a bounty is to be offered for the production in Canada of pig iron. In order that the intentions of the Government may be fully understood, we reproduce here with the Mail's verbatim report of Sir Leonard's remarks on that subject:

We are now building in Canada, and we will probably build more extensively in the future, composite ships with iron frames, iron beams, and sheathed with wood; and the iron that is imported for the purpose—because vessels so brought into the country would, if British vessels, under the Merchant Shipping Act, come in free—will be admitted free of duty. This is intended as an encouragement to that shipbuilding industry, and it is proposed to extend the time over which such articles will be admitted free for a period of three years, because we believe the time is coming when we shall sufficiently develop our iron manufactures so as to produce our own beams, sheaths and knees for iron vessels. I may say, while speaking on this subject of iron, that it has been one of the most difficult questions with which the Government has had to grapple, because iron in the larger portion of the manufactures of the Dominion to-day is a raw material, but the Government consider it so important an industry to develop, that they are resolved to develop it if this can possibly be effected by any legislation or encouragement, and such as the value of iron when manufactured is in its effect on the labor of the country. From the time of mining the ore, excavating the coal, burning the coal into coke, until the operations are completed, its value, I suppose, is very large extent, its in the labor employed, and because it is to be considered an industry of the greatest importance. Just at this time let me say that the Government will submit a resolution to the Committee that, and after the 1st of July next, and for three years, $2.50 per ton will be paid on all pig iron produced in Canada during those three years, and $1 per ton during the next three years, as a bounty for the encouragement and development of this industry.

By the people of this city, which is the natural seat of the iron manufacturing industry, and by the residents of the extensive region over which the deposits of iron ore are known to extend, this official announcement that the Government have come to our aid in so handsome a manner, will be received with enthusiasm. The contention of those who have engaged in the various schemes for the establishment of iron smelting works in this city has been that the duty of $2 per ton which the present Government imposed on foreign iron was not sufficient to warrant their entering into the business; but the exceedingly liberal offer of a bounty of $1 50 per ton on all the iron produced during the first three years after the 1st of July next, and of $1 per ton on all produced during the next three years, ought to be sufficient to establish amongst us this most important of all industries.

Belleville is as we have said, the natural seat of iron manufacture, and we trust that the City Council will at once take action to secure for the City, in such manner as shall to them seem most desirable, the full benefit of the Government's new and most liberal policy. Action cannot be taken at too early a date, and we would suggest the appointment, at to night's meeting, of a Committee to deal with the subject. The City Clerk and the City Solicitor, both of whom have given a great deal of attention to the subject, ought to be members of such a Committee, and if some prominent citizens could be included, so much the better.

In order to complete their policy and to make it as beneficial as possible, the Government have also, we observe with much pleasure, placed drills for prospecting for minerals on the free list. This concession means, of course, diamond drills, by the use of which the extents of the deposit of iron ore can be accurately determined.

Let us repeat: The effect of the new policy will be to place many competitors in the field, and Belleville's peculiar advantages will be overlooked, unless means at once be taken to give them due prominence. Let the Council, then, take at the flood that tide which, set flowing by the Government, is designed to lead on to fortune. Or, if they prefer the metaphor, let them strike now that the iron is hot.

Editorial Brevities.

The queries which the local Grit organ puts to us anent the protest are so silly—so imbecile—that we feel constrained to act on the injunction, "Answer not," &c. The organ can obtain information as to the date on which the protest was resolved on, and the day on which the arrangements for its same were perfected, from Mr. W. B. Northrup, Secretary of the Liberal Conservative Association. But information is not what the organ wants. It would rather revel in pretended ignorance and continue to promulgate falsehoods based on that pretended ignorance—an ignorance which it is obliged to feign by professing disbelief in our statement of the facts of the case.

Sportsmen will be gratified at the prompt action of the Dominion Government in their request for the prohibition of the export of game. Were ruffed grouse and wild ducks included in the list of game the export of which has been prohibited, there would be still greater satisfaction with the Government's action.

The Canadian Pacific.

PUSHING ON THE SYSTEM WEST OF MONTREAL.

The engineers' staff of the Canadian Pacific Railway is just now busily engaged in perfecting the surveys immediately west of Montreal. Work is chiefly being directed to the projection of the Atlantic and North West Railway, which will greatly improve the through connection with Toronto and the West. Mr. Peterson, Chief Engineer of the company, with his full staff of surveyors have been busily engaged with the preliminary survey, which, starting from St. Eustache, has already reached St. Andrews, Que. It has been decided to cross the river Ottawa at Carillon, and the road will then strike across the south-eastern peninsula of Ontario to Smith's Falls, where connection will be made with the Canada Central for Brockville and with the Ontario and Quebec Railway now under construction for Toronto. This route will be sixty miles shorter between Montreal and Toronto than any at present existing. The road will be pushed forward with all possible despatch and it is hoped will be completed by next spring.

COAL RAISED IN THE UNITED KINGDOM IN 1882.—It appears that the quantities of coal brought to bank in the United Kingdom last year reached no less a quantity than 156,500,000 tons, thus exceeding the extraordinary production of 1881 (154,184,000 tons) by upwards of 2,300,000 tons. As compared with 1880, the excess is as much as 9,700,000 tons, and as compared with 1879, it is 12 500,000 tons. This shows a progressive expansion in the production of coal that is really startling. The miners employed in the production of this mass of fuel numbered 501,000, so that each man, on the average, won 312 tons in the course of the year.

Beware of Imitations.

Since Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has become celebrated, a number of unprincipled persons have been endeavoring to palm off Electron and Electric Oil for the genuine Dr. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. Beware of these similar named articles. If their originators had any faith in the healing properties of their own medicines they would, like honest men, give them name of their own, and not try to sell them the reputation of another; but as they know their preparations have no merit, they resort to the most unprincipled means of selling them by getting a name as near as possible to Eclectric. We therefore ask the public when purchasing to see that the name Dr. Thomas Eclectric Oil is on the front of the wrapper, and the signature of NORTHROP & LYMAN, the proprietors for Canada on the back.

Licenses.

The time for application for licenses expired on the 1st, and those who were desirous of catering to the thirsty public submitted their names and the customary sum that a license (should the applicant be fortunate enough to get one) calls for. In this city 32 presented themselves as being desirous of securing the necessary legal permission. Of these 24 have the necessary accommodations, while 8 seek licenses without the accommodations. The number that can be granted is 26. Trenton offers 14 applications, 6 more than it is entitled to; Frankford asks for 4, and Sidney 2. Belleville wants 4 shop and 3 wholesale licenses, while Trenton seeks 3 shop privileges. The Commissioners will consider the applications on or about the 25th.

Vennor on April Weather.

April enters on a Sunday with a March storm, and the same day of the week is likely to continue stormy through the month. The 5th and 6th will likely prove stormy in lake regions and Lower Provinces, Newfoundland probably coming in for heavy gales. The 10th to 12th are probably dates for severe frosts. These were experienced in 1882. The 20th and 21st stormy and wet in majority of sections. The month will end cold and stormy and May day may be ushered in with snow and sleet in northern and western sections, and cold rains at others. There will probably be some unusual terms of warmth during this month, but all-together it will partake of its average character and be of a favorable description.

BELLEVILLE, MONDAY, APRIL 2

City and Vicinity.

NO ARRESTS since Saturday morning.

THE crow's music was frequently heard to day.

A TRAIN of empty passenger coaches passed down yesterday.

THE Trenton stage came down on the ice to day, "all the way."

DUST was flying to day on the upper section of Railway Station Street.

THOS. WARDMAUGH was sent to gaol for a month for receiving stolen goods.

SHARP nights and pleasant days appear to be the meteorological order of things.

A COMMUNICATION from "Standard," in relation to the Museum, will appear to-morrow.

ON Saturday night the station furnished accommodation for six tramps. Last night the slate was clear.

IN the Police Court to day, Joseph Belcher, was fined $5, and costs for disorderly conduct on Campbell street.

"SAP doesn't run worth a cent" said a farmer this morning. And yet some maple sugar has already been exposed for sale here.

THE Bridgewater stage runs to and from Hayden's Corners on wheels. The Madoc stage has abandoned sleighs for a portion of its journey.

THE steamer Prince Edward is to be supplied with new guards. The work is to be performed by Captain Cuthbert and to be finished within a week.

THE Canada Gazette of Saturday contains the appointments of Lieut. Graham, of Sidney, as Captain, and Captain Ponton, as Adjutant, of the 49th Batt.

THE ice is honeycombing between the upper bridge and Bleecker's dam and already the water has made an opening directly at the foot of Church Street.

THE Matriculants' Exhibition at Albert College next Wednesday evening closes the Hilary Term, which has been one of unusual prosperity, if reports are correct.

THE License Commissioners for West Hastings were to meet the Council of Sidney, at the Town Hall to-day, to consider some matters regarding the License Law.

THERE is not a ton of stove coal for sale at Kingston, and the inhabitants are reduced to burning wood. The same is true of Belleville, and has been so for some days.

A REGULAR meeting of the City Council is the prominent event on to night's civic programme. Among other matters the stove foundry project will come up for consideration.

AT a recent Committee meeting, a prominent Alderman (while a conversational discussion anent the water supply was going on) said: "There is enough water going to waste in the upper part of the town to supply the whole city." Others, before his time have made similar observations, but that is all the good such remarks have accomplished.

HARVEY BROWN, whose perilous ride and misfortune on the 18th of January was recorded in these columns, visited the depot to-day, for the first time since his accident. He is yet on crutches.

A HORSE owned by Mr. John Lewis fell on Pinnacle Street this morning whilst drawing a heavy load. The animal was so badly injured that it had to be placed in Harvey Cronk's stable and the services of a veterinary surgeon procured.

THE time for receiving tenders for the market tolls, expired at noon to day. The applicants are; James Woods, Abel Grills, John H. Gordon, and Joseph R. Northcott. The Market Committee were to meet this afternoon, open the tenders and make their award.

REVIVAL SERVICES began yesterday in the Bridge Street Methodist Church. The occasion was improved by Rev. Dr. Jeffers, who preached in the morning upon revival work, and announced that next Sunday evening he would give a discourse upon "Future Punishment."

THE repairs to the G. T. R. bridge here, are nearly completed and it is thought they will be finished in the course of a few days. The last of the keelsons and stringers were put in on Sunday and several trains were obliged to stop outside the western semaphore until the rails had been relaid.

THE house of Reuben Badgely, near Badgely's wharf, Big Island, took fire on Saturday afternoon, in the absence of all the members of the family, except Mr. Badgely's daughter-in-law, who, although unaided, succeeded in saving a few valuable articles. The building, with the remainder of its contents, was destroyed. Loss from $3,000 to $4,000. Insured for $1,300 in the Agricultural, of Watertown.

THIS morning's session of the Ministerial Association proved exceedingly interesting and was largely attended. The matter of the annual exchange of pulpits, on motion, was referred to the Executive Committee for the preparation of a plan of arrangements. After general conversation, Rev. M. W. McLean introduced the subject; "The minister and the rights of citizenship," which was carefully considered by the members present.

IT is altogether probable that the negotiations between Rathbun & Son and the Midland Railway Company, for the sale of the property at the foot of Front Street, will be consummated. It is also hardly probable that Rathbun cares for the possession of Mill Island, or he himself would make direct overtures for its possession. Definite knowledge on that subject will be obtained when the tenders for the sale of the island are opened.

ALEX. REID and Thomas Manley have not been as friendly of late years as their friends could wish. "'Tis good for us to dwell together in unity" but they did not consider it was besieding for them. They met in Shannonville on Friday last, and, while the latter's back was turned to the former, Reid kicked him and otherwise maltreated him. Manley wanted satisfaction and came here for a warrant, which was issued. Reid was going to Madoc and came here. Sergeant McCrudden was detailed to look after him and he soon brought him in. Reid got $10 and costs. He intimated afterwards that had he been in the northern metropolis of this county, seven officers could not have taken him, but he was meek enough here.

DEATH ON THE RAIL.

A Brakesman Killed on Sunday Night.

William Hopkins, aged about 35 years, who has been in the employ of the G. T. R. Company, since the 9th of October, 1876, was killed on the night of the 1st instant, whilst employed in the yard in this city. He resided on the Cauifton Road, and leaves a widow and four children to mourn his untimely end.

Deceased had been for a time employed in the yard here, but subsequently was engaged as a brakesman between this city and Brockville. Yesterday the night switchman was taken ill, and on account of Hopkins' knowledge of the yard, his general usefulness as a worker, and his being an experienced hand, he was sent to take the sick man's place. He responded to the request and went on duty at seven o'clock. In the vicinity of eleven o'clock, the yard engine was shunting in the west end of the yard, and deceased was then on hand attending to his duties. While a train was in motion he went in between the cars to cut off one of the number. He, while engaged at that work, is supposed to have slipped and fallen on the rails, and the cars then passed over him and killed him. It is thought his death must have been instantaneous. Two men were working with him, but did not notice his absence until some time afterwards, as they supposed he had gone to a well near by for a drink, and they, therefore, kept on at their work. Some time after John McNeil, the night yard master, saw the body lying on the track. The legs, body and head, were bruised and crushed, and the right arm almost entirely severed from the body. The remains were brought to the station and placed in the wash-room, and Dr. Sakins, the family physician of the deceased, sent for. Dr. Burdett, Coroner, was also notified to attend, and did so, but deemed it unnecessary to hold an inquest. The remains were taken in charge by an undertaker this morning, put in a coffin, and taken to deceased's late home.

Hopkins was a man of quiet and unobtrusive demeanor, of good habits, temperate and industrious, and was very popular among his fellow employees. He was insured in the G. T. R. Employees' Insurance Comp'y for $500.

Honest and Liberal.

When the Hops in each bottle of Hop Bitters (at the present price, $1.25 per lb.) cost more than a bottle is sold for, besides the other costly medicines, and the quality and price are kept the same, we think it is honest and liberal in the proprietors, and no one should complain or buy or use worthless stuff, or cheating bogus imitations because the price is less.

MORNING DESPATCHES.

AMERICAN.

CRAZED BY MONEY.

PAVILION, N. Y., April 7.—Chas. Cox, a young farmer, who was commissioned by his wife to draw $2,002 from the Bank of Assemblyman Payne Perry, of Wyoming County, and absconded, has been traced to Buffalo. It is thought to have made him insane by having so much money in his possession.

A YOUNG BRUTE PUNISHED

HAWLEY, Pa., April 2.—Jno. Bowles, aged 16, belonging to a respectable family at Folson Hollow, assaulted a six year old daughter of another family. The neighbors organized a court and sentenced the culprit to be publicly whipped. John's father volunteered to carry out the sentence. He tied his son to a post in a barn and lashed his bare back with a beech switch until the neighbors and committee declared the punishment was enough.

THE EAST RIVER BRIDGE

NEW YORK, April 2.—Despite the efforts of the watchmen, five thousand people yesterday obtained access to the East River bridge. Many crossed, and a large number of boys engaged in dangerous frolicking. The crowd was finally driven off by the police.

MURDERED FOR REFUSING A DRINK.

HAMPTON, Va., April 2.—Last night P. Joyce, clerk at the National Soldiers' Home, invited Thos. Phillips, an inoffensive citizen, to take a drink with him in a hotel. Joyce refused to drink, but accepted a cigar. While standing at the bar Joyce deliberately shot and killed Phillips, and placed the pistol in the latter's pocket and fled, but was arrested. An attempt at lynching is feared. There will be an extra guard at the jail to night.

AFTERNOON DESPATCHES

BLEEDING THE AUSTRALIANS.

LONDON, April 2.—Mr. Parnell has received a letter from William Redmond, who went to Australia to organize the Land Leaguers. Mr. Redmond reports that he has been successful beyond all expectation, and the prospects are brighter for Ireland on account of his visit.

THE TROUBLE IN INDIA.

CALCUTTA, April 2.—A European and Anglo-Indian Defence Society has been formed here for the purpose of watching the interests of Europeans and Americans in India. The immediate efforts of the Society will be devoted to the preservation of the rights of British subjects to be tried by our own countrymen and to defeat the bill permitting the trial of whites by native judges, in certain cases.

ASSASSINS ON TRIAL.

ROME, April 2.—Five men charged with attempting to kill Coccapeller, a Noted Socialist and a member of the Chamber of Deputies, have been placed on trial here. The chief of the assassins, named Tagnetti, is a brother of the man executed under the Papal Government for causing an explosion in the Serristone barracks.

A BELGIAN THIEF.

BRUSSELS, April 2.—There is a sensation in financial circles over the discovery that Van Damme, a prominent stockbroker, has embezzled a million francs belonging to persons who deposited money with him. Van Damme has been arrested.

BUSHELS OF THREATS.

LONDON, April 2.—Accounts of a steady stream of letters containing threats of death and the destruction of buildings are being received by prominent persons and Government functionaries. Additional precautions are being devised against the execution of the threats, particularly in London. The Gas Works are carefully guarded against surprise. Only known and trusted hands are allowed on the premises.

DISMISSED ON CHARGE.

LONDON, April 2.—An annoymous letter sent to an editor asserts that the Fenians are sending packages containing liver infected with smallpox, to persons obnoxious to the Irish National party.

FATAL BOILER EXPLOSION.

PARIS, April 3.—The latest accounts of the boiler explosion at St. Denis show that 34 persons were killed and 65 injured; many fatally.

ADDITIONAL PRECAUTIONS.

LONDON, April 2.—The War office, among other measures taken for the purpose of thwarting the dynamite workers, has ordered experiments, with the view of preparing an analysis of all substances capable of being employed as explosives. The result of their work will be given to the House.

O. Bortle, of Manchester, Ontario Co., N.Y., writes:—"I obtained immediate relief from the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. I have had Asthma for eleven years. Have been obliged to sit up all night for ten or twelve nights in succession. I can now sleep soundly all night on a feather bed, which I had not been able to do previous to using the Oil."

In the first terrible winter spent by the Pilgrims at Plymouth, in Massachusetts, the seeds of pulmonary diseases were planted, and took deep root in families which became the progenitors of thousands of the American people. The prevalence of consumption, thus early developed, directed the attention of the most eminent physicians and scientific men to an investigation of its causes and the means of prevention and cure. The best results of professional studies on this subject are combined in Dr. J. C. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which is now recognized as the world's remedy for coughs, colds, consumption and other diseases of the throat and lungs. We believe it to be absolutely certain in its remedial effect. It is a safe, pleasant and reliable remedy, and if kept on hand in every household, will prove, in many cases colds, coughs, &c., a means of preventing more serious results.—Richmond, Va., Religious Herald.

Our Children.

Why compel them to take those vile and nauseating medicines, when Puttner's Emulsion is so palatable and nice, and produces better results than any other. Most astonishing reports are daily recorded in favor of its cures, where other preparations of the kind have failed, and them been cast aside in disgust.

FOR DELICATE WOMEN, who are suffering from Anæmia and weakness, caused from over nursing, Puttner's Emulsion is just what is required to give tone to the system, and will immediately build them up in health and strength.

A Fact.

If you suffer from Chronic Diseases, and have little faith in advertised remedies, and have sought vainly for a cure, consult your Druggist, or address T. Milburn & Co., Toronto, for proof positive regarding the merits of Burdock Blood Bitters, the Great Regulation Blood purifying Tonic, that acts on the liver, kidneys, stomach, bowels and skin.

Well as Ever.

Lottie Howard writes from Buffalo, N. Y. "My system became greatly debilitated through arduous professional duties. I suffered from nausea, sick headache, and biliousness; tried Burdock Blood Bitters with the most beneficial effect. Am well as ever."

Racked by Indescribable Pangs, restless by day, sleepless at night, rising unrefreshed in the morning, without appetite and perplexed by varying and perplexing symptoms, the dyspeptic takes indeed a gloomy view of human existence. For him the gest of life seems gone. Heartburn, oppression at the pit of the stomach, and the attendant annoyances of of constipation and biliousness, combine to render existence utterly wretched. But there is, if he will but take advantage of it, a reliable source of reliable relief from all misery. Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure is, as its name imports, a botanic preparation, free from mineral poison, and as all sufficient remedy for indigestion in its most obstinate form. It not only enriches the blood by enabling the digestive organs to convert the food received into nutritious chyle, but separates it by increasing the action of the bowels and kidneys, the natural outlets for its impurities. But in addition to the bowels, it never does so violently and with pain, like a drastic cathartic. It aids, but never forces, Nature, invigorating as well as purifying and regulating the system. It thoroughly removes from the diseased humors which tend to vitiate the blood, purifies the urinary secretion, and promotes a flow of healthy bile into the natural channel, besides expelling it from the circulation. Experience has proved that this standard medicine is a thorough remedy for dyspepsia, biliousness, costiveness, kidney complaints, scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, lumbago and all impurities of the blood. Price $1.00. Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac-simile of Northrop & Lyman's signature. Sold by all medicine dealers.

There is not a mother on earth who has ever used it, who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother, and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe to use in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Sold everywhere at 25 cents a bottle. 264y

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

It is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brashy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The Vigor cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair

The Vigor is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.

KIDNEY-WORT

HAS BEEN PROVED The SUREST CURE for KIDNEY DISEASES.

Does a lame back or disordered urine indicate that you are a victim? THEN DO NOT HESITATE; use Kidney-Wort at once, (druggists recommend it) and it will speedily overcome the disease and restore healthy action.

Ladies. For complaints peculiar to your sex, such as pain and weaknesses, Kidney-Wort is unsurpassed, as it will act promptly and safely.

Either Sex. Incontinence, retention of urine, brick dust or ropy deposits, and dull dragging pains, all speedily yield to its curative power.

KIDNEY-WORT

A well known clergyman, Rev. N. Cook, of Trempeleau, Wis., says: "I find Kidney-Wort a sure cure for kidney and liver troubles."

KIDNEY-WORT IS A SURE CURE for all diseases of the Kidneys and LIVER

It has specific action on this most important organ, enabling it to throw off torpidity and inaction, stimulating the healthy secretion of the Bile, and by keeping the bowels in free condition, effecting its regular discharge.

Malaria. If you are suffering from malaria, have the chills, are bilious, dyspeptic, or constipated, Kidney-Wort will surely relieve and quickly cure.

In the Spring to cleanse the System, every one should take a thorough course of it.

41- SOLD BY DRUGGISTS. Price $1.

KIDNEY-WORT

"Last year I went to Europe," says Henry Ward, late Col. 69th Reg., N. G. S. N. Y., now living at 173 W. Side Ave., J.C. Hights, N. J., "only to return worse from chronic liver complaint. Kidney-Wort, as a last resort, has given me better health than I've heretofore enjoyed for many, many years." He's cured now and consequently happy.

KIDNEY-WORT

FOR THE PERMANENT CURE OF CONSTIPATION.

No other disease is so prevalent in this country as Constipation, and no remedy has ever equalled the celebrated Kidney-Wort as a cure. Whatever the cause, however obstinate the case, this remedy will overcome it.

PILES. THIS distressing complaint is very apt to be complicated with constipation. Kidney-Wort strengthens the weakened parts and quickly cures all kinds of Piles even when physicians and medicines have before failed.

42- If you have either of these troubles

Sugar and the N. P.

We pointed out in a recent article the immense advantage to the trade of Canada which the change in the tariff in relation to sugar made in 1879, has produced. It was then shown that while in 1878 only about 6 per cent. of our importation of sugar came direct from countries of growth, last year more than 75 per cent. of our imports came from this source. The policy then adopted has led to the establishment of five sugar refineries in Canada, has given employment to hundreds of workingmen, has contributed large quantities of freight to the Intercolonial Railway, has enlarged inter-provincial trade, has more than doubled the number of vessels trading between Canada and the West Indies and Brazil, has augmented the sales of our produce to those countries, and, by increasing the amount of tonnage in our ports, has created greater competition for outward freights, and so reduced rates to the direct advantage of the home producer. There was, however, wanting one further proof of the unqualified gain in every respect to the country arising out of the change in the sugar tariff,—that the price has been reduced to the consumer—and that void the Finance Minister filled in his speech yesterday. The average export price of granulated sugar in New York in 1882 was per 100 lbs., $6 20; add freight charges, 80 cents; 25 per cent. ad valorem $1.55; 1 cent per lb. specific, $1 00; total, $9.55 per 100 lbs. as the cost of granulated sugar laid down in Montreal in 1882 under the Cartwright tariff. The average price of Canadian granulated sugar last year was $8 88 per 100 lbs., or 67 cents less than the cost of American refined sugar under the late tariff. The effect, therefore, of the National Policy, in addition to all the advantages enumerated in the way of enlarged trade at home and abroad, has been to reduce the price to the consumer more than 6 cents per lb., or, taking the whole consumption of the year, to affect a saving to the people of Canada of half a million dollars in the cost of sugar.—Montreal Gazette.

Report of Department of the Interior.

The report of the Department of the Interior submitted on Thursday, states that the condition of the population under the jurisdiction of the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Territories is highly satisfactory. The following is a summary of the business of the Dominion Land Agencies:—

	Acres. 1882.	Acres. 1881.
Homesteads	1,181,652	438,707
Pre-emptions	904,211	263,647
Sales	613,282	355,165
Total	2,699,145	1,057,519
	1881	1882.
Homestead fees	$ 28,330	$ 72,930
Pre-emption fees	16,855	5[illegible],499
Cash on account of land sales	176,566	1,347,935
Timber, mining, and grazing receipts	44,504	85,984
Registration and other fees.	1 639	2 227
Scrip and county warrants.	84,097	54 791
Total	$352,000	$1,618 366

Compared with the receipts for 1881, this shows an increase for 1882 of $1,266 366, and if to this increase be added the sum of $547,711 derived in 1882 from the sales of colonization lands, and the sum of $5,780 derived from miscellaneous sources, the total increase of receipts in 1882 over 1881 is $1,819 857. The total income for 1882 is $2 171,857. Three million acres have been granted to colonization companies under the regulations of December, 1881. The income from which amounting to $547,711 up to the 31st December last, consisted of the first instalment of 40 cents per acre due on the purchase of odd numbered sections within the respective tracts to be colonized by the several companies to whom grants were made.

In the first terrible winter spent by the Pilgrims at Plymouth, in Massachusetts, the seeds of pulmonary diseases were planted, and took deep root in families which became the progenitors of thousands of the American people. The prevalence of consumption, thus early developed, directed the attention of the most eminent physicians and scientific men to an investigation of its causes and the means of prevention and cure. The best results of professional studies on this subject are combined in Dr. J. C. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which is now recognized as the world's remedy for coughs, colds, consumption and other diseases of the throat and lungs. We believe it to be absolutely certain in its remedial effect. It is a safe, pleasant and reliable remedy, and if kept on hand in every household, will prove, in many cases colds, coughs, &c., a means of preventing more serious results.—Richmond, Va., Religious Herald.

BELLEVILLE, TUESDAY, APRIL 3.

Still Misrepresenting.

It is long since we ceased to hope for any approach to fair play in the conduct of the Globe towards its political opponents; but the malignance and stupidity shown by the reconstructed organ outdo the efforts of the former management.

The Quebec Government, recognizing the necessity for legislation as to the sale of spiritous liquors within their powers as defined by the judgment of the Privy Council, introduced a measure with that object, upon which the Globe commented as follows:—

It is worthy of note that even the Quebec Government, in the new legislation proposed, do not think of abandoning their right to impose a fee on the vendors of intoxicating liquors. Indeed they assert that the object in view is to place that right beyond doubt. In other words, they mean to impose and collect one fee, and if the Dominion Government go on to impose and collect another, so much the worse for the unfortunate victuallers. They will have double fees and two sets of conditions, instead of single fees and one set. For all of which they should be truly grateful to Sir John.

In order to show how false and how stupid is the assertion that the Dominion Government contemplate the imposition of a license fee, it is only necessary to quote from the official report of the Premier's speech on the address, in which he said (see official report of Commons Debates for Feb. 12, page 22):

It is quite clear to every lawyer, and any man who is not a lawyer who reads that judgment will see, that the very reasons on which the Privy Council decided that this Parliament had the right to deal with the Scott Act, are the reasons showing that the Provincial Legislature of Ontario had not a right to deal with that subject under the Crooks Act; except as a matter of revenue for municipal or provincial purposes. The hon. gentleman says that we should have allowed the matter to stand over until it was finally decided. Sir, if there be any value in that decision—and there is every value in it, because it is the law of the land—there is no check at the present moment in the Province of Ontario against the unlimited, unrestrained sale of intoxicating liquors. This is not a matter we can play with. It is not a matter of policy; it is a matter of necessity. If we wish to prevent the unrestrained sale of intoxicating liquors, we must legislate immediately; for I take it that any man in this city or in any other part of Ontario can open his saloon and sell liquors, and there is not a Court in the world can prevent his doing so. All he has to do is to be ready to pay the license if it is wanted for revenue purposes, to the Government of Ontario.

Here, then, we have, in the space of a few lines, the opinion of the Premier, twice expressed, that the Dominion has no power to impose a license fee—that that power rests with the Provincial Legislature. The judgment to which Sir John referred, and on which he based his opinions fully warranted that opinion, for it says, with a clearness which cannot be misunderstood:

The power of issuing licenses is not assigned to the Provincia. Legislatures for the purpose of regulating trade, but in order to the raising of a revenue for provincial, local or municipal purposes.

It is unnecessary to pursue the subject further, as our quotations are sufficiently ample and authoritative to demonstrate the Globe's misrepresentations and to dispose of the bugaboo of possible double fees which it has endeavored to set up in order to frighten the tavern keepers into voting the Grit ticket at the coming by-elections. Strange, too, that the Grit organ should adopt such tactics after having tried to frighten the temperance people that Sir John was about to decree free trade in whiskey. However, such tactics are in accord with those of Mr. Blake and his followers, who evidently do not want to have the question settled, as asked for by all who regard the interests of the country as superior to those of a party.

Editorial Brevities.

The Globe remarks:—

The Hamilton Spectator falls into the bad habit of stating what is not true when it says the Ontario Streams bill does not afford adequate compensation for the use of improvements. A careful reading of the text of the bill would lead to a different expression of opinion from our contemporary.

Then Mr. Blake has also fallen "into the bad habit of stating what is not true" in the same regard, for he stated in his speech before the Grit Convention at Toronto (according to the Globe's own report) that "it was to be regretted that the bill did not provide sufficient compensation for private or vested interests."

The Ontario asks us to note that the Ontario Government have done what it is pleased to consider a favor to the Corporation of this city. We will very gladly publish the particulars supplied by the organ if it will, in return, publish a list which we will supply of the special acts of disfavor that Mr. Mowat's Government has done to Belleville.

It is all very well for Mr. Mowat to do a small act of justice to Belleville now, when it may be that the fate of his administration will depend upon the vote of the ratepayers of this place. Justice is always to be desired, but Mr. Mowat's determination to do justice to Belleville has come too late, and his motives are too transparently corrupt. Mowat will go, if the vote of Belleville will oust him.

Two more Bailiffs of Division Courts were added to Mowat's army of placemen last week. Such appointments average two per week.

CITY COUNCIL.

When the hour of eight tolled out last night, all the members of the Council filed into the chamber and took their seats, with the exception of Ald. Pope, Brignall, Cooper and McInnich.

The minutes of the preceding meeting were read and approved.

COMMUNICATIONS

The auditors' report was submitted. They represented that the books of the several city officials were found correct.

David Brennan applied for the position of tally clerk at the sorting boom.

A number of accounts were presented and read

The above were appropriately disposed of.

REPORTS

The Executive, Fire, Market and Stove Foundry Committees reported as already announced.

INQUIRIES

Ald. Tickell asked relative to the licensing of junk shops and if the police inspected those places. He thought such places were frequently receptacles for stolen goods and therefore the officers should look after them. He also considered that a reward should be offered for the apprehension of those who cut the maple trees in Baldwin Ward.

Ald. Dickson wanted to know who destroyed a valuable tree opposite Ald. Macoun's.

Ald. Diamond—You're barking up the wrong tree.

Ald. Petrie said there had been no report from the Water and Gas Committee in the matter of giving Foster Ward a better water supply

With regard to Ald. Tickell's inquiry, the Mayor said that there were no junk shops here

Ald. Dickson suggested that Ald. Tickell put his inquiry in the form of a motion, so then we could see whether or not the By-law is in operation or the police over whom the Council has no control—are doing what they should.

Ald. Dunnet said there was too much water at the corner of Bridge and Everett streets and the drain there was blocked.

Ald. Starling said that he would direct the street Surveyor to attend to that matter.

Ald. Dickson, in reply to Ald. Taylor, said the Procedure By-law would soon be ready for distribution.

NOTICE

Ald. Starling gave notice of a By-law for the appointment of a Board of Health.

BY-LAWS

Ald. Dickson introduced a By-law for the leasing the old market lot on Pinnacle Street to the Stove Foundry Company.

This and also Ald Starling's By-law, referred to above, were presented for their several readings by the Council suspending the rules.

Ald. Dickson introduced a By-law for the prevention of forestalling on the market.

Ald. Pope's By-law was allowed to stand.

Ald. Hanley's proposed By-law for the prevention of ice and snow falling from roofs was withdrawn, as the Snow By-law covered the point.

The several By-laws were read a first time.

MOTIONS.

Ald. Hanley moved, seconded by Ald. Dunnet, that a coal oil lamp be placed at the corner of Henry Street near Severn's Brewry. This was allowed to stand as a notice.

Ald. Dickson moved, seconded by Ald. Macoun, that the City Solicitor be requested to report to the Executive Committee as to the powers of the Council regarding dangerous buildings or halls.

Council went into Committee of the Whole on By-laws—Ald. Diamond in the chair.

The Stove Foundry By-law was taken up.

An amendment to the By-law stipulates that the Company can buy the land any time before 1890 for $600 and up to 1895 for $1,200. In other respects the By-law is as already noted.

The By-law for the appointment of Health Officers was read.

Ald. Starling moved that the blanks in the By-law be filled in with the names of Ald. Starling, Dr. Tracy and Richard Taylor.

Ald. Hanley moved that Dr. Burdett's name be substituted for that of Dr. Tracy.

Ald. Starling said Dr. Tracy would work gratuitously and the Council should bear that in mind. Dr. Tracy would only be called in case of emergency.

Ald. Petrie moved that Dr. Curlett be appointed Medical Official to the Board of Health.

Ald. Taylor moved that Chief McKinnon's name be substituted for Ald. Starling's.

The vote was taken by ballot and resulted as follows: Ald. Starling 13, Dr. Tracy 7, R. Taylor 13, Dr. Burdett 5, Dr. Curlett 7, Chief McKinnon 8.

Ald Starling and Richard Taylor were declared elected and another ballot was taken for the third member of the Board. The vote was as under: Dr. Tracy 6, Dr. Burdett 4, Dr. Curlett 3, Chief McKinnon 5.

As it was thought advisable to place a medical man on the Board, the Chief's name was dropped and another vote taken with the following returns: Dr. Tracy 12, Dr. Burdett 3, Dr. Curlett 3.

Dr. Tracy was then declared appointed.

Richard Taylor was chosen Health Inspector at a salary of $100 per annum.

The Committee rose and reported.—Adopted.

The By laws were read a second and third time, passed, and numbered.

Ald. Dickson moved, seconded by Ald. Blair, that each Committee of the Council report what, or if anything, can be done to induce iron smelting works to be established here.—Carried.

Ald. Starling moved, seconded by Ald. Baker, that the Chairman of the Ferry Committee be authorized to ask the G. T. R. Co. for their ferry license, they to be held harmless.—Carried.

Ald. Tickell moved, seconded by Ald. Starling, that the attention of the Police Commissioners be directed to the Junk By-law, and that they be requested to have it enforced.—Carried.

Council went into Committee of the Whole on Ways and Means, Ald. Taylor in the chair.

The report of the Executive Committee was passed.

The Fire Committee's report was read.

A letter from the Manager of the Telephone Company, offering to make telephonic connection between No. 2 fire station and the police station for $65, was submitted.

Ald. Petrie was opposed to the clause proposing the adoption of the telephone system.

Ald. Smith recited instance where had a telephone been in the police office, desirable results would have followed.

Ald. Tickell recommended the telephone and disapproved of Ald. Petrie's old fogy ideas.

Ald. Petrie doubted if the majority of the people would favor the telephone. He was sure the intelligent voters of Foster Ward would not approve of it.

Ald. Petrie while the vote was being taken, saw that his ideas would not prevail and remarking that "we're bunted," heard the Chairman declare the clause carried.

Ald. Diamond asked how it was that the proposition asking for tenders for the sale of the island came from the Executive Committee.

Ald. Petrie—It is surpassing.

The clause was carried.

The Council approved of the Market Committee's report.

An account of the Board of Works amounting to $35 05 was endorsed.

The Committee rose and reported.—Adopted.

Adjourned.

Beware of Imitations.

Since Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has become celebrated, a number of unprincipled persons have been endeavoring to palm off "Electron and Electric Oil for the genuine Dr. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. Beware of these similar named articles. If their originators had any faith in the healing properties of their own medicines they would, like honest men, give them name of their own, and not try to sell them the reputation of another; but as they know their preparations have no merit, they resort to the most unprincipled means of selling them by getting a name as near as possible to Eclectric. We therefore ask the public when purchasing to see that the name Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is on the front of the wrapper, and the signature of NORTHROP & LYMAN, the proprietors for Canada on the back.

MR. L. H. CLEVELAND, agent for the Fay Templeton Opera Company, is in town making the necessary arrangements for their appearance here.

BELLEVILLE is to be the central point of a telephone circuit which is to extend from Kingston on the east to Cobourg, on the west, and include all the principal intermediate places.

ONE year ago to-day, the first steamer arrived in Belleville, but that arrival was the earliest of which we have any record. The next earliest was on April 9th, 1878. The latest arrival during the past twelve years was May 3rd, 1875.

IN the show window of Mr. Dick's tailoring establishment is an oil painting of Master Kaib, of this city. The youth is dressed in Highland costume and the picture is said to be a very correct representation of the original. Mr. Edward S. Claxton is the artist.

CHIEFS Annoschhkah and Archibald Cuthbertson, of the Tyendinaga reserve, were in Ottawa for some days last week on business with the Indian Department. They have had an interview with the Government, with a view to effect necessary arrangements for the placing of some of the Indian lands in the village of Deseronto on the market. Their request has been considered favorably. The value of the land for disposal is $30,000.

THE many friends of the Rev. George Sisson Filliter (brother of H. E. Filliter, of this city) will learn with pleasure that he has been appointed Vicar of St. James', Ryhill, Yorkshire, England. Shortly before the Rev. gentleman's removal to his new field of labor, he was presented by the parishioners of Hemsworth, in which parish he had been curate, with a most elegant silver salver, suitably inscribed, together with a purse of 37 guineas, as an indication of their respect.

MR. W. E DIAMOND (son of Mr. Irvine Diamond), who joined the North West Mounted Police some years ago, has prospered and has earned his promotion to the position of Quartermaster's Sergeant. He is stationed at Fort Walsh, whence he wrote on March 15th to his father. His younger brother Herbert, who went last year to the Territories, has taken up a quarter section in that neighborhood, one and a half miles from the railroad and near a town site, and is actively preparing to crop a portion of it this year. The land thereabouts has not been surveyed as yet, but most of it has been taken up by quatters Timber, Mr. Diamond states, is very scarce in that locality, a quantity sufficient for the erection of a shanty costing $65. The weather at the date of the letter is described by the writer as delightful.

WEATHER PROBABILITIES—Toronto, April 3.—Lakes, southerly to south easterly winds, fine, decidedly milder weather, probably some rain Wednesday.

FAY TEMPLETON.—Regarding Miss Fay Templeton, who appears in the Metropolitan Hall next Monday evening, we clip the following from the St. Louis Post-Despatch: "Young, beautiful, charmingly graceful, with a world of mischievious and innocent coquetry in her dark eyes, this young lady is on the high road to all success there is in comic opera. To look at her is to enjoy a new pleasure. She is graciously lacking in bold effrontery and is a lady at all times."

Lumbering Notes.

In Gilmour & Co.'s limits, near Beaver Creek, the snow is 7 feet deep on the level.

The shantymen are "winding up" their work on that stream.

The cut on that limit will be about 80,000 pieces.

Exclusive of teamsters and jobbers 110 men and 80 teams have been employed all winter in the four shanties located in that section.

The cut is expected to reach Trenton by the 15th of June.

NOW THAT there is a reliable remedy for kidney troubles, half the terrors attached to these complaints have been removed. For this let all be thankful, and to DR. Whilst correspondents will be accorded space for the expression of their ideas on topics of public interest, it must be in all cases understood that the views so expressed are simply those of the correspondents themselves.

Museums.

To the Editor of the Intelligencer.

SIR,—From time to time I see published a list of small donations, principally pebbles and bones, to the Albert College Museum. It appears to me to be ridiculous to endeavor to make this isolated spot the people's Museum. Proximity is essential to popularity. Not more than a dozen of the citizens of Belleville will ever be tempted to wend their weary and unromantic way through Coleman Ward to the brick temple of the Muses, which rears its red walls in sombre frown above the northern city. The days of learned exclusiveness are over. Education must be made attractive and comfortable, and I presume that the Museum is intended for education and to interest the public, and not merely for the archæological gratification of a few speculative scientists who obtain such wholesale returns of conjecture from such trifling investments of fact. The British Museum owes its success to the attention which its trustees paid to the wants and tastes of all classes. In these days of Lottery prosecutions it may be worth noticing that the £20,000 with which the British Museum was first established, was raised in 1574 by a London (Eng.) Lottery! As many as 50,000 people have visited the British Museum in one day, and this is largely due to its central position and ease of access. Had these Bellevillians who possess the nucleus of a Museum accepted the offer of the Mechanics' Institute and not been beguiled by learned Professors, much might have been accomplished in the way of popularising science, encouraging practical investigation, and fostering original research. Much may still be done if the donors repent at leisure when they see that their (no doubt well-intended) efforts are not appreciated while hidden in the scholastic murkiness of Albert College. Identify the Museum with the popular Mechanics Institute and contributions will flow in—so will the public.

Yours &c.,
STANDARD.

Honest and Liberal.

When the Hops in each bottle of Hop Bitters (at the present price, $1.25 per lb.,) cost more than a bottle is sold for, besides the other costly medicines, and the quality and price are kept the same, we think it is honest and liberal in the proprietors, and no one should complain, or buy or use worthless stuff, or cheating bogus imitations because the price is less.

Dominion Parliament.

FIFTH PARLIAMENT—FIRST SESSION.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

OTTAWA, April 2.

After routine Mr. Curran introduced a bill to provide for the distribution of the assets of insolvent traders, which he said had been prepared by the Montreal Board of Trade with great care. In places with not more than a population of 20,000 a guardian should be appointed by the Sheriff and in other places by the Board of Trade. The bill was read a first time.

On the third reading of the bill to incorporate the Reverend Oblate Fathers of the North West, Mr. Blake proposed an amendment that ten years after the corporation should have acquired any property, they should not be permitted to hold any more than was required for their own use. The motion was carried and the amendment was inserted in the bill, which then passed the third reading.

An amendment was moved in the Credit Foncier Franco Canadien bill, that the corporation be not permitted to charge a higher rate of interest than eight per cent., including the cost of administration. A division took place on Mr. Auger's motion for the six months' hoist, but instead of the measure being elevated, the motion itself was floored by a vote of 35 for and 144 against.

Two other private bills were put through, and at 6 o'clock the House rose for recess.

The Orange Incorporation bill was allowed to stand. Its next appearance on the order paper will be for Wednesday.

Sir Leonard Tilley, replying to Mr Whelan, said it was not the intention of the Government to reduce or repeal the duty on land plaster imported from the United States for fertilizing purposes.

As yet no understanding has been reached that Sir Charles Tupper is to succeed Sir Alexander Galt, at least the First Minister jocularly announced in the House that no offer had been made to his honorable friend.

The House adjourned at 10:30.

O. Bortle, of Manchester, Ontario Co., N.Y., writes:—"I obtained immediate relief from the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. I have had Asthma for eleven years. Have been obliged to sit up all night for ten or twelve nights in succession. I can now sleep soundly all night on a feather bed, which I had not been able to do previous to using the Oil."

Dr. E. C. West's Nerve and Brain Treatment is a never failing cure for Nervous Neuralgia, Nervous Headache, Overworked

SHILOH'S CATARRH REMEDY. A marvellous cure for Catarrh, Diphtheria, Canker mouth, and Head Ache. With each bottle there is an ingenious nasal Injector for the more successful treatment of these complaints without extra charge. Price 50cts. L. W. Yeomans & Co., wholesale and retail agents.

The Smith Medicine Co.

Gentlemen,—I have very much pleasure in testifying to the efficacy of Dr. Smith's German Worm Remedy. I found it to operate successfully after only two doses. Have tried other remedies with the same child without success. Yours truly, W. T. HART, 128 Amherst St., Montreal.

IN THE history of medicine no preparation has received such universal commendation for the alleviation it affords, and the permanent cure it effects in kidney diseases, as DR. VAN BUREN'S KIDNEY CURE. Its action in these distressing complaints is simply wonderful. Sold by all Druggists.

Let there be no mistake about this, that the Myrtle Navy tobacco is manufactured from the very finest Virginia leaf. No higher quality of leaf can be purchased for any tobacco made. It is selected with the very greatest care, and treated with the most approved process for preserving the flavor of the tobacco.

J. S. Wetherell, writing from Winnipeg, says: "I can say more about PHOSPHATINE now than when I saw you last in Toronto. My health is much improved, and I am free from headaches or any other aches, having only used two and a half bottles of your Phosphatine. For sale by all Druggists.

MORNING DESPATCHES.

AMERICAN.

DEVOURED BY WOLVES

OMAHA, Neb., April 3.—The body of Miss A. M. Church, teacher, whose parents live in St. Lawrence Co., N. Y., was found half devoured by wolves three miles north of Stanton yesterday. She has been missing since Jan'y 1st, and had evidently suicided, as she wrote on an envelope directing her body to be sent to Park Kotty, N.Y No cause assigned.

PURSUING THE INDIANS.

SUPAR, N. M., April 3.—Col Forsyth followed the Indians from the Southern Pacific R.R. crossing, at Chequasqua Mountains, in Arizona, to near the Cotton Wood Springs. The Indians attacked a waggon containing the ranchmen's supplies, and wounded two men, after which they took to the hills, where the soldiers were unable to follow their trail. Forsyth will remain for several days scouting the surrounding country.

ELECTION NEWS.

DUBUQUE, Iowa, April 3.—The entire Democratic City ticket was elected. O'Donnell's majority for Mayor was 1,000.

CINCINNATI, O., April.—The returns from 26 precincts aggregating 18,800 votes, gives Stephens, Dem., a majority of 1,700.

SMALL-POX IN ST. LOUIS.

ST. LOUIS, April 3.—The dirty condition of the city has resulted in an epidemic of smallpox in St. Peter and St. Paul, one of the most densely populated parts of the city.

A FAILURE OF JUSTICE.

ST. LOUIS, April 3.—The action of the U.S. Supreme Court in reversing the decision of the Supreme Court in the Kring murder case, has created great excitement here. Kring murdered Dora Brainsear because she would not marry him when she had a husband living, and Kring had a wife and family. The effect of the decision is virtually to clear Kring. He was permitted to plead guilty of murder in the second degree, but the plea was set aside by his attorney. The claim is that he can only be tried for murder in the second degree now, and as the evidence will show murder in the first degree, they must instruct to discharge. He has been tried six times, and three times sentenced to be hanged.

AFTERNOON DESPATCHES

CONTINENTAL CONFEDERATION.

ROME, April, 3.—The statement that a defensive alliance has been entered into by Italy, Germany and Austria, against France, has been officially denied. Nevertheless a certain agreement exists, the terms of which are about the same as those already outlined, but which have not been put into formal shape.

A ROYAL INVALID.

VIENNA, March 3.—The Emperor, who for months has been suffering from a painful internal malady, will spend the summer at Callabad for the purpose of trying the healing waters.

NEW YORK, April 3.—Arrived the Canada from Havre.

RELIGIOUS RIOTING.

LONDON, April 3.—Advices from Colombo, the capital of Ceylon, report that the Catholics recently objected to a religious procession of Buddhists, in which was a sacred crucifix surmounted by a monkey. The Papists regarded this combination as an insult to the Catholic religion. A violent physical contest ensued in the streets. The troops dispersed the rioters and restored peace without bloodshed. A number of participants, however, were roughly handled. There were several broken heads.

AN APPEAL FROM PARNELL.

During yesterday's debate in the House of Commons, Parnell urged that further executions in Ireland be suspended until a Court of Criminal Appeal has been established. The bill establishing a court reached its second reading in the House of Commons yesterday.

THE QUEEN'S LAST TRIBUTE OF RESPECT TO HER GILLIE.

LONDON, April 3.—The Queen will attend the funeral services over the body of John Brown this afternoon.

MINISTER LOWELL'S SENTIMENTS.

LONDON, April 3.—Minister Lowell, at the Lord Mayor's banquet, said he had read the sensational statements of newspapers purporting to give the instructions he had received from his Government, and the words he spoke on diplomatic questions. These prophecies were like those of Wiggins. He should, in spite of them, continue to believe that the good relations between Great Britain and the United States have been undisturbed. Nothing he could do would tend to lessen their friendly character.

Daily Intelligencer.

One of Earth's Angels.

'Ah! don't talk to me,' she said, with an impatient sigh; 'don't talk to me of love. I have done with that, my heart feels like dust and ashes. I am not worthy of you—I am not worthy of self devotion. I thank you, Sir Ronald, for the honour you do me; but I cannot—I cannot marry you!'

'And you will let that poltroon Stanford boast, as he does boast, that you will live and die single for his sake!' he cried, bitterly. 'He has made it the subject of a bet in a London club room with Major Lauderdale of the Guards.'

'No!' said she, her face flushing, her eyes kindling; 'he never did that!'

'He did do it. I have proof of it. You loved him so well—he boasted—that you would never marry. He and Lauderdale made the bet.

She drew a long, hard breath, her eyes flashing, her white teeth clenched.

'The dastard,' she cried; 'the mean, lying, cowardly dastard! Oh, if I were a man!'

'Take your revenge without being a man. Prove him a liar and a boaster. Marry me!'

She did not answer; but he read hope in her flushed and excited face.

'Besides,' he artfully went on, 'what will you do here? You have no longer a home when your father marries; unless you can consent to be subject to the woman who was once his housekeeper. You will have no place in the world; you will be an incumbrance; your stepmother will wish you out of the way, and your father will learn to wish as his now wife does. Oh, Kate, come with me! Come to Glen Keith, and reign; we will travel over the world; you shall have every luxury that wealth can procure; your every wish shall be gratified; you shall queen it, my beautiful one, over the necks of those who have slighted and humiliated you. Leave this hateful Canada, and come with me as my wife—as Lady Keith!'

'Don't! don't!' she cried, lifting up her hand to stop his passionate pleading. 'You bewilder me; you take my breath away! Give me time; let me think; my head is whirling now.'

'As long as you like, my dearest. I don't ask you for love now; that will come by and by. Only give me hope, and I can wait—wait as long as Jacob for Rachel, if necessary.'

He lifted her hand to his lips, but let it fall quickly again, for it felt like ice. She was looking straight before her, at the pale, yellow sunset, her dark eyes filled with a dusky fire, but her face as colorless as the snowy ground.

'Are you ill, Kate?' he said, in alarm; 'have I distressed you? have I agitated you by my sudden coming?'

'You have agitated me,' she replied. 'My head is reeling. Don't talk to me any more. I want to be alone and to think.'

They walked side by side the rest of the way in total silence. When they reached the house, Kate ran up to her own room at once, while Captain Danton came out into the hall to greet his old friend. The two men lounged out in the ground, smoking before dinner cigars, and Sir Ronald briefly stated the object of his return, and his late proposal to his daughter. Captain Danton listened silently and with attention. He had known the Scottish baronet a long time; knew how wealthy he was, and how passionately he loved his daughter; but for all that he had an instinctive feeling that Kate would not be happy with him.

'She has given you no reply, then?' he said, when Sir Ronald had finished.

'None, as yet; but she will shortly. Should that reply be favorable, Captain Danton, yours, I trust, will be favorable also?'

He spoke rather haughtily, and a flush deepened the florid hue of the Captain's face.

'My daughter shall please herself. If she thinks she can be happy as your wife, I have nothing to say. You spoke of Reginald Stanford a moment ago; do you know anything of his doings since he left Canada?'

'Very little. He has sold his commission and quitted the army—some say, quitted England. His family, you know, have cast him off for his dishonorable conduct.'

'I know. I received a letter from Stanford Royals some months ago, in which his father expressed his strong regret, and his disapproval of his son's conduct.

'That is all you know about him?'

'That is all. I made no inquiry—I thought the false hound beneath notice.'

Captain Danton sighed. He had loved his pretty, bright eyed, auburn-haired boy very dearly, and he could not quite forget her, in spite of her misdoing. They sauntered up and down in the grey, cold, wintry twilight, until the ringing of the dinner-bell summoned them indoors. Kate was there, very beautiful, Sir Ronald thought, in that dark, rich silk, and flashing ornaments in her golden hair.

Long that night, after the rest of the household were sleeping Kate sat musing over the past, the present, and the future. She had dismissed Eunice, and sat before the fire in a loose white dressing gown, her lovely hair falling around her, her deep, earnest eyes fixed on the red blaze. What should she do? Accept Sir Ronald Keith's offer, and achieve a brilliant place in the world, or sink into insignificance in this remote corner of the earth? It was all true what he had said: in a few days her father would be married. Another would be mistress where she had reigned—another, who might look upon her as an incumbrance and a burden. She had been content to remain here while she held the first place in her father's heart; but another held that place now, and would hold it forever. What should she do in the long days, and months, and years, that were to come? How should she drag through a useless and monotonous existence in this dull place? Every morning, earnestly she sought to do good in her mission of mercy, there were hours and hours of wretched, unspeakable fearless and desolation. When her work was ended, when the fever was over, what would become of her then? That dim vision of the cloister and veil was dim as ever in far distance. No ardent glow, no holy longing filled her heart at the thought, to tell her she had found a vocation. Her life was unspeakably empty and desolate, and must remain so for ever, if she stayed here. Other thoughts were at work, too, tempting her on. The recollection of Sir Ronald's words about her recreant lover—the thought of his insolent and cowardly boast stung her to the soul. Here was the way to revenge—the way to give back the lie direct. As Sir Ronald Keith's wife, a life of splendor and power awaited her. She thought of Glen Keith as she had seen it once, old and storied, and gray and grand, with ivy and roses clustering round its gray walls, and its waving trees casting inviting shadows. Then, too, did he not deserve some return for this long, faithful, devoted love? Other girls make marriages de raison every day, and were well content with their lot—why should she not? She could not forever remain indifferent to his fidelity and devotion. She might learn to love him by-and-by.

The fire waned and burned low; the hours of the bleak winter night were on, and 3 o'clock of a new day struck before the solitary watcher went to bed.

The Scotch baronet was not kept long in suspense. Next morning, as Miss Danton came down the stone steps, with something in a paper parcel for her pony, sick pensioners, Sir Ronald Keith joined her.

'I have passed a sleepless night,' he said, 'I shall never rest until I have your answer. When am I to have it, Kate?'

Her face turned a shade paler, otherwise there was no change, and her voice was quite firm.

'Now, if you wish.'

'And it is yes,' he cried, eagerly. 'For Heaven's sake, Kate, say it is yes!'

'It is yes; if you can take me for what I am. I don't know that I shall ever love you, but I will try. If I marry you, I will be your true and faithful wife, and your honor will be as sacred as my salvation. If you can take me, knowing this, I am yours.'

He caught her in his arms, and broke out into a torrent of passionate delight and thankfulness. She disengaged herself, cold and very pale.

'Leave me now,' she said. 'I must go to the village alone. Don't ask too much from me, Sir Ronald, or you may be disappointed.'

'Only one thing more, my darling. Your father to be married on the twenty-fourth. I am sure you will have no wish to linger in this house after that. Will you not dispense with the usual formalities and preparations, and be married on the same day?'

'Yes, yes,' she said, impatiently; 'let it be as you wish! What does it matter! Good morning.'

She walked away rapidly over the frozen snow, leaving the successful wooer to return to the house and relate his good luck.

Our Children.

Why compel them to take those vile and nauseating medicines, when Puttner's Emulsion is so palatable and nice, and produces better results than any other. Most astonishing reports are daily recorded in favor of its cures, where other preparations of the kind have failed, and then been cast aside in disgust.

FOR DELICATE WOMEN, who are suffering from Anæmia and weakness, caused from over nursing, Puttner's Emulsion is just what is required to give tone to the system, and will immediately build them up in health and strength.

Well as Ever.

Lottie Howard writes from Buffalo, N. Y. "Myself became greatly debilitated through arduous professional duties. I suffered from nausea, sick headache, and biliousness; tried Burdock Blood Bitters with the most beneficial effect. Am well as ever."

Racked by Innumerable Pangs, restless by day, sleepless at night, rising unrefreshed in the morning, without appetite and pestered by varying and perplexing symptoms, the sufferer is taken indeed a gloomy view of human existence. For him the zest of life seems gone. Heartburn, oppression at the pit of the stomach, and the attendant annoyances of of constipation and biliousness, combine to render him utterly wretched. But there is, if he will but take advantage of it, a reliable source of reliable relief from all misery. Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure is, as its name imports, a botanic preparation, free from mineral poison, and an all-sufficient remedy for indigestion in its most obstinate form. It not only enriches the blood by enabling the digestive organs to convert the food received into nutriment, but depurates it by increasing the action of the bowels and kidneys, the natural outlets for its impurities. But while it relaxes the bowels, it never does so violently and with pain, like a drastic cathartic. It aids, but never forces. Natural invigorating as well as purifying and regulating the system. It thoroughly removes those diseased humors which tend to vitiate the blood, purifies the urinary secretion, and promotes a flow of healthy bile into the natural channel, besides expelling it from the circulation. Experience has proved that this standard medicine is a thorough remedy for dyspepsia, biliousness, costiveness, kidney complaints, scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, lumbago and all impurities of the blood. Price $1.00. Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac-simile of their signature. Sold by all medicine dealers.

FACTS WORTH REMEMBERING.

The Royal has the largest surplus funds of any Fire Insurance Company in the world.

The Royal has the largest deposit with the Dominion Government of any other Insurance Company.

The conditions of the Royal's Policies are more liberal than those of other Companies doing business in Canada.

In conclusion remember that security should be the first consideration, and that it is to your interest to insure with the Company that gives the greatest security. You may better carry your own risk than entrust it where you have not absolute security.

Ayer's
Hair Vigor,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

It is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brashy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair

The Vigor is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.

Ireland's Testimonial to Lord Wolseley.

The Irish testimonial to Sir Garnet Wolseley consists of a centrepiece and adjuncts of antique Irish plate, the former being a reproduction of the famous Ardagh Cup, which will be enlarged to double the original size, standing on a plinth of ebony in the centre of the group. On the three sides of the plinth will be embossed silver representations of incidents in the career of this distinguished soldier. The fourth side will contain an inscription from the donors. There are also reproductions of two handsome loving cups of ancient type and a quaint old silver bowl, the originals of which are in Trinity College, Dublin. To these are added eight Irish dishes which are curious as they are rare. These rings were used instead of the wooden potato bowls, which in old times were placed on a corner of the table. They consist of a large circular open filagree work with various designs, such as men, animals and cottages. There to be given to Sir Garnet average about four inches in height and six in diameter.

Longevity of the Albatross.

Commodore T. S. Phelps, in the United States.

I am reminded of a circumstance which occurred in 1844, while becalmed off the mouth of the Rio de la Plata in the United States ship Boston. A fine large brown albatross was caught by means of a baited hook, and a label made of hard sole leather, marked with the ship's name cut in deep letters, was securely wired to his neck, when the bird, on being liberated, lost no time in expressing his appreciation of an unlooked for freedom by wheeling and soaring around the vessel until night hid him from view. In the spring of the year 1868 or thereabouts a merchant ship from the Eastern States arrived at San Francisco, Cal., and her captain published in the Evening Bulletin that on the voyage out, and while passing the La Plata, he caught a large brown albatross having a sole leather label wired to its neck, at, apparently, no recent date, as the letters of a name originally cut in the leather were all wore away excepting the last three, which were distinguishable as an O and an N. Accepting the natural conclusion of its being the identical bird labeled by the Boston, the circumstance possesses an interest bearing upon the probable longevity of the albatross.

Her Majesty's Yachts

From the Pall Mall Gazette.

The Admiralty have decided that the Victoria and Albert, the Queen's principal yacht, is to be thoroughly refitted and renovated. The vessel is a steam yacht of 2,470 tons, and her original cost was nearly £120,000. There would be no justification whatever for building a new yacht in the place of the Victoria and Albert, as was recently proposed, because during the last ten years she has not been used by the Queen for half as many weeks. Her sole service, indeed, has been to convey Her Majesty to Cherbourg and back on the occasions when she had visited the continent, an amount of work to which her annual cost seems monstrously out of proportion, especially when it is remembered that this is the only steam yacht (1,830 tons), always available, to say nothing of the Alberta (360 tons), and the Elfin (90 tons) The annual pay of the officers and seamen employed on these four vessels amounts to over £16,000, and last year over £8,000 was paid to workmen in Portsmouth dockyard who were employed on them; besides which there are further charges in connection with them, amounting to at least £10,000 a year, and they are altered and redecorated with startling frequency, which entails additional expenditure.

A Remedy for Burns and Scalds.

It is now many years ago, says Mr. F. Peppercorn, in the Popular Science Monthly, while engaged in some investigations as to the qualities and effects of the alkalies in inflammations of the skin, etc., that he was fortunate enough to discover that a saline lotion, or saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda in either plain water or camphorated water, if applied speedily, or as soon as possible, to a burned or scalded part, was quite effectual in immediately relieving the acute burning pain; and when the burn was only superficial or not severe, removing all pain in the course of a very short time; and having also the very great advantage of cleanliness, and, if applied at once, or preventing the usual consequences—a painful blistering of the skin, separation of the epidermis, pain perhaps, more or less of suppuration. For this purpose, all that is necessary is to cut a piece of lint, or old soft rag, or even thick blotting-paper, of a size sufficient to cover the burned or scalded parts, and to keep it constantly well wet with the sodaic lotion so as to prevent its drying. By this means, it usually happens that all pain ceases in from a quarter to half an hour, or even in much less time. When the main part of a limb, such as the hand and fore-arm or the foot and leg, has been burned, it is best, when practicable, to plunge the part at once into a jug or pail, or other convenient vessel filled with the soda lotion, and keep it there until the pain subsides; or the limb may be swathed or encircled with a surgeon's cotton bandage previously soaked in the saturated solution and kept constantly wet with it, the relief usually being immediate, provided the solution be saturated and cold. What is now usually sold as bicarbonate of soda is what he has commonly used and recommended, although this is well known to vary much in quality according to where it is manufactured; but it will be found to answer the purpose, although probably Howard's is most to be depended on, the common carbonate being too caustic.

Protection Needed.

Among the proposed changes in the tariff there is one which will not fail to give satisfaction to those interested in the manufacture of agricultural implements. The change consists in raising the present duty on these articles from 25 per cent. to a specific and ad valorem duty of 35 per cent. Up to the present the American manufacturers had a great advantage over our Canadian manufacturers of agricultural implements, inasmuch as the former had only a 25 per cent. duty to pay on their goods to be sold in Canadian markets, while the latter had to pay 10 per cent. more, or 35 per cent., to be able to compete in the American markets. The Americans, moreover, increased their advantage by having their goods for exportation systematically undervalued, so that in reality they had no more than 15 or 20 per cent. duty to pay. The only remedy for this fraud and to place our Canadian manufacturers on a level for fairer competition is to establish a specific duty equal at least to that imposed by the United States. This Sir Leonard proposes to do. It is nothing but right that our Canadian manufacturers should be enabled to supply the market in the North West, where the demand for agricultural implements is largely on the increase. The money that is to be spent on these articles should remain in Canada, for the benefit of Canadian mechanics, Canadian factories and Canadian manufacturers. If we want to build up a nation, we have got to help one another.—Montreal Post.

Labrador Lighthouse Life.

Mr. J. U. Gregory, Naval Agent at Quebec, has contributed to the New York Forest and Stream some interesting sketches of Labrador life. He says of the lighthouse keepers:

I have known a well educated man, born and brought up near Quebec, formerly a storekeeper, married to an educated woman, who accepted a situation as lighthouse keeper on the island of Anticosti, and afterwards obtained, through political influence, a good Government appointment with sufficient remuneration to enable him to bring up his family well and live comfortably, actually shed tears when he left his isolated island home, and a year afterward trying to get back to his former position; but I have also known others to go out of their minds with the dreariness and monotony of their lives. These were invariably men. Women appear to bear up better, and frequently do the most of the work, keeping the station in order, while their husbands look the picture of unhappiness. Again, there are some stations, where husband, wife and children seem to be perfectly contented, the family well educated and even accomplished in music and other refinements. They are well supplied with literature, and their conversation is free from slang so often noticeable in townbred people.

Professor Lindon, in his interesting and truthfully written papers in the Forest and Stream, mentions one of such families, that of Mr. Edwin Pope, of Anticosti, whose amiable daughters, who have never till last year left the island, would do credit to any city family. His sons are equally well fitted to appear to advantage anywhere, and Mrs. Pope was born and brought up on the island and to the best of my knowledge has never left it.

There are others in my district on the coast of Labrador who are possessed of considerable education and even refinement.

At the solitary Bird Rock Station, where the lighthouse is perched on a square rock a few hundred feet in extent, which one can reach only by being hauled up in a box by means of a crane 120 feet from the water, the keepers have been sadly tried. The first keeper there, after two years' residence, became insane from the monotony of the life. He was replaced by a very respectable man who, after having filled the situation for nine years, was one day tempted to leave his station to hunt seals on the surrounding ice, but was overtaken by a storm and perished with his son, their bodies never being recovered. His successor, one of the most able and intelligent of guardians, while firing the fog-cannon, by some means ignited a barrel of gunpowder near at hand, and with his young son and assistant was blown to atoms; yet notwithstanding these fatalities, no sooner does a vacancy occur than applications for it pour in, invariably from those possessed of all the necessary qualifications to earn a living elsewhere.

BELLEVILLE, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 4.

Tariff Points.

The speech of Mr. Thomas White, in reply to that of Mr. Paterson on the tariff, was fully up to that gentleman's reputation. It fairly bristled with points, of which we subjoin a few:

The hon. gentleman who had just spoken had tried to draw an unfair comparison between the finances in 1868 and those of 1874. A moment's reflection would satisfy anyone that no fair comparison could be drawn between these two periods. In 1868 there were only four provinces, in 1874 there were seven. In the first year the country had scarcely resolved into a settled condition after the disturbance necessarily caused by Confederation. In 1874 it was rapidly developing. But a comparison between the financial condition of the country in 1874, when the Reform Government took office, and 1879, when the Conservatives succeeded them, would result in a showing in favor of the Conservative Administration of the country's affairs. During the years of Reform Government there was a decrease of revenue by five and a half per cent., while the cost of collecting the same was increased 16½ per cent. Comparing the figures of 1879 to 1882 the result was still more gratifying. During this period the cost of collecting revenue had increased 2.34 per cent. In the Post office department the revenue had increased by 31½ per cent., while the expenditure had only increased 13¾ per cent. Then there was another test and that was the cost of transmission per letter. In 1874 four cents per letter was the cost of the Post-office service. In 1882 the cost was reduced to a little over three cents per letter (Applause.) In relation to our financial position, he had a few words to say. In 1877 our debt was seventy-five millions. In 1874 it reached one hundred and eight millions, and by 1879 thirty-four millions more had been added to it. Between 1879 and 1882, $10,671,000 more were added to it. Thus, in five years the late Government had added to the debt at the rate of seven millions per annum, while the present Government, with all the public enterprises it has carried on, had only added to the debt at the rate of a little over a million a year. (Applause.) Another important point was this. While the late Government had been obliged to add to its debt in order to meet the ordinary charges of administration, the present Government had actually spent $15,535,000 more on capital account than it had added to the debt of the country. (Applause.) Then it was important to observe that there was no immediate prospect of an increase of our debt, owing to the substitution for bonds upon which a high rate of interest had to be paid of the four per cent bonds, and to the large revenue expected from the sale of lands in the North West. The Government would no doubt be in a position to complete the enterprises now in course of construction, to improve our waterways, to remove tonnage dues, without adding one dollar to the debt of the country (Hear, hear.) He now came to the question of the National Policy, to which the last speaker, he noticed, did not offer a very strong opposition. Probably the hon. gentleman, owing to his previous statements favorable to protection, could not offer it so strong an opposition as could Sir Richard Cartwright, who always denounced it in vigorous terms. At all events, the hon. gentleman admitted there had been a great revival in trade. His statement in that respect was quite true, but he coupled it with a prediction of the commercial crash for which the Opposition so eagerly yearned. (Hear, hear.) This prediction was founded on the assumption that we were over importing, and that large importations were certain preludes to a crisis, an positive evidences of failures of protection. Now, so far as the failure of protection cry was concerned, it was interesting to note that in the United States, though a highly protected country, its imports were largest during the years of its greatest prosperity. The year 1877 was a year of depression there, and its imports then were $451,000,000. The year 1882 was a year of great prosperity, and the imports that year reached $724,000,000—(hear, hear)—so that large imports into Canada did not by any means indicate that the country was not prosperous, or that protection was a failure. Our imports were certainly much larger in 1882 than in 1878, but of what were they made up? Twelve millions of the increase was in raw material needing manufacturing. (Hear, hear.) Nine millions of the increase represented luxuries not made in Canada, the importation of which certainly indicated the improved condition of the people. Nearly two millions of it represented settlers' effects, coin, bullion, etc. All these increases were increases upon which we might be congratulated. They were also increases which in no way impaired our manufacturing power and in no way indicated that our manufacturers were not prospering. (Hear, hear.) It had been charged, though the member for Brant had not touched on the subject, that the tariff as it affected the sugar trade had reduced the revenue. He (Mr. White) would admit that there was something in this. By refining our own sugar we lost $00,000 of revenue, but the people saved more than that in getting the sugar at a lower rate than would have been possible under the Cartwright tariff. The total reduction in the price to the consumer was equal to a saving of $670,000 to the country. (Applause.) So far as the tariff dealt with tea, it gave to Canadian merchants the distributing trade in that article and encouraged direct trade with the countries of production. The effect upon our trade in cotton was to incres e the trade with Great Britain, to decrease the trade with the United States and to place our own cotton manufacturers in a good position. In regard to woollens, the same conditions existed. In '78 the importation of woollen goods from the United States was $383,000, while in '81 it was but $164,000. In '78 the importation of such goods from Great Britain was $7,267,000, while in '82 it increased to $8,262,000 under our disloyal tariff, as it was termed by the Opposition. Our manufactures in that line were also prospering, for while we imported six million pounds of raw wool in 1878, we imported nearly ten millions in 1882. Nor were our farmers injured by these large importations of raw wool, for of the combing wools of the class grow in Canada we only imported 36,000 pounds. One of the productions made against the National Policy was that it would operate against the production of Canadian barley. The result showed that those prophecies were false, for in 1879 the exports of barley amounted to upwards of 11,000,000 lbs, and in 1882 to 48,000,000 lbs. What had been the effect of the National Policy on our relations with other countries? During the years the Mackenzie Government was in power there was a decrease in imports from Great Britain to the extent of thirty-six million, while in imports from the United States there was an increase of one million. During the period from 1878 to 1882, when the National Policy was in force, the imports from Great Britain had increased by upwards of thirteen millions, while there was a slight decrease in those from the United States, thus showing that while under the policy of hon. gentlemen opposite the trade with England had gradually fallen off, and that with the United States had increased, under the wise administration of the present Government the reverse was the case. Whatever might be said about the balance of trade at the present moment, the tendency of this policy must be to bring nearer together the imports and exports, and ultimately place the latter in excess. This had been the result in the United States and a similar policy and the process of development, and whether or not the theory as to balance of trade was correct, there was no doubt that the country was more prosperous, and had wealth, and was able and more than able, to pay for its imports by its exports. (Applause.) Complaint had been made by the hon. gentleman who had just spoken of the hardships entailed on the people of the North West by the Government's policy. An examination of figures would show that this complaint was groundless. In 1878 the average duty paid on goods imported into Manitoba was 19 per cent., in 1882 it was 19½ per cent., so that this enormous tariff had only cost the people of that country ½ per cent. The Conservative party have reason to look upon the last four years with considerable pride.

Editorial Brevities.

The placing of a duty on steel is a step that will tend strongly towards encouraging the manufacture of the article in Canada. Our native ores are especially adapted to that purpose, hence the duty on steel, as well as the bonus on iron, is calculated to secure the development of the iron mines in this and adjoining counties.

The following are the specific duties levied upon agricultural implements:—Mowing machines, specific, $10, ad valorem, and 20 per cent; self binders, $40 and 30 per cent; harvesters, without binders, $25 and 20 per cent; binding attachments, $15 and 20 per cent; reapers $18 and 20 per cent; sulky ploughs, $10 and 20 per cent; walking ploughs, $2 and 20 per cent; parts of ploughs, two cents per pound and 20 per cent; harrows, $3 and 20 per cent; scythes, $1.50 per dozen and 20 per cent; horse hay rakes, $5 and 20 per cent; garden rakes, 50c per dozen and 10 per cent; grain seed drills, $7 and 20 per cent; spades and shovels, $1.20 per dozen and 20 per cent; hoes of all kinds, 80c per dozen and 15 per cent; hay and straw forks, 40c per dozen and 20 per cent; manure and spading forks, $1 per dozen and 20 per cent.

Thurlow Circuit

The Lord has been graciously reviving His work at the 3rd concession appointment on this Circuit. Believers have been edified, wanderers reclaimed, sinners convicted, and the whole community impressed for good.

On Friday night last, a large company of young and old from this neighborhood took possession of the Methodist parsonage at Carlton, and after a bountiful tea, and a few hours spent in pleasant and profitable intercourse, the friends were requested to give attention while two kindly worded addresses were read to their pastors, Rev. S. McCauley and H. F. Ostrom. The addresses were accompanied with a purse for each. May this kind people never weary in spiritual well-doing. S. McC.

Obituary.

Isabella Corry died at the residence of her son near Tweed, in the 94th year of her age. She was born about three years before the death of the founder of Methodism, joined that Church when about 14 years of age, and continued until the time of her death a consistent and approved member, a period of about 80 years. Her husband died when above 80, and had been a member of the Church over sixty years. Her sister, Jane Gordon (mother of John, Robert, and Rev. A. Gordon), who died at the age of 84, had been a constant member of the same Church about 70 years, and her youngest sister, Mary Montgomery, died at the age of 82, her years of membership numbered about 70, and William Gordon, uncle to R. Gordon, died at the advanced age of 92. His days of membership with the same Church were about 75 years. They all united in the same society near Maguirsbridge, County Fermanagh, Ireland, and had listened to Ussely Graham, and the early Methodist Missionaries. For a time they were widely separated, but before the close of their pilgrimage they all again united in the Lodge Room Society, 11th concession of Hungerford. Is not the record a good one?

Observers of the Quaker Case

To the Editor of the Intelligencer.

There has been great interest taken by all classes in the troubles of the Orthodox Friends. They have ever been a people respected for their truthfulness and honesty; for their strict and plain manner of living, for their integrity, zeal and fidelity to their God. And we felt sorry for them when they were brought into trouble by those teachers of sedition who wanted to change the doctrines of the Church into a heresy; and their manner of worship into confusion. But according to the Chancellor's decision we think that those teachers and all who have seceded from the body, had better repent of their heresy, go back and knock at the east gate of Quaker Eden and the Old Friends will let them in.

Then live in fellowship and love like Christian brethren, while in time and in eternity, the paradise of God will be their home.

A Magnificent Race

THREE THOUSAND MILES ACROSS THE OCEAN, AND NEVER LOST SIGHT OF ONE ANOTHER.

BOSTON, April 3.—On march 12th, the steamer Istrian, of the Leland line, started from Liverpool for Boston. Just an hour after she left the dock, the steamer Kansas, of the Warren line, steamed out of the same harbor, and bound to the same destination. The two ships pursued courses so nearly identical, that during the whole passage they never lost sight of each other.

The weather was magnificent throughout the voyage, a slight fall of snow at one time being the only blemish. Early in the trip the Kansas overtook and passed her rival, then, shortly after, their positions were reversed, and so on, one ship forging ahead to day, the other taking the lead to-morrow. Finally, after traversing 3,000 miles, the race ended by the Istrian reaching her dock at one o'clock in Charlestown to day, and the Kansas followed suit at East Boston. The officers and crews of both steamers were intensely interested in the race, which was a genuine one. A similar case probably never occurred before.

—The steamer Hastings has not been chartered to run on the Deseronto and Ogdensburg route.

—The Canada Pacific Railway stations between Swift Current Creek and Maple Creek have been named: Leven, Goose Lake, Antelope, Gull Lake, Cypress, Sidewood, Crane Lake, Colley (after the late Chief Engineer James) and Maple Creek.

Beware of Imitations.

Since Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has become so well known, a number of unprincipled persons have been endeavoring to palm off Electron and Electric Oil for the genuine DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. Beware of these similar named articles. If their originators had any faith in the healing properties of their own medicines they would have honored them by giving them name of their own, and not try to sell them the reputation of another; but as they know their preparations have no merit, they resort to the most unprincipled means of selling them by getting a name as near as possible to Eclectric. We therefore ask the public when purchasing to see that the name DR. THOMAS' Eclectric Oil is on the front of the wrapper, and the signature of NORTHROP & LYMAN, the proprietors for Canada on the back.

The police atmosphere remains undisturbed.

The train due at noon was over an hour behind time to-day.

The river has opened in a number of places near the shore.

Ice dealers have already handed in their orders for linen dusters.

Two tramps were provided for at the police station last night.

The street cars were brought out yesterday afternoon for the first time this season.

Mr. Job Lingham shipped a pair of carriage horses to Chicago and a car of cattle to Montreal, to-day.

The County Gaol was visited by Inspector Christie yesterday and found in excellent order. It now has 22 inmates; 18 men and four women.

All patrons of amusements should bear in mind that Pat Rooney and his talented company will appear in the Metropolitan Hall here to-morrow night.

A man named Jose had one of his legs broken, this afternoon, while at Hayden's Corners. Dr. Willson went out this afternoon to attend to the sufferer.

The date of the lottery in connection with the foundation of the British Museum, should have read 1754 instead of 1874, as printed in "Standard's" communication yesterday.

A young daughter of John Wallace when returning home from school yesterday, essayed to cross the ice below the lower bridge and broke through, sinking to her arm pits. She was easily rescued.

Albert College will close the Hilary term this evening, with the annual Matriculants' Exhibition in the Chapel, commencing at 7½ o'clock. The small fee of ten cents will be charged for admission.

The following are the particulars of the death of young Henry Dame, which was recorded in yesterday's issue: The child had gone out of the house by the rear door and had lifted the cover from the well. In doing so it is thought that he fell in. As soon as he was missed, which was about ten minutes afterwards, search was at once instituted and his inanimate body was found in the well. Dr. Farley was summoned but the child was beyond the possibilities of medical assistance. He was three years and nine months old.

In the Police Court to-day, Mr. Isham, an engineer of Madoc, charged Mr. Ryan, one of the contractors of the Toronto and Ottawa Railway, with having assaulted him in Madoc, on the 29th. The defendant was fined $2 and costs, the whole amounting to $12 65.

The Prince Edward Spring Assizes were commenced on Tuesday before Mr. Justice Armour, the Crown being represented by Mr. Clute, of Belleville. The civil business is light, only four cases, and but three criminal ones of a trifling nature. The court will likely close on Thursday.

The evangelistic meetings in the Bethel Hall this week have been of a very interesting character and very encouraging to those who have the work in hand. As the hall will only accommodate about two hundred, and is filled to its utmost capacity every night, it is advisable for those who can, to get there at a quarter to eight sharp.

Lazier & Meyes are now showing one of the finest stocks in their line that has yet been presented to the notice of the public. In addition to their varied stock of furs, they have just received a large invoice of hard and soft felt hats of the most fashionable styles, and in addition they are showing a nice selection of umbrellas and gloves. Their goods will be found as represented, and intending purchasers should not fail to give them a call.

The Street Surveyor has but little fear of a flood, for the reason that, the river being clear of anchor ice, there is a strong current, which has worn away the ice so quickly that it is now not more than eight inces thick on the average. The ice is melting away from the shores in places, and men are at work opening a channel from below the lower bridge to a point some distance further down stream, where the stream has made an opening for itself.

Weather Probabilities—Toronto, April 4.—Lakes, moderate to fresh winds, mostly south and southeast, fair to cloudy milder weather, with light rain in some localities.

The Grand Junction Railway dock has been raised 18 inches, and has been materially strengthened. It is expected that the repairs will be finished this week, and the rails will then be relaid.

Let there be no mistake about this, that the Myrtle Navy tobacco is manufactured from the very finest Virginia leaf. No higher quality of leaf can be purchased for any tobacco made. It is selected with the very greatest care, and treated with the most approved processes for preserving the flavor of the tobacco.

MORNING DESPATCHES.

AMERICAN.

DEATH OF A PHILANTHROPIST.

New York, April 4.—Peter Cooper died at half-past three this morning, aged 92.

A CLERGYMAN'S FALL.

Troy, April 4th.—Rev. George Spencer, in charge of the Methodist Church at Corinth and South Corinth, Saratoga Co., has been expelled from the ministry and has left town. He and his sister-in-law are accused of outrageous conduct.

CRAZED BY A REVIVAL.

Shenandoah, Pa., April 4.—Mrs. Anna Wagner has become a maniac in consequence of attending religious revival meetings.

A DREAM REALIZED.

Titusville, Pa., April 4.—The body of John Pierce, drowned on February fourth, was found by the Rev. Mr. Hoover yesterday. Mr. Hoover is a noted Divine in the Methodist Church at Sunville, and had revealed to him through a dream the location of the corpse.

LOCOMOTIVES DESTROYED.

Corning, Ky., April 4.—The round house of the Fall Brook Coal Co., was burned last evening. It contained five fifty ton engines and four small ones. Loss, $75,000.

SMALL-POX IN NASHVILLE.

Nashville, Tenn., April 4.—The number of small-pox cases is increasing and creating a great deal of alarm among the inhabitants of the city and country.

FATAL QUARREL

Chattanooga, April 4.—John Mellville and Sidney Wiley quarrelled on account of the latter's wife. Wiley attempted to shoot Mellville, when the woman interfered. In the scuffle the pistol discharged and Wiley was fatally wounded.

THE IRISH MURDER TRIALS.

Dublin, April 4.—The trial of the prisoners charged with the Phœnix Park murders and other crimes, which it was expected would begin on Tuesday next, will be postponed for a few days, owing to the fact that sufficient funds have not been raised for the defence of the prisoners. It is the intention of the accused to request in court that they be furnished with counsel.

Glasgow, April 4.—Arrived the State of Indiana.

Honest and Liberal.

When the Hops in each bottle of Hop Bitters (at the present price, $1.25 per lb.) cost more than a bottle is sold for, besides the other costly medicines, and the quality and price are kept the same, we think it is honest and liberal in the proprietors, and no one should complain, or buy or use worthless stuff, or cheating bogus imitations because the price is less.

AFTERNOON DESPATCHES

AN OVERWORKED NEWSPAPER MAN'S SUICIDE.

New York, April 4.—Nathan A. Morse, business Manager of the Daily News, shot and killed himself this morning in the office in the Park Row building His health was impaired by over work and for some time he has been very sick. Recently sleeplessness added to his troubles. It is supposed his reason gave way. He had no family nor penury troubles as far as known.

THE QUEEN'S AILMENT.

London, April 4.—The recovery of the Queen is less rapid than the physicians expected. While the injury to the knee is not serious, it is feared that it may have the effect of causing her to lose her daily outdoor exercise. It is thought that complete rest will soon reduce the inflammation of the limb.

IRISH AFFAIRS

Dublin, April 4.—A detective from here, who has been operating in France, has been recalled.

Michael Davitt has from prison written a vigorous letter to the young Ireland Society of Glasgow. He says the dynamite policy can only have the effect of exasperating the English democracy. He declares it would be far better to work and wait another 20 years than play into the hands of Ireland's enemies, by giving rein to despair and revenge.

THEATRE ON FIRE.

Berlin, April 4.—The National theatre is burning. It is feared that it and other buildings will be destroyed. The fire department, never remarkably efficient in cases of large fires, seem wholly unable to cope with the flames.

Later.—The theatre is completely destroyed, with its contents. No loss of life, nobody injured. No entertainment was being given. Origin of the fire unknown. The damage to surrounding buildings was comparatively small.

NOTHING FOR PARNELL.

Limerick, April 4.—At a public meeting yesterday for the purpose of giving Parnell a testimonial proved a fiasco. Only forty persons subscribed to the projected fund.

Queenstown, April 4.—Arrived the Italy.

HOW PETER COOPER DIED.

New York, April 4.—About two o'clock this morning Mr. Cooper called his son, Ex-mayor Cooper, and Mrs. Abram Hewett, his daughter, and her family to his bed side, saying that he knew he had not long to live and that they must become reconciled to this fact. His death followed at 3 a. m. He remained conscious to the last and made several remarks with regard to family affairs. Many friends of the family and prominent citizens called at the house this morning and expressed their sympathy.

RACING IN ENGLAND.

London, April 4.—The race for the Great Northamptonshire stakes to-day Glenluce won; Sun of York 2nd, and Glider 3rd. There were six starters.

Great Triumph—Puttner's Emulsion Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites, Etc.,

by the many wonderful cures it has effected, and the great reputation it has with the medical profession, stands to-day far ahead and the demand greater than any other preparation known, for the cure of consumption, bronchitis, asthma, coughs, influenza, hoarseness, loss of voice, dyspepsia, scrofula, wasting diseases of children, nervous prostration, paralysis, brain worry, and many other diseases of the Lungs, Blood and Nervous System.

CHAPTER XIX.

So once more Miss Danton was "engaged," once more preparations for a double wedding went on; once more her wedding day was named.

There was very little noise made about the matter this time. Father Francis and Doctor Danton were almost the only two outside the household who knew anything about it, and somehow these were the very two Kate herself wished most to keep it from.

She was ashamed of her mercenary marriage; in spite of herself she despised herself for it, and she felt they must despise her for it too. She shrank away guiltily under the clear, steadfast, searching gaze of Father Francis, feeling how fine she must have fallen in his estimation. She respected and esteemed the priest and the Doctor so much, that it was humiliating to lose their respect by her own voluntary act. But it was too late to draw back, even if she wished it; her fetters were forged—she was bound beyond recall.

Sir Ronald Keith had got the desire of his heart—Kate Danton was his promised wife, and yet he was not quite happy. Are we ever quite happy, I wonder, when we attain the end for which we have sighed and longed, perhaps for years? Our imagination is so very apt to paint that desire of our heart in rainbow hues, and we are so very apt to find it, when it comes, old dull gray, after all.

Sir Ronald loved his beautiful and queenly affianced with a changeless devotion nothing could alter. He had thought her promise to marry him would satisfy him perfectly; but he had that promise, and he was not satisfied. He wanted something more—he wanted love in return, although he knew she did not love him; and he was dissatisfied. It is not exactly pleasant, perhaps, to find the woman you love and are about to marry as cold as an iceberg—to see her shrink at your approach, and avoid you on all possible occasions. It is rather hard, no doubt, to put up with the loosest touch of cold fingers for the slightest caress, and a heavy sigh in answer to your most loving speeches.

Sir Ronald had promised to be content without love; but he was not, and was baffled and offended, and savagely jealous of Reginald Stanford, and all the hated past.

So the baronet's wooing was on the whole rather gloomy, and depressing to the spirits, even of the lookers-on; and Kate was failing away once more to a pale, listless shadow, and Sir Ronald was in a state of perpetual sullenness.

But the bridal cakes and bridal dresses were making, and the December days were slipping by, one by one, bringing the fated time near. Miss Danton still obstinately and unwearily continued her mission of love. No weather kept her indoors, no pleadings of her future husband were strong enough to make her give up one visit for his pleasure or accommodation.

"Let me alone, Sir Ronald Keith,' she would answer, wearily, and a little impatiently; 'it will not be for long. Let me alone!"

The fever that had swept off so many was slowly dying out. The sick ones were not so bad or so many now, but that Miss Danton with a safe conscience might have given them up; but she would not. She never wanted to be alone—she who had been so fond of solitude a few months ago. She was afraid of herself—afraid to think—afraid of that dim future that was drawing so very near. Every feeling of heart and soul revolted at the thought of that loveless marriage—the profanation of herself seemed more than she could bear.

"I shall turn desperate at the very altar!" she thought, with something like despair. "I can't marry him—I can't! It seems me wild to think of. What a wretch I am! What a weak, miserable, cowardly wretch, not to be able to face the fate I have chosen for myself! I don't know what to do, and I have no one to consult—no one but Father Francis, and I am afraid to speak to him. I don't love him; I loathe the thought of marrying him; but it is too late to draw back. If one could only die and end it all!"

Her arm lay across the window-sill; her head drooped and fell on it now, with a heavy sigh. She was unspeakably miserable, and lonely, and desolate; she was going to seal her misery for life by a loveless marriage, which her soul abhorred, and she had no power to draw back. She was like a rudderless ship, drifting without helm or compass among shoals and quicksands—drifting helplessly to ruin.

"If I dared only ask Father Francis, he would tell me what to do,' she thought, despondingly; 'he is so wise and good, and knows what is best for every one. He would tell me how to do what is right, and I want to do what is right if I can. But I have neglected, and avoided, and prevaricated with him so long that I have no right to trouble him now. And I know he would tell me I am doing wrong; I have read it in his face; and how can I do right?"

She sat thinking drearily, her face lying on her arm. It was the afternoon of the 14th—ten days more, and it would, indeed, be too late. The nearer the marriage approached, the more abhorrent it grew. The waving trees of Glen Keith cast inviting shadows no longer. It was all darkness and desolation. Sir Ronald's moody, angry face frightened and distressed her—it was natural, she supposed. She did not behave well, but he knew she did not care for him; she had told him so, honestly and plainly; and if he looked like that before marriage, how would he look after? She was unutterably wretched, poor child; and a resentful consciousness that would give her no rest did not add to her comfort.

She sat there for a long time, her face hidden on her arm quite still. The short, wintry afternoon was wearing; the cold, yellow sun hung low in the pale western sky, and the evening wind was sighing mournfully amid the trees when she rose up. She looked pale but resolved; and she dressed herself for a walk, with a veil over her face, and slowly descended the stairs.

As she opened the house door, Sir Ronald came out of the drawing room, not looking too well pleased at having been deserted all the afternoon.

"Are you going out?" he asked.

"Yes."

"Where?"

"Up the village."

"Always up the village!" he exclaimed, impatiently; "and always alone. May I not go with you?" It is growing late!"

"There is no occasion,' she replied, looking at him proudly. "I need no protector in St. Cevix."

She opened the door and went out, and walked rapidly down the bleak avenue to the gates. The authoritative tone of the baronet stung her proud spirit to the quick.

"What right has he to talk to me like that?' she thought, angrily. 'If I loved him, I would not endure it; I don't love him, and I won't endure it."

Her eyes flashed as she walked along, lightly and rapidly, holding her haughty head very erect. Greetings met her on every hand as she passed through the village. She never paused until she reached the church, and stood by the entrance gate of the little garden in front of the Cure's house. There she paused irresolute. How peaceful it was—what a holy hush seemed to linger round the place! All her courage left her, and she stood as timid and fluttering as any school girl. While she hesitated, the door opened, and Father Francis stood looking at her.

"Come in, Miss Danton,' he said. 'You look as if you were almost afraid."

She passed the little gate and went up the path, looking strangely downcast and troubled. Father Francis held out his hand with a smile.

"I thought you would come to see me before you left Canada,' he said, 'although you seem to have rather forgotten your old friend of late. Come in.'

"Are you alone?' Kate asked, following him into the little parlor.

"Quite alone. The Cure has gone two miles off on a sick call. And how are the good people of Danton Hall?"

"Very well,' Kate answered, taking a seat by the window and looking out at the pale, yellow sunset.

Why compel them to take those vile and nauseating medicines, when Puttner's Emulsion is so palatable and nice, and produces better results than any other. Most astonishing reports are daily recorded in favor of its cures, where other preparations of the kind have failed, and thus been cast aside in disgust.

FOR DELICATE WOMEN, who are suffering from Anæmia and weakness, caused from over-nursing, Puttner's Emulsion is just what is required to give tone to the system, and will immediately build them up in health and strength.

"Why should a man whose blood is warm within Sit like his grandsire cut in alabaster?"
Or let his hair grow rusty, scant and thin,
When "Excelsior Restorer" will make it grow the faster.

For Sale by all Druggists.

Would you avoid the Biliary complaints incidental to spring and summer? Cleanse the system with Burdock Blood Bitters. It regulates the Liver, Bowels, Kidneys and Blood, and is the greatest tonic in the world. Trial bottles 10 cents.

Hacked by Innumerable Pangs, restless by day, sleepless at night, rising unrefreshed in the morning, without appetite and pestered with nausea, constipation, perplexing dyspepsia, and all-sufficient remedy for indigestion in its most obstinate form. It not only enriches the blood by assisting the digestive organs to convert the food received into nutriment, but depurates it by increasing the action of the bowels and kidneys, the natural outlets for its impurities. But while it relaxes the bowels, it never does so violently and with pain, like a drastic cathartic. It aids, but never forces. Native, invigorating as well as purifying and regulating the system. It thoroughly removes those diseased humors which tend to vitiate the blood, purifies the urinary secretion, and promotes a flow of healthy bile into the natural channel, besides expelling it from the circulation. Experience has proved that this standard medicine is a thorough remedy for dyspepsia, biliousness, costiveness, kidney complaints, scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, blotches and all impurities of the blood. Price $1.00. Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac-simile of their signature. Sold by all medicine dealers

FOR THE
KIDNEYS, LIVER AND URINARY ORGANS.
THE BEST BLOOD PURIFIER.

There is only one way by which any disease can be cured, and that is by removing the cause—whatever it may be. The great medical authorities of the day declare that nearly every disease is caused by deranged kidneys or liver. To restore these, therefore, is the only way by which health can be secured. Here is where WARNER'S SAFE CURE has achieved its great reputation. It acts directly upon the kidneys and liver and by placing them in a healthy condition drives disease and pain from the system. For all Kidney, Liver and Urinary troubles; for the distressing disorders of women; for Malaria, and physical troubles generally, this great remedy has no equal. Beware of impostors, imitations and concoctions said to be just as good.

For Diabetes ask for WARNER'S SAFE DIABETES CURE.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

It is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often, though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brashy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The Vigor cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair

The Vigor is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.

Daily Intelligencer. Correspondence.

Whilst correspondents will be accorded space for the expression of their ideas on topics of public interest, it must be in all cases understood that the views so expressed are simply those of the correspondents themselves.

Manufactures.

To the Editor of the Intelligencer.

Mr. Editor,—Will you allow me, through the medium of your paper, to express my views on the necessity and benefits of establishing manufactures in our city?

The necessity is so obvious that it scarcely requires to be mentioned, much more to be argued, therefore I will take it for granted, and pass on to the next question, "the means of establishing."

The question then is, how are they established in other places? By bonuses, and remission of taxes is heavily indicted for. I fancy I hear persons say, such systems are bad. I agree with them, but heavy debts are also bad.

But why should such a bad system be so generally adopted? The reply is because heavy indebtedness and excessive taxation are quire something to counterbalance the advantages which lightly taxed places offer to manufacturers, and the above mentioned system appears to have been the most successful one.

That we have the disease—if it may be so called—of relative heavy indebtedness and high taxation, I think no one will deny; therefore I hope the remedy will be applied with vigor, so that relief may be soon obtained. Persons may ask, To what extent would you apply the remedy? and to them I say I would remit all taxes for the present on all lands, premises, and machinery necessarily used in foundries, machine shops, cabinet shops, axe and tool factories, woollen factories, carriage factories, knitting factories, and other businesses exporting $5,000 worth of goods manufactured by them and sold outside of the county, and all other manufacturing businesses not now in operation in the city.

"Again, I hear some real property holder say,—Then you would place the burden on the class of property which I hold. To my fellow property holder I say,—Our houses are not now rented at a fair return for capital invested in building them, and our vacant lands are unsalable and worse than useless; and these misfortunes can only be remedied by obtaining a larger population, thereby creating a demand. If we can increase the number of our factories, we shall certainly enlarge the population; the increased population will make a demand for houses; and the consequence of which will be, fair rents and a market for our vacant lands, for building, and more ratepayers to share our tax burdens, so that our taxes will be but slightly if at all increased upon real estate. In my opinion, $3,000 would cover all the rates for new factories at the present time, and this sum could be easily saved by economy in our Schools, Lighting expenses, Police expenses, Fire Department, &c. A comparison between the years 1873 and 1881 in some of our expenditures will be interesting. If we take the year 1873, because it was a year of great prosperity in the business of the town, and the population was about the same as at present.

Lighting	$2,155 10	$4,935 71
Fire Department	2,212 16	5,803 70
Indigent	1,323 24	3,088 85
Police	3,453 75	7,303 05
Schools	10,549 66	13,792 00
	$19,993 91	$31,922 51

A difference of nearly $12,000 in these five departments. If our City Fathers will but apply the pruning knife to those and some other branches of expenditure, we can have our factories freed from taxes without any extra burdens being placed on the other ratepayers.

Before closing, I would say to new comers, they need not be afraid of the present taxation, which is say 19 mills on the dollar, as the same is not going to help us in Town, as it causes houses, stores, and vacant lands are not worth and consequently not valued so high by one half, as in the City.

If our property was assessed at Toronto valuation, our rate would not exceed ten mills on the dollar, instead of nineteen, as at present, besides which, you can rent for $200 per annum in Belleville would bring over $400 in Toronto.

Trusting that our City Fathers will act on this suggestion with as little delay as possible, and lay a By-law before the ratepayers for their approval, and that they, the ratepayers, may confirm it by their votes is the wish of a Property Holder.

Progress of the Telephone.

The development of the telephone system has been almost as silent and little noticed as it is extraordinary. It is but some half dozen years since it has been in pratical existence, but statistics recently published in France relating to the telephonic system throughout the world give some idea of its growth. The statistics are not necessarily somewhat incomplete as regards small and distant places, but the value of the main results is not thereby much impaired. It is in the United States, of course, where telephony is less encumbered by hampering legislation than in Europe, that the development has been greatest, New York city alone having 3,000 subs.; Chicago, 2728; Cincinnati, 1880; Boston, 1325; San Francisco, 1300, etc. There are in the United States more than 100,000 subscribers, and small towns and cities with populations less than 1000 have yet 30 to 56 telephonic subscribers, some even more. Canada adds to this a very sensible increase.

As regards the absolute number of subscribers Paris comes first first after New York and Chicago; it had on October 1 no fewer than 2,400 subscribers, while London had only 1,600; Amsterdam, 700; Stockholm, 672; Vienna 600; Berlin, 581; Brussels, 450; Turin, 410; Copenhagen, 400; St. Petersburg, 318; Alexandria, 300; and Mexico 300; while the annual subscription is 600 francs in Paris, 500 francs in London, and 400 francs in the provincial towns in France, it descends to 300 francs and 200 francs in Belgium, 135 francs and 130 francs in Italy and only 120 francs in Switzerland. A calculation of the ratio of the number of subscribers to that of inhabitants for each town reveals a goodly number of small towns in the United States where there is a telephone for every twenty inhabitants; in Chicago the proportion is about one in 200; in New York, one in 600; in Brussels, one in 800; in Paris one in about 1,000; in Berlin, one in 2,000; in London, one in 3,000; and in St. Petersburg only one in 4,000.

By the above it will be seen that England has been very backward in availing herself of the advantages offered by this very extraordinary invention. This is due, however, less to a lack of appreciation of its great merits than to the fact that the Government has hitherto thrown every possible impediment in the way of its development. It is understood, however, that this antagonism has now ceased, as the next annual statistics are showing as far as Great Britain is concerned.

Sweet-Potato Culture.

Preparing the Ground.—Do not be in too great haste to set sweet-potatoes in the field, for the plant is a native of a warm climate, and a cold, wet spell is a serious drawback. Excessively rich soil should be avoided, as tending too much to vine. Make the ground thoroughly fine, then with a two horse plough, set as deep as it will run, throw up the ridge as large and high as you can possibly make it with two furrows. Strive to keep the ridges as close together as possible; but the centres be a trifle less than four feet apart. Let the horse follow the plough, dressing up the ridges and cracking an occasional clod. Do no spend very much time hoeing. Take care not to make more ridges than there are plants to fill, as freshly ploughed ground is more moist and better for the plants than dry.

Planting.—Leave the plants in the bed as long as convenient before taking out, they are ready to pull. Do this by placing one hand on the ground around the plant, then draw slowly with the other, taking care not to pull up the potato; if a small piece of the latter comes on the shoot, all the better. Keep the tops one way, and when several handfuls are collected, dip the roots in water and place in a basket in the shade, and sprinkle the tops slightly, to protect from the sun. Let a boy drop them along the row about fifteen inches apart. The setter then follows with a trowel, thrusts it into the ridge up to the handle at an angel of nearly 45°, raises the handle, and with the other hand slips a plant under the trowel, then draws the latter, and lets the earth fall as it will. Set the plant as far in the ground as its length will allow, generally leaving about three leaves out. If the plants are long, all the better; set them deep, and they will root at each leaf.

Pour into the hole around the plant about half a pint of water; unless the ground is very dry, this will be sufficient. After the water has soaked from sight, with the hand fill the hole, taking care to cover up all traces of the water, to prevent the ground baking. Choose the time of planting just before a rain, if possible, to save watering; but if the clouds fail to water, you must not neglect the watering pot. Unless a severe drouth follows soon after setting, one watering will be sufficient.—American Agriculturist for April.

A Good Medicine.—Mr. J. Wyatt, of Brookingham, N.C., has a little boy, five years old, who has been suffering with a skin disease, breaking out all over, ever since he was born. BELLEVILLE, THURSDAY, APRIL 5.

The Late Epidemic at the Asylum.

A second outbreak of typhoid fever among the inmates of the Deaf and Dumb Asylum has been traced to the same source which gave origin to the former one, viz., the impurity of the water furnished by pumping from the Bay of Quinte. At the period of the first epidemic, the pipe through which the supply was drawn was in too close proximity to the exit of the sewer, which conducted the drainage of the establishment to the bay, and it was supposed that all danger from that source of contamination would be obviated for the future. This anticipation, however, has proved futile. Either from the current of the bay having been interrupted by the ice, which the steady cold weather has caused to be formed of an unusual thickness, or from that current being permanently deflected to the south shore by the intervention of Gillum's Point, or more likely by the combined effect of both causes, the comparatively shallow water whence the Asylum draws its supply, is retained in a stagnant state, and the germs of the various ferments which, when taken into the human system, occasion typoid, diphtheria, dysentery, and the whole deadly range of zymotic diseases, instead of being carried away and distributed through the whole extent of the bay, are left to fester and multiply until they get an opportunity to display their deadly influences.

The question to consider, in the face of these adverse circumstances, is how and from what source to obtain a sufficient quantity of water, that shall be free from the dangerous elements which produce such injurious effects. The answer to this question involves three main considerations: first, the quality of the water; second, its quantity; and third, the cost of bringing it to the Asylum. There are also three ways in which the requisite supply may be obtained: first, by conducting it in pipes from some natural source or spring; second, by a deep boring, or what is known as an "artesian well"; third, by extending the present pipe so far into the bay as to pass beyond the limit of the shallow and stagnant water of the eddy, and draw from the purer water of the main channel, at a depth of 15 to 18 feet or more.

The first conditions of quality and quantity would be thoroughly secured by bringing the water from the Oak Hill Pond, or Somerset Lake, as it is sometimes called, a natural reservoir of some two hundred acres in extent, with a depth over a large portion of its area of thirty-five feet. The water which it contains is of an exceptional degree of purity, containing a mere trace of either mineral or organic matter, while the supply, guaranteed by 30 inches of annual rainfall, is practically inexhaustible, and its elevation, 400 feet above the level of the Asylum, would give a pressure of over 100 pounds to the square inch at the roof of the building. In regard to the third condition, that of expense, the distance from the pond to the point of delivery, somewhere about ten miles, would seem to put it out of the pale of a reasonable outlay.

It might be advisable, however, to inquire whether some more accessible source might be found among the numerous springs and creeks of the Township of Sidney, from which a sufficient quantity of pure water might be drawn for ordinary purposes, and to supply a few hydrants for drinking, while that which was needed for washing, scouring, and general cleaning, flooding drains, &c., may still be pumped from the Bay.

The second alternative, viz., the sinking of an artesian well, is now to be considered. This mode of obtaining the most precious of liquids has been agitated in connection with the water supply of Belleville, a matter which will have to be taken into serious consideration by her citizens very soon, especially if they succeed in localizing the manufacture of iron; but the opinions of some of our most prominent geologists, including Mr. Selwyn, the Director of the Geological Survey, being decidedly unfavorable to the probability of obtaining the desired result from that operation, the majority of the City Council have been unwilling to take the risk of expending the necessary sum on so dubious a result. As, however, an amount which would form a formidable item in the city accounts would be of but little consequence to the Government of Ontario, and as there is a possibility of success, which would settle the question for all time both for the asylum and for the city, it would, we think, be well that the experiment should be tried. Even if the attempt should fail, the money would not be altogether thrown away, as it would be in the interest of Geological Science to ascertain beyond the possibility of a doubt of what materials the strata which form the framework of our land are composed so far down as the boring tool penetrates.

Whether either of the other methods be adopted or not, the third, namely the extension of the present supply pipe ought, as a matter of necessity, to be put into execution at once, by making such an addition to its length as may reach the main deep water channel, through which a current of about a mile an hour sets in the ordinary summer state of the bay. This extension, which will require probably from 200 to 400 yards of pipe, should be laid in a S. S. W. direction, so as to take its supply from above, that is to the westward of the opening of the sewer, thus cutting off all possibility of contamination from the drainage of the asylum. If the water thus obtained were (for drinking) passed through a cistern-filter, charged with spongy iron and animal charcoal, we believe it would be much safer than most of the water which is used by the inhabitants of Belleville. But this, although it would undoubtedly remove one fertile source of contagion, ought by no means to be accepted as a final remedial measure; for if an epidemic should occur at Trenton, or any of the villages which drain into the Trent River, it is quite likely that the disease-germs would be distributed throughout the waters of the bay in sufficient numbers to render them dangerous, and no amount of filtration will thoroughly eliminate these poisonous organisms. If used at all, it ought to be used in conjunction with a supplementary supply from some safer source. We would like to see the artesian experiment tried first. Should it fail, and the utilization of the Oak Hill pond be deemed too costly, a properly conducted inquiry would no doubt develop other more accessible localities from which an ample supply might be had to use in connection with that pumped from the bay. For instance, we have been informed that on lot 26 in the 6th concession of Sidney, there is a spring creek of considerable volume and great purity; and that on the farm of Mr. David Roblin, in the 3rd concession, there are springs which would afford an ample and permanent supply, and no doubt further research would develop others. In conclusion, we have only to say to those concerned

"If when 'twere done, 'twere well done, then 'twere well
That 'twere done quickly."

The Testimony of Unwilling Witnesses.

Better testimony than the Grits have furnished as to the economical administration of Sir John A. Macdonald's Government, and of the beneficial effect which the changes in the tariff will have, could not be had. In his criticism of the budget, Mr. Paterson, the chief spokesman of the Grit party, testified as follows:

In the Customs Administration he noticed the increase of $39,729, which he was not prepared to say was not fairly justified, for the Minister of Customs had power as his ability to keep within the limits he marked out for others better than any other Minister.

As for the increase in the Post Office Department, he admitted that with a rapidly opening country to overtake with postal facilities, there was some justification for the Finance Minister's plea in favor of the increase.

The Kingston Whig is a very unwilling and deeply prejudiced witness, but this unwillingness to testify renders its evidence all the more valuable. The Whig testifies as follows:

The consumers have not reason for much rejoicing, the tariff changes not being very much in their favour. Dried fruit, liquorice and spices will be cheaper, but the saving on these items will not be remarkable. The greatest decrease in duty is on tobacco, not because the Government felt inclined to do so, but because forced to make a reduction, following the action of Congress, and to prevent smuggling. The excise duty on tobacco and snuff imported has been reduced from 20 cents per pound to 12 cents per pound, and the duty on Canadian grown tobacco from 8 cents to 2 cents per lb., but the reduced rate does not go into operation until July 1st. The Government will lose a large amount of revenue by this change, about $300,000 annually.

As to the bounty on the production of pig iron it says:

The object is to stimulate the production and manufacture of iron in the Dominion, to the advantage of interests of vast importance.

Nothing that could be said could add to the effect of this testimony.

Honors to Volunteers.

To a Militia Officer is due the credit of bringing under the favorable consideration of the Department the suggestion of granting to Veteran Volunteers badges for certain fixed periods of service, and medals for a longer term, say 15 or 21 years.

By thus holding out to our soldiers even this slight evidence of their devotion to duty, but one result can follow, that of making the names upon our company "Service Rolls" more permanent, and thus bringing about a far greater degree of efficiency than is now possible, where so few men can be induced to comply even with the conditions of three years service, to which they subscribe on being attested.

It will renew too the esprit de corps of bodies like the "old Belleville Rifles," among whom are to be found many deserving of this decoration.

Lieut. Col. Ross, of the G. G. F. G., will have earned the thanks of the Militia Force if he succeeds in making his idea a fait accompli.

Riches in Hop Farming.

As the present prices, ten acres in Hops will bring more money than five hundred acres in any other farming; and, if there is a consumer or dealer who thinks the price of Hop Bitters high, remember Hops are $1 25 per lb., and the quantity and quality of Hops in Hop Bitters and the price remains the same as formerly. Don't buy or use worthless stuff or imitations because the price is less.

Dr. E. C. West's Nerve and Brain Treatment is a never failing cure for Nervous Neuralgia, Nervous Headache, Overworked

Editorial Brevities.

Last year the operation of Mr. Mowat's stupid and unnecessary Market Law cost the ratepayers of this city over $800. This year the cost to the ratepayers is $450, taking the rental of the last year under the old law as the basis of comparison. But, in all probability, the fees would now bring $2,000 per annum if the old law were in force, so that the loss to the ratepayers this year is not less than $700. Let us all pay our taxes cheerfully, and thank Mr. Mowat's Government for the addition thus made to them!

In his speech at Clinton, on March 29th, Mr. Mowat said he did not know what the majority of his Government would be. Certainly not. The Little Premier must first have heard the result of the protests and the subsequent by-elections before he can determine whether he has any majority.

Said Mr. Hardy at Clinton:

The flag placed in the hand of our honored chief ten years ago by the Reformers of Ontario to-day as pure and unsullied as the hour they handed it to them.

The Grits of West Hastings want another flag—the Stars and Stripes—which they carried in the procession here. The good old British flag is not symbolical of their aspirations now a days.

Mr. Mowat attempted to account for the great reduction of his majority by saying:

How, then, was it that the Government had a smaller majority than before? What were the influences which brought about this result? The explanation was plain. The fight was not with Mr. Mowat and his Provincial supporters and did not turn on any policy of his or of the Opposition, as compared with our own. What the Reformers of Ontario had to contend with was the whole power and force of the Dominion Government and of all that it could command of money, of patronage, and of personal and party influence.

This is an exaggeration. But, supposing it were true, Mr. Mowat has no right to complain. He deliberately courted such a contest in June last, when he and his colleagues took the stump against the candidates of the Dominion Government, and used "the whole power and force of the Ontario Government and all that it could command of money, of patronage of personal and party influence" in order to defeat the candidates of the Dominion Government. His whining under such circumstances is contemptible. The general verdict is: "Served him right!"

Vanderbilt's Ball

(From the New York Daily News.)

The grand fancy ball and banquet given by Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, on the occasion of the first opening of her residence, was on a scale of splendor never before witnessed in America and seldom equaled even in the courts of Europe. The scene within the house transcended even Oriental magnificence in its lavish extravagance and novel features. The company were in costume, and the labors of many hands were called into requisition in providing the dazzling novelties worn. There were over 1,000 people present, and it is estimated that $200,000,000 worth of jewelry was displayed on the persons of the ladies; while the value of the dresses worn by both sexes could not have been short of $5,000,000.

Death to the Cabbage Worm.

Secretary Shaffer, of the Iowa Agricultural Society, says the cabbage worm has destroyed whole fields and acres of cabbages and the remedies of lime, ashes, brine, salt and lye have been failures. Birds do not take them, and hens and chickens tied among the plants, which were previously covered with meal, never touched a worm or drove away the swarms of butterflies which were so numerous as to appear like a snow storm. But the use of pyrethrum was attended with entire success. A pound of the leaves of this plant, mixed with 150 gallons of water, killed every young worm with which it came in contact, while it is harmless to man.

Catarrh of the Bladder.

Stinging irritation, inflammation, all Kidney and Urinary Complaints, cured by "Buchupaiba." $1.

—A prize fight at Dubois, Penn., on Tuesday night, between Mike McLaughlin and Martin Lunksley, miners, resulted fatally to the latter. In the sixth round both clinched and fell, Lunksley breaking his neck by the fall. He expired immediately. McLaughlin was arrested, but is now out on $500 bail.

Beware of Imitations.

Since Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has become celebrated, a number of unprincipled persons have been endeavoring to palm off Electron and Electric Oil for the genuine Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. Beware of these similar named articles. If their originators had any faith in the healing properties of their own medicines they would, like honest men, give them a trial of their own, and not try to sell them the reputation of another; but as they know their preparations have no merit, they resort to the most unprincipled means of selling them by getting a name as near as possible to Eclectric. We therefore ask the public when purchasing to see that the name Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is on the front of the wrapper, and the signature of Northrop & Lyman, the proprietors for Canada on the back.

BELLEVILLE, THURSDAY, APRIL 5.

City and Vicinity.

ONE arrest was made last night.

No. 2 fire steamer is again in order.

REV. MR. MITCHELL is improving slowly.

ALD. POPE has returned home from his eastern trip.

THE snow and ice in the streets disappeared very hurriedly to-day.

THIS morning's express from the east was nearly two hours behind time.

JAMES MCCURDY, who has been on the sick list for a long time, is able to be out.

MR. Patrick Rooney and company arrived from the east this morning, and are quartered at the Dafoe House.

THE person who lost the small braid of gray hair can find it in the "Lilac" tree at the cor. of Hotel and Rear Streets.

As William Ketcheson was driving to the city on the ice, yesterday, with a load of barley, his team broke through. Nothing serious resulted.

FRONT STREET, near Bridge Street, was lined last evening with barrels of headache promoter. And there were quite a few in the collection, too.

THE old members of No. 1 Co., 15th Batt., and those who desire to join it, are requested to meet at the armory in the Ontario Building on Friday evening.

MR. J. Cheyne Davidson, agent for Commander Cheyne, R. N., is in town arranging for the delivery by Com. Cheyne, of one or more of his illustrated lectures on the Arctic regions.

SOME parties who crossed the bay this morning and landed at Wharf Street, assert that the crossing is such that hereafter they will use that above Zwick's island, as the ice on the former route is fast becoming dangerous for heavy travel.

THE funeral of the late William Hopkins, who was killed at the G. T. R. Station, on Sunday night, took place yesterday, and was largely attended. A subscription in aid of Mrs. Hopkins and family has been circulated, and a generous response made.

MR. ANTOINE DAIGNEAU, a former resident of this city, is in town visiting friends and relatives, after an absence of twenty years. Mr. Daigneau is now located in Cincinnati, where he carries on a large business in the manufacture of heating apparatus.

THE large stones at the ends of the several stone crossings have been worn smooth and pedestrians are annoyed on account of the slippery surface they present. If a rough surface were put on these "flags," the Street Surveyor would be considered a public benefactor.

PAT ROONEY and his company of specialists will give one of their pleasing entertainments in the Metropolitan Hall this evening. Their entertainment is highly commended by the press and their patrons may rest assured of witnessing a very enjoyable performance.

THE THOMAS MUNLEY referred to in the account of a quarrel in Monday's INTELLIGENCER, is not Thomas Munley, of this city.

THE closing exhibition of the Albert College Hilary term, took place last evening and was very successful. The programme was carried out very successfully but several of its features had to be eliminated for want of time. The entertainment was a thorough success.

THIS district, by its showing, appears to keep up its reputation for litigation. Already 40 civil cases have been entered on the docket and several of the minor municipalities have not yet been heard from. The number above noted is greater than the whole record of any one circuit in the province.

THE adjourned case of Bailey vs. Waters, in which the latter is accused of cutting timber on property belonging to the former, was resumed in the Police Court to-day. There was large attendance of Madoc residents at the hearing and an additional supply of evidence was presented. The case was further enlarged until this afternoon.

THE sidewalks on Emily Street near Bleecker Avenue, is in such a state that pedestrians can use it only with inconvenience. The snow on the walk is so deep that people who should use that street prefer to go by other streets. The residents of that section are desirous that the Street Surveyor should pay them a visit and stay a while.

THE News says: "The body of Mr. W. James, late Chief Engineer of the Canadian Pacific, who recently died in Winnipeg, and whose funeral took place in Montreal, was removed from Mount Royal Cemetery, sent by express to Portland, and then forwarded per steamer Dominion for the purpose of being interred in the family vault at Otterburn, Northumberland, Eng."

WE learn from the Salt Lake City Tribune, that the Keogh Brothers, formerly of this city, recent bought a cattle rancho in Idaho and at the same time purchased all the stock and material on the property. The land embraces 4,100 acres, and on the pastures were 3,100 head of cattle, 1,000 sheep, 300 horses and a limited number of hogs, to which 3,000 more cattle have been added. The consideration was $100,000.

EDWARD JOSE was the victim of an accident on the 4th, which resulted in the large bone of his left ankle being fractured in several places. He and his brother were engaged in hauling timber from the woods near Holloway to the North Hastings Junction. Edward followed the load, and coming to an icy part of the road, the sleigh "slowed" and the timber fell on him, with the result above stated. Dr. Willson attended to the sufferer.

THE river has opened in several places, and there being no anchor ice in the stream, the water readily passes away. In the vicinity of Coleman's dam the ice has been worn away by the current for a considerable distance, and the water passes through an opening near the shore till the footbridge is reached. Opposite the ashery there is an opening, and there is also one near the new ferry pier. The channel made by the corporation laborers materially assisted in the passing off of the water, and as the current is quite rapid, the effect is very noticeable. Competent judges assert that there is no danger of a flood.

Dominion Parliament.

FIFTH PARLIAMENT—FIRST SESSION.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

OTTAWA, April 4.—After routine the Finance Minister told the members of the Opposition that it was not the intention of the Government to remove the 10 per cent. differential duty on tea imported from the United States.

The question of constitutionality was raised by Mr. Ouimet on Dalton McCarthy's bill respecting carriers by land. He argued that the measure was an encroachment on the civil rights and legislative powers of the Provinces, the Dominion having no jurisdiction in cases of private contract. In this connection the honorable gentleman regretted that the constitutionality of federal and provincial legislation was so often questioned in court.

Messrs. Abbott and Girouard spoke to the same effect.

Mr. McCarthy thought that the matter should be regulated by the Dominion, as inter provincial trade was concerned.

The debate was adjourned on the request of the Government.

Mr. Weldon's bill to repeal the duty on promissory notes, drafts, and bills of exchange, passed through committee, one clause being struck out.

The Minister of Marine introduced a resolution declaring it desirable to provide for the examination of masters and mates of steamboats and sailing vessels of 100 tons and upwards, the object being to ascertain whether they are competent to take charge of craft in the particular trade in which they may be engaged. A number of suggestions were made by the Oppositionists, and the resolution was passed. The Hon. Mr. McLellan will introduce a measure giving it effect. The House adjourned at 10.20.

MORNING DESPATCHES.

AMERICAN.

CHILDREN BURNED TO DEATH.

SHELBYVILLE, Tenn., April 5.—A cabin here was burned yesterday and two children of Harden Hughes, colored, aged five and two, perished. The mother left them locked up in the cabin. The Cumberland Presbyterian Church and a cottage adjoining were also destroyed.

INDIAN TROUBLES.

SANTA FE, April 5.—There is some apprehension of an outbreak at the San Carlos agency. The fourth cavalry have been ordered from Fort Stanley to Fort Selden, to scour the country between the Rio Grande and Pecos. Another company is scouting between Selven City and Lordsburg. Forsythe is still on the Aramious range. The hostiles seems to have fled to old Mexico. Everything is quiet at the Navajo agency.

NEW YORK NOTES

NEW YORK, April 5th.—The Times' Washington despatch says that while some of Folger's friends share in his hopes, others are apprehensive that a resumption of his duties in the Treasury again will prostrate him, and his health is badly impaired. He will never be able to devote himself to the exhausting work of the Treasury department with the vigor the position demands.

Three hundred vessels arrived at this port yesterday. The most of them had been delayed by head winds. Many had perishable cargoes, which were considerably damaged.

Elizabeth Gonsoler, who accused Henry Herman, a wealthy furniture manufacturer here of being her runaway husband, has found her real husband in Baltimore.

Stanley Weller, son of an ex-assemblyman, of Ulster County, was arraigned here yesterday charged with uttering forged cheques.

Honest and Liberal.

When the Hops in each bottle of Hop Bitters (at the present price, $1.25 per lb.,) cost more than a bottle is sold for, besides the other costly machinery, and the quality and price are kept the same, we think it is honest and liberal in the proprietors, and no one should complain, or buy or use worthless stuff, or cheating bogus imitations because the price is low.

AFTERNOON DESPATCHES

A FENIAN NITRO GLYCERINE FACTORY FOUND.

BIRMINGHAM, Eng., April 5.—The city police made a raid on a suspected locality in Ledsam Street, Ladywood, and discovered a Fenian nitro-glycerine factory in full operation.

ANOTHER DYNAMITER CAUGHT.

The detectives had followed the prisoner from Manchester, as he appeared to be a suspicious person. The officers at Woolwich are engaged in a chemical examination of the explosive found upon him. The police regard his arrest as most important.

MORE PRECAUTIONS.

Especial attention is now being given to protecting the buildings in which are located the offices of the Ministry and all public officials. Extra sentinals have been posted at Windsor Castle, where the Queen is, and about the post office. Officers are watching every corner where dynamite fiends or incendiaries could possibly be expected to work.

Daily Intelligencer.

One of Earth's Angels.

'This is, except yourself, Miss Danton. You have grown thin within the last forthnight. What is the matter?'

'I am not very happy,' she said, with a little tremor of the voice; 'perhaps that is it.'

'Not happy!' repeated Father Francis, with a short, peculiar laugh. 'I thought when young ladies married baronets, the height of earthly felicity was attained. It seems rather sordid, this marrying for wealth and title. I hardly thought Kate Danton would do it; but it appears I have made a foolish mistake.'

'Thank you,' Kate said, very slowly. 'I came here to ask you to be cruel to me —to tell me hard truths. You know how to be cruel very well, Father Francis.'

'Why do you come to me for hard truths? said the priest, rather coldly. 'You have been deluding yourself all along; why don't you go on? What is the use of telling you the truth? You will do as you like in the end.'

'Perhaps not. I have not fallen quite so low as you think. I dare say you despise me, but you can hardly despise me more than I despise myself.'

'Then why walk on in the path that leads you downward. Why not stop before it is too late?'

'It is too late now!'

'Stuff and nonsense! This is more of your self-delusion. You, or rather that pride of yours, which has been the great stumbling-block of your life, leads you on in that self delusion. Too late! It would not be too late if you were before the altar. Better stop now and endure the humiliation than render your own and this man's future life miserable. You will never be happy as Sir Ronald Keith's wife; he will never be happy as your husband. I know how you are trying to delude yourself; I know you are trying to believe you will love him and be happy by and-by. Don't indulge such sophistry any longer; don't be led away by your own pride and folly.'

'Pride and folly!' she echoed indignantly.

'Yes, I repeat it. Your heart, your conscience, must own the truth of what I say, if your lips will not. Would you ever have accepted Sir Ronald Keith if your father had not been about to marry Grace Danton?'

The sudden flush that overspread her face answered for her, though she did not speak. She sat looking straight before her into vacancy, with a hard, despairing look in her dark, deep eyes.

'You know you would not. But your father is going to marry a most excellent and most estimable woman; his affection is not wholly his daughter's any longer; she must stand a little in the shade, and see another reign where she once was queen. She cannot hold the first place in her father's heart and home; so she is ready to leave that home with the first man who asks her. She does not love him; there is no sympathy or feeling in common between them; they are not even of the same religion; she knows that she will be wretched, and that she will make him wretched too. But what does it all matter? Her pride is to be wounded, her self-love humiliated, and every other consideration must yield to that. She is ready to commit perjury, to swear to love and honor a man who is no more to her than that peasant walking along the road. She is ready to degrade herself and risk her soul by a mercenary marriage sooner than bear that wound to pride!'

'Go on!' Kate said bitterly; 'it is well to have one's heart lacerated sometimes, I suppose. Pray go on.'

'I intend to go. You have been used to queening it all your life—to being flattered, and indulged, and pampered to the top of your bent, and it will do you good. When you are this man's miserable wife, you shall never say Father Francis might have warned me—Father Francis might have saved me. You have ruled here with a ring and a clatter; you have been pleased to dazzle the bewildered, the simple people of St. Croix, to see yourself looked up to as a sort of goddess. Your rank, and accomplishments, and beauty—we are talking plain truth now, Miss Danton—all these gifts that God has bestowed upon you so bountifully, you have misused. It doesn't seem so to you now, it! You think you have been very charitable, very condescending. I don't deny that you have done good, for you have been a sort of guardian angel to the poor and the sick; but what was your motive? Was it that which makes thousands of girls, as young, and rich, and handsome as yourself, resign everything for the humble garb and lowly duties of a Sister of Charity? Oh, no! You liked to be idolized, to be venerated, and looked up to as an angel upon earth. That pride of yours which induces you to sell yourself for so many thousand pounds per annum was at the bottom of it all. You want to hold a foremost place in the great battle of life—you want all obstacles to clear away before you. It can't be; and your whole life is a failure!'

'Go on,' Kate reiterated, never stirring, never looking at him, and white as death.

'You have fancied yourself very good, very immaculate, and thanked Heaven in an uplifted sort of way that you were not as other women, false, and cruel, and sordid. You wanted to walk through life in a pathway of roses without thorns, to a placid death, and a heritage of glory in Heaven. The trials of common people are not for you; sorrow, and disappointment, and suffering were to pass Miss Danton by. You were so good, and so far up in the clouds, nothing low or base could reach you. Well, it was not to be. You were only clay, after all—the porcelain of human nature, perhaps, but very brittle stuff withal. Trouble did come; the man you had made a sort of idol of, to whom you had given your whole heart with a love so intense it was idolatry—this man abandons you. The sister you have trusted and been fond of, deceives you, and you find that trouble is something more than a word of two syllables. You have been very great, and noble, and heroic all your life, in theory—how do we find you in practice? Why, drooping like any other lovelorn damsel, pining away without one effort at that greatness and heroism you thought so much of; without one purpose to conquer yourself, without one effort to be resigned to the will of Heaven. You rebel against your father's marriage; everybody else ought to be lonely and unhappy because you are; the world ought to wear crape, and the light of the sun be darkened. But the world laughs and sings much as usual, the sun shines as joyously. Your father's marriage will be an accomplished fact, and our modern heroine says 'you to the first man who asks her to marry him in a fit of spleen because she will be Grace Danton's step-daughter, and must retire a little into the background, and look forward to the common humdrum life ordinary mortals lead. She doesn't ask help where help alone is to be found; so in the hour of her trial there is no light for her in earth or Heaven. Oh, my child! stop and think what you are going to do before it is too late.'

'I can't think,' she said, in a hollow voice. 'I only know I am a miserable, sinful fallen creature. Help me, Father Francis; tell me what I am to do.'

'Do not ask help from me,' the young priest said, gravely; 'ask it of that compassionate Father who is in Heaven. Oh! my child, the way to that land of peace and rest is the way of the Cross—the only way. There are more thorns than roses under our feet, but we must go on like steadfast soldiers to the end, bearing our cross, and keeping the battle cry of the brave old Crusaders in our hearts, "God wills it." Your trouble has been heavy, my poor child, I don't doubt, but you cannot be exempt from the common lot. I am sorry for you, Heaven knows, and I would make your life a happy one if I could, in spite of all the hard things I may say. It is because I would not have your whole life miserable that I talk to you like this. Your heart acknowledges the truth of every word I have said; and remember there is but one recipe for real happiness—goodness. Be good and you will be happy. It is a hackneyed precept out of a copybook, Father Francis said, with a slight smile; 'but believe me, it is the only infallible rule. Rouse yourself to a better life, my dear Kate; begin a new and more perfect life, and God will help you. Remember, dear child, 'there is a love that never fails when earthly loves decay.'

She did not speak. She rose up cold, and white, and rigid. The priest arose too.

'Are you going?' he asked.

'Yes.'

'You are not offended with me for all this plain talk? I like you so much, you know, that I want to see you happy.'

Why compel them to take those vile and nauseating medicines, when Puttner's Emulsion is so palatable and nice, and produces better results than any other. Most astonishing reports are daily recorded in favor of its cures, where other preparations of the kind have failed, and then been cast aside in disgust.

FOR DELICATE WOMEN, who are suffering from Anæmia and weakness, caused from over nursing, Puttner's Emulsion is just what is required to give tone to the system, and will immediately build them up in health and strength.

Shiloh's Consumption Cure.

This is beyond question the most successful Cough medicine we have ever sold, a few doses invariably cure the worst cases of Cough, Croup, and Bronchitis, while its wonderful success in the cure of Consumption is without a parallel in the history of medicine. Since it's first discovery it has been sold on a guarantee, a test which no other medicine can stand. If you have a Cough we earnestly ask you to try it. Price 10cts. 50 cts. and $1.00. If your Lungs are sore, Chest, or Back, Lame, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. H. W. Yeomans & Co., wholesale and retail agents

Would you avoid the Biliary complaints incidental to spring and summer? Cleanse the system with Burdock Blood Bitters. Its regulates the Liver, Bowels, Kidneys and Blood, and is the purest tonic in the world. Trial bottles 10 cents.

G. W. Mingay, Parkdale, Toronto, writes: "My wife had several very severe attacks of cramps in the stomach. Hearing of Dr. Austin's Phosphatine, and as they were pleasantness to take, I gave her two bottles, and she has not had an attack since, and her health is much improved." For sale by all druggists.

Racked by Innumerable Pangs, restless by day, sleepless at night, rising unrefreshed in the morning, without appetite and pectoral warying and perplexing symptoms, the dyspeptic takes indeed a gloomy view of human existence. For him the zest of life seems gone. Heartburn, oppression at the pit of the stomach, and the attendant annoyances of of constipation and billousness, combine to render him utterly wretched. But there is, he will but take advantage of it, a reliable source of reliable relief from all misery. Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure is, as its name imports, a botanic preparation, free from mineral poison, and an all-sufficient remedy for indigestion in its most obstinate form. It not only enriches the blood by enabling the digestive organs to convert the food received into nutriment, but depurates it by increasing the activity of the bowels and kidneys, the natural outlets for its impurities. But while it relaxes the bowels, it never does so violently and with pain, like a drastic cathartic. It does, but never forces, Nature, invigorating as well as purifying and regulating the system. It thoroughly removes those diseased humors which tend to vitiate the blood, purifies the urinary secretion, and promotes a flow of healthy bile into the natural channel, besides expelling it from the circulation. Experience has proved that this standard medicine is a thorough remedy for dyspepsia, billousness, costiveness, kidney complaints, scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, lumbago and all impurities of the blood. Price $1.00. Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac-simile of their signature. Sold by all medicine dealers

KIDNEYS, LIVER AND URINARY ORGANS.
THE BEST BLOOD PURIFIER.

There is only one way by which any disease can be cured, and that is by removing the cause—whatever it may be. The great medical authorities of the day declare that nearly every disease is caused by deranged kidneys or liver. To restore these, therefore, is the only way by which health can be secured. Here is where WARNER'S SAFE CURE has achieved its great reputation. It acts directly upon the kidneys and liver and by placing them in a healthy condition drives disease and pain from the system. For all Kidney, Liver and Urinary troubles; for the distressing disorders of women; for Malaria, and physical troubles generally, this great remedy has no equal. Beware of impostors, imitations and concoctions said to be just as good.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

It is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brashy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The Vigor cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair

The Vigor is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.

Spring Medicines.

As regularly as the season comes round, some people begin to dose with so-called spring medicines. Many of these are compounded of roots, herbs and barks, with the addition of inferior spirits, and have different degrees of merit to recommend them. There are no remedies superior to fresh, which should be freely used. Oranges and bananas come at just the right time to meet this demand for a change of diet, and to purify the human system. They are nourishing, healthy, and palatable, and purchase of in suitable quantities will render medicine almost unnecessary. Fresh maple syrup, perfectly pure, is another of nature's peerless preparations found in her great laboratory, of the same class of articles, and medicinous quantity as the sassafras and sarsaparilla, and a most agreeable adjunct to the bill of fare. To learn to regulate one's diet at all seasons of the year without having recourse to medicine is worth any one's attention who desires an immunity from the sufferings of indigestion and the horrors of dyspepsia, headache and other complaints arising from the use of improper food. Prunes and figs are good for those who are confined to sedentary habits. Some like the figs boiled for fifteen or twenty minutes, and then eat them with cream at the breakfast table.

Don't die in the House.

"Rough on Rats." Clears out rats, mice, roaches, bed-bugs, flies, ants, moles, chipmunks, gophers. 15c.

Venerable Peter Cooper.

NEW YORK'S LEADING CITIZEN GONE—HIS LIFE AND WORKS.

Peter Cooper was born in New York city, Feb. 12th, 1791. His maternal grandfather, John Campbell, was an alderman of New York, and deputy quartermaster general during the revolutionary war, and expended the most of his fortune in the service of his country. His father was a lieutenant in the war of the revolution, and afterwards established a hat factory. Young Cooper was brought up in comparative poverty, being one of a large family. He attended school only half of each day for a single year, and beyond the knowledge then gained, such acquisitions as he possessed were entirely his own. At the age of 17 he was apprenticed to a coachmaker. He afterwards learned cabinet making and the grocery business. In 1828 he engaged in the manufacture of glue and isinglass, and two years later he became interested extensively in iron-works at Canton, Md., where he manufactured the first locomotive engine ever used in America. In 1845, at Trenton, N. J., he erected the largest rolling mill then in the United States for manufacturing railroad iron. In 1840 he became an alderman of New York. More than a quarter of a century ago, Mr. Cooper, after prospering greatly in business, conceived the idea of establishing in New York a free institute, something after the manner of the Polytechnic institute at Paris. He accordingly erected a building at a cost of between $600,000 and $700,000, endowed it by means for fitting young workingmen and women for business, and presented the "Cooper Institute" to the city of New York in 1853. In the spring of 1854 he was one of the five gentlemen who met in the house of Cyrus W. Field, and formed the "New York, Newfoundland and London telegraph company," and the first cable was laid partly under Mr. Cooper's supervision. He did everything in his power to aid the Union during the late war. A Greenbacker in politics, Mr. Cooper was urged to become a candidate for the Presidency by friends of that financial system. Mr. Cooper's dominant idea throughout his whole life, was the elevation and education of the industrial classes.

A GOOD MEDICINE.—Mr. J. Wyatt, of Rockingham, N.C., has a little boy, five years old, who has been suffering with a skin disease, breaking out on his face, ever since he was three months old. He administered it to the boy, and states that it has been a wonderful improvement. The breaking out is rapidly disappearing, and the boy's appetite is good for the first time.—Danville, Va., Times.

Davy & Clark, Druggists, Renfrew, date of June 3rd, write:—"Burdock Blood Bitters, though comparatively a new preparation, has taken the lead in this locality as a blood purifier, our sales of it being equal to that of all other medicines used for the purpose during the last year."

A Rope about Our Necks.

After a long, severe winter the system needs toning, enriching and purifies. Nature must be assisted to recuperate, the Liver must be made to act, all surplus bile and impurities carried off. Zopessa acts as a gentle purgative. The results of a few doses are most surprising. Ask your druggist for a 10 cent sample, and try Zopessa, the most powerful remedy for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Constipation, and Biliousness ever introduced in this country.

CUT THIS OUT.

"Frank P. Warner came into our store to purchase a sample bottle of ZOPESSA for a friend, and stated that he (Mr. Warner) was afflicted with Kidney and Liver troubles for five years, and had paid $200 or $300 doctor's bills, and has now been completely cured by the use of two large bottles and one-quarter bottle of ZOPESSA. He was so bad at one time that he lost 37 pounds of flesh, but after using ZOPESSA claims that he is a sound man, and now weighs 145 pounds. He was loud in its praise, and readily consented to allow us to use his name for reference."

Also, Diseases of the Heart. Under the PERSONAL direction of Dr. WILLIAMS, who will remain in constant attendance at the Institute.

Over 40,000 cases successfully treated during the past seventeen years for some form of head, throat, or lung trouble.

All diseases of the respiratory organs treated by "Medical Inhalations," combined with proper constitutional remedies for the blood, etc.

Inhalations, when properly applied, remove solidification of the lungs, by dissolving the hardened matter existing in the cells of the lungs, thus enabling the patient to expectorate it with ease, at the same time giving the diseased surface an opportunity to heal.

Inhalations sooth inflammation and soothe the inflamed surface, thus relieving a harassing cough almost immediately.

Inhalations heal Ulcers and Cavities in the Lungs when all other means fail.

Inhalations arrest the paroxysms in Asthma in a few moments, and effect entire cures in every case.

Let there be no delay then in application to the treatment that has stood the test and proved again and again the only hope—the only reliable safeguard and means of restoration.

Consultation free, prices within reach of all.

The patient at a distance who cannot come to the city to remain for treatment can, after examination, return home and pursue the course of treatment with success, but if impossible to call personally for an examination, write for a "List of Questions" and "Medical Treatise."

BELLEVILLE, FRIDAY, APRIL 6.

"Manufactures."

Under this heading a correspondent who is a large property helder in Belleville, and for whose opinion we entertain a great deal of respect, discusses the necessity and means of establishing manufacturies in our city.

Whilst our correspondent argues very ably in support of his proposition to exempt from taxation all manufacturing establishments which annually export and sell outside of the County $8,000 worth of their products, we cannot hold with him through out in that proposal. It is obvious that the discontent of those manufacturers whose export fell short of the amount fixed would of itself be an insuperable objection to the proposal. There are at present compacatively few manufacturers located in Belleville whose exports would reach the required figure, and that they would give their assent to a subsidized competition by others in the same line who would export but a small portion of their product, it is not in reason to expect. Did our correspond nt enlarge the amount to be fixed as the qualification for exemption to say $20,000 or $25,000, and exclude such industries as are located in Belleville because they can best obtain their raw material here, such as lumber mills, his proposition would be much more likely to meet with popular acceptance.

There is, it seems to us, but one practicable method of dealing with this question of exemptions in this city, and that is, to exempt only

1. Those manufacturing industries which now exist here, or can be introduced, that do not depend on the local trade. Instance the axe factory, the local business of which does not amount to more than one-thousandth part of its trade, and which imports its raw material, which it could procure more cheaply elsewhere.

2. New industries that do not compete with existing industries, and which would manufacture chiefly for export.

Otherwise, the saw mills, some of the furniture manufactories, some of the woollen factories, some of the grist mills, some of the sash and blind factories, some of the carriage factories, &c., would receive exemption, and others of them would not, and the result would be unsatisfactory.

By all means let a proper By-law providing for exemptions be passed, and besides, let existing industries which are not dependent on the local trade and are carried on at a disadvantage here, be exempted from taxation, if by so doing we can secure their permanent location in the city.

There is solid food for reflection in the increase in the expenditure of the city, but it must be remembered that in one item, that of the police force, the expenditure is out of the city's control, as the Ontario Government wills it that three Commissioners shall say how many policemen we shall hire and what wages he shall pay.

Editorial Brevities.

What the Hamilton Times doesn't know about coal is evidently worth knowing. It says in its issue of the 3rd inst :

What is the matter with the coal duty? When the tax on coal was put on, we were told that all places east of Hamilton would be compelled to buy Nova Scotia coal, and that a great Inter-Provincial trade would spring up as a consequence. The coal cometh not and the trade will not be forced, even though the people in Hamilton and elsewhere pay 50 cents on each ton of coal they use. Indeed, the Belleville Tory or anis compelled to acknowledge that there is no stove coal in either that city or Kingston at the present time. What has come of the Finance Minister's power? Has he failed in his coal tax policy too?

Evidently the Times is not aware that the kind of coal used in stoves is hard, or anthracite coal, which is not produced in Nova Scotia, but is imported from Pennsylvania. This statement of facts disposes of the Times' sneer. If that journal wants to know how the duty has affected the coal trade of Nova Scotia, let the editors consult the reports of the Inspector of Mines, and thence they will learn that the output of the Nova Scotia coal mines is now from 500,000 to 600,000 tons per annum greator than when the duty was imposed. Kingston Whig (which reproduced the Times' nonsense), please copy.

Says the Kingston News :—"The Port Hope Guide has got into a ridiculous mess by telling how John Boyd, of Peterboro', went up to Muskoka with barrels of whiskey, rolls of bank-bills, and lying flysheets to corrupt the simple minded settlers in the recent election. The Guide thought John worked in the Conservative interest, but the truth is that he was a most active Grit agent. The revelation of Reform tactics innocently made must be horrifying to the Christian politician."

Sir John A. Macdonald has always been reported by the Grits to be a very wicked man; but the extent of his wickedness was never before so full developed as it has been by the local Grit organ of late. This authority told the world in its issue of March 27th that, on the 23rd of that month (the day was Good Friday, but "the better the day the better the deed") Sir John decided to protest the return of those Liberals who had been elected to the Legislature by majorities of less than 50. "He thereupon summoned his lieutenants to Ottawa and rave them his instructions. They acted promptly, for on the following Monday (the 26th) a protest was lodged against the return of Mr. Sills." It so happened that the Liberal Conservatives of the riding determined, at a meeting held on the 3rd of March—or 20 days before the date at which it is alleged Sir John reached his determination in the premises—to protest the election, and on the 24th, or two days before the authority above cited alleges that action was taken, all the preliminaries were completed. These plain facts we stated; but our authority, which soars above fact in the realms of fancy, still holds that Sir John was at the bottom of the whole affair. Wicked, wicked, Sir John! To have been so previous as to have advised the Liberal Conservatives of West Hastings to protest the election three weeks before the writer who knows all your secrets says you determined to do so. Really, Sir John, we could hardly have thought you could do so wicked a thing if we did not have it on such excellent authority!

Speaking of authority, who was the Grit organ's authority for its libellous statements regarding Messrs. Vankleek, Cross, Dale and Coe, and the editor of the Madoc Review? Was it the same individual who betrayed to it Sir John's secrets, above alluded to, or was it a second edition of Mrs. Gamp's imaginary confidant, "Mrs. 'Arris"?

"Palsied be the nose that pokes
Into the Government printin."

Such was one of the sentiments of Bird-o'-Freedom Sawin, (if we remember his name correctly) and such is the motto upon which the local Grit organ acts. This motto, like that of many other journals, ought to be placed conspicuously under the heading of the Ontario, and at the head of its editorial columns.

A line of the manuscript was omitted from our article on the late epidemic at the Asylum. Commencing with the second paragraph, it should have read: "At the period of the first epidemic, the pipe through which the supply was drawn was in too close proximity to the exit of the sewer which conducted the drainage of the establishment to the bay. The pipe was extended further into the bay, and it was supposed that all danger from that source of continuation would be obviated for the future." The words placed in Italics are those which were omitted.

Vestry Meeting.

The annual vestry meeting was held on Wednesday evening, March 28th, at St. Thomas Church, Rawdon, there being a very fair attendance. After the usual business, part of which was the election of Nicholas Stout by the Incumbent, as his Warden, and Mr. Jas. Cooke by the people as theirs, the following report was presented; the accounts being looked into and passed as satisfactory:

"We, the undersigned Building Committee of St. Thomas Church, 8th line, Rawdon, beg leave to present the following report to the vestry of said church, showing the amount received and expended by us:

Total amount received	$1,558 50
Total paid out	1,558 22
Balance on hand	28

JAS. COOKE
JOHN TURNER
NICHOLAS STOUT.
JAS. T. BELSHAW

The meeting closed with a unanimous vote of thanks to the Committee.

The church being completed in every respect, with its grave yard attached, this clears it of all encumbrances, a prize worthy work for a small congregation within 2 years, unaided by tea meetings or any such expedilences. The committee therefore, with the Incumbent, would return their sincere thanks to those friends outside who kindly assisted them by their contributions.

Trent Valley Canal.

AN INFLUENTIAL DEPUTATION ASKS FOR A FURTHER GRANT FOR CONSTRUCTION.—FAVORABLE RECEPTION BY THE MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS.—THE MATTER TO BE LAID BEFORE HIS COLLEAGUES.

(Special to the Peterborough Review.)

OTTAWA, April 5.—Messrs. Hilliard and Burnham, accompanied by Messrs. Carnegie, Smith and Morrow, of Peterborough; Cockburn, East Northumberland; Dundas, of South Victoria; McFarlane, (Reeve) Switzer, Clew, Howell, Ganton and Stafford of Midland; Thomson, of Penetanguishene; Quinn, of Orillia; Rutledge, of Coldwater, and a number of others, waited upon Sir Charles Tupper this morning with a view to securing a grant during the present session, for another section of the Trent Valley Canal. In reply Sir Charles expressed himself as increasingly impressed with the importance of this work, not merely in the interest of the section of the country through which it passes, but in the interest of the whole Dominion, and especially of the North-West. He requested that the views of the deputation should be put in writing, so that they might be placed before his colleagues, and that steps might be taken thereon.

Beware of Imitations.

Since Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has become celebrated, a number of unprincipled persons have been endeavoring to palm off Electron and Electric Oil for the genuine DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. Beware of these similar named articles. If their originators had any faith in the healing properties of their own medicines they would, like honest men, give them name of their own, and not try to sell them the reputation of another; but as they know their preparations have no merit, they resort to the most unprincipled means of selling them by getting a name as near as possible to Eclectric. We therefore ask the public when purchasing to see that the name DR. THOMAS' Eclectric Oil is on the front of the wrapper, and the signature of NORTHROP & LYMAN, the proprietors for Canada on the back.

The Museum.

To the Editor of the Intelligencer.

MR. EDITOR,—As "Standa d" has been making a few remarks respecting the Museum, I trust you will allow me a short space to reply. I am sure we ought to feel honored by being brought into the company of such a time-honored institution as the British Museum, but we will let that pass and come to more practical work. I will say that provided proper rooms, accommodation and financial assistance could have been obtained, the Mechanics' Society would have been very glad to locate the Museum in a more central locality, but in the absence of some patriotic, moneyed individual, (of whom there are many in the States), to come forward and assist with time and money, those who were endeavoring to establish an institution of the kind, had to take what they considered was the most desirable location. No doubt "Standard" would like to have had the Museum at the Mechanics Institute, but want of accommodation is not the only reason for deciding on Albert College as a better place to locate it. If the City and County were to agree to put up a proper building, make an annual grant for its maintenance, and place it upon a proper basis, there is no doubt that the members of the Society would gladly work in with it, and I believe I may say that the College authorities would also. This is the plan which I would like to see adopted, and one which I find has the largest number of supporters.

In the meantime, the College has placed at our disposal two large rooms well lighted, furnished with glass cases, all the shelving necessary, and also a collection of minerals, shells, fossils, &c., which could not be replaced for $2,000—all this without one dollar of expense to the Society. Can "Standard" do as well for us as that? Until he does it will be useless for him to make any effort to remove the Museum from its present location.

Yours, &c,
MUSEUMSON.

NOTE.—We have stricken out the last paragraph of our correspondent's letter, which contains an unalled for attack on the Mechanics' Institute.—ED. INTELLIGENCER

British Columbia

To the Editor of the Intelligencer.

CHILLIWACK, B. C., March 19th, 1883.

DEAR SIR:—As the visits of the INTELLIGENCER are to me a source of weekly delight, bringing news of people and places in which I feel considerable interest, I have thought that it might be of some interest to your numerous readers and my friends in the County of Hastings, to hear something from the Pacific Province.

The climate of British Columbia is undoubtedly the best that can be found anywhere in British North America. This province has, however, a large area and its climate varies according to the elevation and distance from the coast.

I came here last July, and the weather was dry, mild, and in fact delightful till nearly the middle of October, when what is called the "wet season" set in. It continued wet till about the 10th of January, when we got about six inches of snow, which lasted about a week. Since then the weather has been clear and very pleasant. Since the first of March the weather has been warm, and during the last ten days the thermometer has at noon stood about 75° in the shade. The fields are green, and the peach trees will soon be in bloom. The fruit here in general is much better than I ever saw in the County of Hastings, and that is saying a good deal.

Along the coast and throughout a great part of the interior, the thermometer rarely ever reaches zero, and the greatest summer heat is not above 90°. In this vicinity the coldest days of winter are about 8 to 10 above zero, but such a low temperature does not usually occur more than a few days in the year. The quantity of rain on the coast is from 45 to 75 inches, and from 10 to 20 in the interior.

The annual lumber production now amounts to nearly 30,000,000 feet. The coal mines are very extensive, and large quantities are exported. The annual yield of gold in Cariboo is now upwards of $1,000,000. The annual value of fish packed and cured is nearly $2,000,000, and there are over 5,000 men engaged during the fishing season.

The farms, the mills, the fisheries, the logging camps, the public works, the railways, all demand more help than the present population can supply.

Wages are higher, we believe, than on any other part of the continent. Railway contractors are giving from $2.50 to $5 per day. Wages in ther branches of industry are about equally high. Board is from $4 to $5 per week.

We have the climate and the natural resources to make a nation, and what we most need is population.

There will doubtless be a large emigration as soon as the railway is finished, but those who come before that will, doubtless do best. No person willing to work need be without employment at good wages in British Columbia.

Yours truly,
JAMES A. WOOD

FRONT OF SIDNEY, April 5, 1883.

Yesterday afternoon Miss Susie Johnston, beloved and only daughter of William and Ann Johnston, fell asleep in Jesus. She has been a great and patient sufferer for the last ten months or more, and I believe had often expressed a desire to depart. One desire she had was that her only and much loved brother should trust in Jesus as his Saviour, and meet her in Heaven. This desire was granted her a few moments before she fell asleep. The sad yet happy scene that followed this event will not soon be forgotten by those who witnessed it. H.

Riches in Hop Farming.

At the present price, ten acres in Hops will bring more money than five hundred acres in any other farming; and, if there is a consumer or dealer who thinks the price of Hop Bitters high, remember Hops are $1.25 per lb., and the quantity and quality of Hops in Hop Bitters and the price remains the same as formerly. Don't buy or use worthless stuff or imitations because the price is less.

A YOUNG FAWN has the free run of the lot in rear of the old M. E. Church. She got out of the enclosure a day or two ago, and Lake & Jenkins' dog and the deer had a go-as-you-please race, in which the fawn had decidedly the best of it.

The Canada Consolidated Difficulty.

CHARGE AGAINST MR. ROTHWELL DISMISSED.

New York Truth, March 28.

Judge Truax, in the Superior Court, yesterday, vacated the order of arrest served on R. P. Rothwell, of No. 27 Park Place, in the suit brought against him by J. M. Tuttle, of Des Moines, Iowa. From the evidence, it appears the transaction was simply a purchase of Canada Consolidated Gold Mining Company's stock, made through Rothwell, Rothwell, in a friendly way promising to sell Tuttle's stock for him "at the first opportunity;" but not having been able to do so, and the stock being now unsaleable, Tuttle wanted Rothwell to buy his stock, and on his refusal, charged him with fraud in the transaction. The decision of the court, dismissing the case, is a complete vindication of Mr. Rothwell.

CONSPIRATORS ACTIVE.—Nihilism and Socialism, which appeared to be on the wane in Europe, are rapidly coming to the front again with redoubled vigor. It was thought that the Nihilist trials were approaching an end in Russia, but fresh arrests are daily made. A large mine under the Kremlin, where the coronation will take place, has been discovered. The premature termination of the Socialist Congress at Copenhagen was precipitated by an intimation from the Danish authorities that it was necessary for the foreign members to leave Danish soil within a few hours.

The Anathema of the Church

MONTREAL MEDICAL SCHOOL WARNED TO SEVER CONNECTION WITH VICTORIA.

MONTREAL, April 5—Archbishop Taschereau has informed the faculty of the Montreal Medical School that they must sever their connection with Victoria College, or they will come under the anathema of the Church. A mandate has also been received by the superior of the Hotel Dieu Hospital from His Grace directing that medical students from Protestant Colleges be not admitted. It is alleged that some of the members of the faculty of the Montreal School have expressed to Bishop Fabre their acquiescence in the Pope's mandate.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.—Conversing with a friend at the Government House recently, the Marquis of Lorne is said to have expressed a desire that his term of office should be extended another year. There is a rumor current in this connection to the effect that the Imperial Government will gratify the wishes of His Excellency. As an evidence of the interest the Marquis takes in the welfare of Canada, it may be mentioned that while Mr. Stuart Cumberland, the mind reader, was a guest at the Government House, and during his stay there, His Excellency requested him as a favor to say a kind word for Canada on his return to the mother country in places where he gave his entertainments.

BRITISH FINANCES.—The Imperial Budget for 1883 was presented in the House of Commons on the 5th. The revenue for the past year exceeded the estimate by £4,000,000 and the expenditure was £88,806,000, leaving a surplus of revenue over expenditure of £94,000. The estimated expenditure for the coming year shows a falling off of about £3,000,000 and the revenue is about the same as last year. The public debt was reduced £7,100,000 the past year. Among the recommendations by the Government are the reduction of the income tax and the rate of telegraphic messages and the gradual removal of the duty upon goods made from silver. These reductions will reduce the anticipated surplus to £240,000.

O. Bartle, of Manchester, Ontario Co., N.Y. writes:—"I obtained immediate relief from the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. I have had Asthma for eleven years. Honest and Liberal.

When the Hops in each bottle of Hop Bitters (at the present price, $1.25 per lb.,) cost more than a bottle is sold for, besides the other costly medicines, and the quality and price are kept the same, we think it is honest and liberal in the proprietors, and no one should complain, or buy or use worthless stuff, or cheating bogus imitations because the price is less.

AFTERNOON DESPATCHES

THE DYNAMITERS AND MURDERERS.

LONDON, April 6.—The house in Lambeth, where Wilson and Gallaghe, the dynamite fiends, were arrested has been placed under police surveillance All persons entering or leaving are scrutinized. The police are convinced there are numerous accomplices of the prisoners at large.

Large sums at regular intervals have been deposited in the Bank of England to the credit of the prisoners in Dublin charged with the Phœnix Park and other murders. The authorities have vigorously but vainly searched for the source of these deposits.

Dalton, arrested in connection with dynamite plots, who reached England in February, was unassuming and mistrained a reserved demeanor. At the American Reading Home he appeared more interested in the English papers than in the more common American periodicals, and was more especially concerned to get the latest news.

Wm. Doveton Smith, a prominent Councillor, will defend Norman. It is understood he will base his defence on the plea that Norman was an innocent agent, and employed in the capacity of clerk for a limited time by a man from the United States, who has not yet been arrested. It will be held that Norman was entirely ignorant of the fact that the box contained explosives. It is alleged that Norman is of respectable birth and education, and came to England to find employment.

ARRESTED SOCIALISTS.

BERLIN April 6.—Bismarck, in a letter to the President of the Reichstag, announces curtly and without explanation, the arrest and subsequent release at Kiel of the Deputies who attended the Socialist Congress at Copenhagen.

Daily Intelligencer.

One of Earth's Angels.

'Offended!' she answered; 'oh, no! Some day I will thank you; I cannot now.' She opened the door and was gone. Hitting along, a lonely figure in the bleak winter twilight. She never paused in her rapid walk until she reached Danton Hall, and then, pale and absorbed, she ran rapidly upstairs, and shut herself into her room. Throwing off her bonnet and mantle, she sat down to her writing desk at once, and without waiting to think, took up a pen and dashed off a rapid note:

'SIR RONALD:—I have deceived you. I have done very wrong. I don't love you—I never can; and I cannot be your wife. I am very sorry; I ask you to forgive me—to be generous, and release me from my promise. I should be miserable as your wife, and I would make you miserable too. Oh! pray forgive me, and release me, for indeed I cannot marry you.

'KATE DANTON.'

She folded the note rapidly, placed it in an envelope, wrote the address, 'Sir Ronald Keith,' and sealed it. Still in the same rapid way, as if she were afraid to pause, afraid to trust herself, she arose and rang the bell. Eunice answered the summons, and stared aghast at her mistress' face.

'Do you know if Sir Ronald is in the house?' Miss Danton asked.

'Yes, Missy; he's sitting in the library, reading a paper.'

'Is he alone?'

'Yes, Miss.'

'Take this letter to him, then; and Eunice, tell Miss Grace I will not be down to dinner. You can fetch me a cup of tea here. I do not feel very well.'

Eunice departed on her errand. Kate drew a long, long breath of relief when she closed the door after her. She drew her favorite chair up before the fire, took a book off the table, and seated herself resolutely to read. She was determined to put off thought—to let events take their course, and cease tormenting herself, for to-night, at least.

Eunice brought up the tea and a little trayful of dainties, drew the curtain, and left the lamp. Kate laid down her book and looked up.

'Did you deliver the note, Eunice?'

'Yes, Miss.'

'And my message to Miss Grace?'

'Yes, Miss.'

'Very well, then—you may go.'

The girl went away, and Kate sat sipping her tea and reading. She sat for upwards of half an hour, and then she arose and took the way to the apartments of Mr. Richards. It was after ten before she returned and entered her sitting room. She found Eunice waiting for her, and then resigned herself into her hands at once.

'I shall go to bed early to night,' she said. 'My head aches. I must try and sleep.'

Sleep mercifully came to her almost as soon as she laid her head on her pillow. She slept as she had not done for many a night before, and woke next morning refreshed and strengthened for the new trials of the new day. She dreaded the meeting with her discarded suitor, with a nervous dread quite indescribable; but by meeting meet her and have it over with herself for the encounter with a short, fervent prayer, and went down stairs.

There was no one in the dining room but the table was laid. She walked to the window, and stood looking out at the black, bare trees, writhing and groaning in the wind, and the yellow sunshine glittering on the frozen snow. While she stood, a quick, heavy tread crossed the hall—a tread she knew well. Her heart throbbed; her breath came quick. A moment later and Sir Ronald entered, the open note she had sent him in his hand.

'What is the meaning of this folly, Kate?' he demanded, angrily, striding towards her. 'Here, take it back. You did not mean it.'

'I do mean it,' Kate said shrinking. 'I have behaved very badly; I am very sorry, but I mean it.'

His black brows contracted stormily over his gloomy eyes.

'Do you mean to say you have jilted me? Have you been playing the capricious coquette from first to last?'

'I am very sorry! I am very sorry!' poor Kate faltered. 'I have done wrong! Oh, forgive me! And please don't be angry.'

He broke into a harsh laugh.

'You are sorry! and you have done wrong! Upon my soul, Miss Danton, you have a mild way of putting it. Here, take back this nonsensical letter. I can't and won't free you from your engagement.'

He held the letter out, but she would not take it. The strong and proud spirit was beginning to rise; but the recollection that she had drawn this on herself held her in check.

'I cannot take back one word in that letter. I made a great mistake in thinking I could marry you; I see it now more than ever. I have owned my fault; I have told you I am sorry. I can do no more. As a gentleman you are bound to release me.'

'Of course,' he said, with a bitter sneer. 'As a gentleman, I am bound to let you play fast and loose with me to your heart's content. You have behaved very honorably to me, Miss Danton, and very much like a gentle woman. Is it because you have been jilted yourself, that you want the pleasure of jilting another? It is hardly the thing to revenge Reginald Stanford's doings on me.'

Up leaped the indignant blood of Kate's face; bright flashed the angry fire from her eyes.

'Go!' she cried, in a ringing tone of command. 'Leave my father's house, Sir Ronald Keith! I thought I was talking to a gentleman. I have found my mistake. Go! If you were monarch of the world, I would not marry you now.'

He ground his teeth with a savage oath of fury and rage. The letter she had sent him was still in his hand. He tore it fiercely into fragments, and flung them in a white shower at her feet.

'I will go,' he said; 'but I shall resume her this day, and so shall you. I shall take good care to let the world know how you behave to an honorable man when a dishonorable one deserts you.'

With the last unmanly taunt he was gone, banging the house door after him until the old mansion shook. And Kate fled back to her room, and fell down on her knees before her little white bed, and prayed with a passionate outburst of tears for strength to bear her bitter, bitter cross.

Later in the day a man from the village hotel came to Danton Hall for the baronet's luggage. Captain Danton, mystified and bewildered, sought his daughter for an explanation of these strange goings on. Kate related the rather humiliating story, leaving out Sir Ronald's cruel taunts, in dread of a quarrel between him and her father.

'Don't say anything about it, papa,' Kate said imploringly. 'I have behaved very badly, and I feel more wretched and sorry for it all than I can tell you. Don't try to see Sir Ronald. He is justly very angry, and might say things in his anger that would provoke a quarrel. I am miserable enough now without that.'

Captain Danton promised, and quietly dispatched the Scotchman's belongings.

That evening Sir Ronald departed for Quebec, to take passage for Liverpool.

Our Children.

Why compel them to take those vile and nauseating medicines, when Puttner's Emulsion is so palatable and nice, and produces better results than any other. Its reputation chiefly gained by the wonderful cures of its cures, where other preparations of the kind have failed, and thus been cast aside in disgust.

FOR DELICATE WOMEN, who are suffering from weakness and nervousness, caused from over nursing, Puttner's Emulsion is just what is required to give tone to the system, and will undoubtedly build them up in health and strength.

Shiloh's Consumption Cure.

This is beyond question the most successful Cough medicine we have ever sold, a few doses invariably cure the worst cases of Coughs, Croup, and Bronchitis, while its wonderful success in the cure of Consumption is without a parallel in the history of medicine. Since its first discovery it has been sold on a guarantee, a fact which no other medicine can stand. If you have a Cough we earnestly ask you to try it. Price 10cts., 50 cts., and $1.00. If your Lungs are sore, Chest, or Back, Lame, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. L. W. Yeomans & Co., wholesale and retail agents.

Would you avoid the biliary complaints incidental to spring and summer? Cleanse the system with Burdock Blood Bitters. It regulates the Liver, Bowels, Kidneys and Blood, and is the purest tonic in the world. Trial bottles 10 cents.

G. W. Mingay, Parkdale, Toronto, writes: "My wife had several very severe attacks of cramps in the stomach. Hearing of Dr. AUSTIN'S PHOSPHATINE, and its pleasantness to take, I gave her two bottles, and she has not had an attack since, and her health is much improved." For sale by all druggists.

RACKED BY INSUMERABLE PANGS, restless by day, sleepless at night, rising unrefreshed in the morning, without appetite and pestered by varying and perplexing symptoms, the dyspeptic takes indeed a gloomy view of human existence. For him the zest of life seems gone. Hopelessness, oppression at the pit of the stomach, and the attendant annoyances of of constipation and biliousness, combine to render him utterly wretched. But there is, we will not take advantage of it, a reliable source of reliable relief from all misery. NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY AND DYSPEPTIC CURE is, as the name imports, a botanic preparation, free from mineral poison, and an all-sufficient remedy for indigestion in its most obstinate form. It not only enriches the blood by enabling the digestive organs to convert the food received into nutriment, but depurates it by increasing the action of the bowels and kidneys, the natural outlets for its impurities. But while it relaxes the bowels, it never does so violently and with pain, like a drastic cathartic. It aids, but never forces, Nature, invigorating as well as purifying and regulating the system. It thoroughly removes those morbid humors which tend to vitiate the blood, purifies the urinary secretion, and promotes a flow of healthy bile into the natural channel, besides expelling it from the circulation. Experience has proved that this standard medicine is a thorough remedy for dyspepsia, biliousness, costiveness, kidney complaints, scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, lumbago and all impurities of the blood. Price $1.00. Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac-simile of their signature. Sold by all medicine dealers

KIDNEYS, LIVER AND URINARY ORGANS.
THE BEST BLOOD PURIFIER.

There is only one way by which any disease can be cured, and that is by removing the cause—whatever it may be. The great medical authorities of the day declare that nearly every disease is caused by deranged kidneys or liver. To restore these, therefore, is the only way by which health can be secured. Here is where WARNER'S SAFE CURE has achieved its great reputation. It acts directly upon the kidneys and liver and by placing them in a healthy condition drives disease and pain from the system. For all Kidney, Liver and Urinary troubles; for the distressing disorders of women; for Malaria, and physical troubles generally, this great remedy has no equal. Beware of impostors, imitations and concoctions said to be just as good.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

It is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brashy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The VIGOR cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, heals those parts if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair

The VIGOR is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.

WHOSOEVER.

One day in stress of need, I prayed,
" Dear Father, thou hast bid me bring
All wants to thee ; so unafraid,
I ask thee for this little thing,
Round which my hopes so keenly cling,
And, yet remembering what thou art,
So dread, so wondrous, so divine,
I marvel that I have the heart
To tell thee of this wish of mine !

" I could not come but for thy word
That says I may, in reverent fear,
Approach, and through thy grace be heard ;
Therefore, to-day, I venture near
And bring the suit, to me so dear ;
Remembering what thy Christ hath said,
And reading it with faith aright,
That every hair upon my head
Bears its own number in his sight.

" The thing I ask thee for,—how small,
How trivial it must seem to thee !
Yet, Lord, thou knowest, who knowest all,
It is no little thing to me,
So weak, so human as I be !
Therefore I make my prayer to-day,
And as a father pitieth, then,
Grant me this little thing, I pray,
Through the one sacred Name. Amen !"

I had my wish ; the little thing,
So needful to my heart's content,
Was given to my petitioning,
And comforted, I onward went
With tranquil soul, wherein were blent
Trust and thanksgiving ; for I know
Now, as I had not know before,
The whatsoever's meaning ; so
I cavil not nor question more !

COLINETTE.

From an Unknown French Poet.

" Colinette" she had for name ;
In summer of my prime,
For the happy harvest-time,
To her village-home I came.
I was but a school-boy yet,
But a simple girl was she,
And she died in February,
Little Colinette.

Up and down a leafy chase
Hand in hand we used to run :
How I revelled in the fun !
How she panted with the race !
Finch and linnet when we met
Sang our loves that knew no wrong,
Made the burden of their song
Little Colinette.

Then at length we met to part,
Sat with darkening skies above,
Love (I knew it not for love)
Throbbing to my inmost heart
Hiding all my soul's regret,
" Till another year," said I,
As I took her hand, " good-bye,
Little Colinette."

Oh, the story's very old,
Very common, that I tell
—Not the less will tears upwell
Whensoe'er the story's told :
Many a witching young coquette
Now I woo with poet's pen
—Once alone I've loved, and then
Little Colinette.

Edward Byron Nicholson.

A RISEN CHRIST OR NO SAVIOUR

A SERMON

BY THE REV. T. F FOTHERINGHAM, MINISTER OF THE ST. JOHN, N. B, PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

I Cor. 15: 17.—'If Christ be not raised your faith is in vain ; ye are yet in your sins."

The earliest notices which we have in regard to the Christian festival of the Resurrection of Christ commonly known as Easter, reveals to us the fact that it was very generally observed throughout the Christian world. These notices introduce us to one of the hottest controversies that agitated the early church after the death of the apostles, namely that regarding the proper day on which the resurrection should be commemorated. There was no dispute as to to the propriety of observing such a festival ; the zeal of the disputants and the excommunications which they hurled at one another sufficiently testify to the importance with which it was regarded. The only question was whether the Jewish day, the 14th of Nisan, or the Sunday next following that day should be universally adopted. In this controversy we find the venerable Polycarp, pastor of the Church at Smyrna, disciple and friend of the apostle John, taking part. The Historian Eusebius, (H.E.V.24) has preserved for us a letter of Irenæus in which he states that "neither Amietus (a leader of the opposite party) pursuade Polycarp not to obrerve [the 14th Nisan,] inasmuch as he had always observed it with John, the disciple of our Lord, and the other apostles with whom he had associated ; nor could Polycarp persuade Anicetus to observe [the 14th Nisan,] for he said that he ought to observe the customs of the Presbyters that were before him." No doubt the custom actually arose out of the continued observance of the Paschal feast by Jewish Chistians in Asia Minor, the Christian idea gradually supplanting the Jewish—deliverance from sin taking the place of deliverance from bondage, and the eucharistic elements displacing the paschal lamb. It is, however, a festival for which we have no warrant in Scripture, and the Reformers of the Church in Scotland, strictly following its precepts, wisely and consistently refused to enact its observance as a law of the church. There was then a danger that its retention might be a pretext for reintroducing other and more objectionable ceremonials, while the long and relentless, and cruel persecutions which that church endured at the hands of those who would reimpose another form of government upon her, aroused a not unnatural antipathy in subsequent generations to this and every other part of that system. But our lot is cast in happier times. The supreme authority of the Word of God, as to all matters binding on the conscience, cannot be disputed in a land of Bibles and Sunday Schools ; and men are now praying for some outward expression of that fundamental unity which underlies all Christian churches. What then more appropriate than that we should freely, without regard to the mandate of Pope or prayer book, unite our voices this morning, with the millions of Christendom in glad praise that Christ has conquered death, read with them the same wonderful story, and meditate upon its profound significance. Nature, too, invites us to behold in the loosening of the icy bands of winter, the opening of our Saviour's rocky sepulchre, and in the resurrection of nature the emblem of the resurrection of nature's Lord. Now the genial sun enters upon the northern skies, and the full orbed moon sheds a continuous light upon the rejoicing earth.

Christianity is an historical faith. It does not rest upon poetic style, or philosophic aphorisms, but upon facts. Its dogmas are the interpretation of these facts. The former may be overthrown, but while the latter remain Christianity can never be overthrown. We noticed a few Sabbaths ago that our view regarding any theological system would be determined by our view of the death of Christ. We shall show this morning, that our acceptance or rejection of Christianity itself, rests upon the truth or falsity of the story of the resurrection. The sacred writers are fully sensible of this, and so it, and not the crucifixion, occupies the foremost place in their teaching. When through the apostasy and suicide of Judas, a vacancy occurred in the college of apostles, a successor was chosen, not as a preacher, or ordainer of preachers, or governor over the church, but "to be a witness" of Christ's resurrection (Acts i. 22). This was the end for which they had been themselves called and sent forth. In the first Christian sermon they boldly proclaim the fact of the resurrection as within their personal knowledge (Acts ii. 22) Their first miracle was wrought in the name of the risen Saviour, (Acts iv. 10,) for whom they witness before the people and before the Sanhedrim ; and when anew they were "filled with the Holy Ghost," the burden of their message and the soul of its power was the witness which they gave to the resurrection of the Lord Jesus (Acts iv. 35). with them it is the cardinal truth of their preaching—a risen Saviour ; not a crucified Christ, but Christ crucified and exalted ; a living Jesus who is therefore able to save to the uttermost. When we turn to their theology, developed in the Epistles, we find it resting, not primarily on Calvary with its cross of agony, but upon the garden and its empty tomb. (Read Rom. i 1-4 ; Heb. vii. 25 ; 1 Cor. xv. 24-17) Infidel writers recognize this as the centre of the Christian position. They cannot deny miracles while this most stupendous miracle stands. They cannot deny the atonement while this seal of it remains unbroken. They cannot deny the Godhead of Jesus while this divine attestation of it stands unimpeached.

We stake all our hopes, with the apostle, upon the truth of the resurrection story, because.

I. If Christ be not risen, then he was a mere man.

If the story of the Roman guard was true, then let us gather to-day with heavy hearts and weeping eyes around that garden tomb. The seal is unbroken and the dead still calmly slumbers within. He is gone : fairest of the sons of men, but only a man. "We trusted that it had been he which should have redeemed Israel" but he is dead. What a marvellous life it was, so earnest, so loving, so unselfish, so blameless, so brave. A manly scorn of pride, hypocrisy, and wrong, yet a tender sympathy for the sinning and sorrowful that was more than womanly. But he is gone. Crushed by the cruel malice and envy of men only the fragrance of his memory remains. A deluded enthusiast, the temple can never be rebuilt in three days, nor till the archangel's trump shall sound. The "sign of the prophet Jonas" has failed. He proclaimed himself the "way, the truth and the life," but treading in His footsteps we enter the gloom of the sepulchre, and the world still sighs for its God incarnate

But this gloomy picture is not true. "The promise which was made unto the fathers, God hath fulfilled the same unto us their children, in that he raised up Jesus again ; as it is written in the second psalm, "Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee." He whose praise is sung in every church in christendom to-day, has proved His right to this homage as death's conqueror, and man's divine redeemer. Not to a mere man have we raised the temples of our holy faith, but to one who has "loosed the pains of death, because it was not possible that he should be holden of it" since he was "the Lord and giver of life." Him the church proclaims "God of God, light of light, very God of very God . . . of one substance with the Father," and "the right faith" she declares to be "this, that we believe and confess, that our Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of God is God and Man." "Thou art the King of Glory, O Christ, Thou art the everlasting Son of the Father."

II. If Christ be not risen, we have no evidence that God has accepted the atonement made.

While it is true that he had power to lay down His life and to take it again, yet the resurrection is represented as the act of the Father, "whom God hath raised up, having loosed the pains of death" (Acts 2: 24); (Read Rom. 8: 11: Eph. 1:20; Col. 2:12). But if this be not so, and Christ has not been "declated to be the Son of God with power" "by the resurrection from the dead," then all the exulting prophecies of the Old Testament are changed to walls of bitterest disappointment. The confidence which sustained the afflicted Job was a delusion for no "Redeemer" lives. Balaam was still a false prophet when he saw a "star" rise "out of Jacob" and "a sceptre" "out of Israel." The joy which filled Abraham's heart when he "saw his day afar off and was glad" was born of an enthusiast's fancy. The exultant strains of the seventy-second psalm are mere poetic fervor, and we with Israel to-day still wait with aching longings for the deliverer of whom Isaiah speaks in the glorious fifty-third chapter of his prophecies. Paul is but speaking "peace, peace where there is no peace when he declares that "there is now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus," "If God be for us, who can be against us," but who shall assure us that God is for us, unless we can add "It is Christ that died, yea, rather that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us.'

Rob us of a risen Savior, and you leave unanswered the agony which asks "How should man be just with God"? The darkness of heathenism descends once more upon the world ; sin is unpardoned ; inexorable justice strictly awaits the despairing sinner. Rather pluck the sun from the firmament, and let Cimmerian darkness cover the earth, than that the light of reconciled love which beams from the glorified risen Saviour should be extinguished. If we preach not Christ risen, we dare not preach Christ crucified, it would only mock our despair. But, blessed be God, it is not a doubtful thing. By the darkened sun we know he died ; by the Eastern dawn we know he rose. By the quivering earth and rending rocks we learn the significance of his expiring cry ; by the stricken guards, and the descending angel we know our risen Lord. With the eye of faith we can pierce the skies, and see Him, as Stephen did, standing at the right hand of the Father. In humbled consciousness of sin we hear him saying out of the glory that is brighter than noonday, "Saul Saul, why persecutest thou me," and in sweetest communion with His forgiving love, we know that He is not the shadow of a mighty name, but a living presence, not a dead man, but a divine, an all sufficient, an ever-living Saviour.

III. If Christ be not risen we have no guarantee of our own resurrection.

If the story of the resurrection be false, there is absolutely no proof that any human body shall ever rise. Hopes and presumptions there may be but not satisfactory proof. The Bible stands or falls as a whole. If the story of the resurrection be a fable, then any such narrative from Genesis to Revelation may be another. If it be true, there can be no doubt whatever in the matter. If it be not true, the earth is one vast charnel house. The beauty of form which charms us with its divine grace, the loveliness which sparkles in the eye and tints the cheek with sunny hues, becomes but food for worms and crumbles into senseless dust, and that is the end of all. The sublime flights of genius, the fervent visions of poetic fancy, the profound wisdom of philosophy, are but the mirage of the soul on life's desert sands. Heathen fables are true ; there are but gloomy realms of Hades ; a ghostly Charon ferries us over a dark, silent, sullen river, to the cold, misty home of disembodied spirits, there to wander forever among the shades, and find our highest bliss in quaffing of the lethal streams, that all our past may be lost in forgetfulness. All our hopes of blessedness for soul or body hang on the resurrection of that first Easter morn. Take this away and the soul is the entrance to a winter worse than the Arctic, a state of being more cheerless than Alpine snows, or Asiatic plains, or African sands, where the wretched spirit only exists sufficiently to know and bewail the fact of its existence through endless ages, and long uneasily for annihilation. This is the only immortality that we can hope for if the grave still holds a dead Christ. If Christ be not risen, the prison house of the soul has never been unlocked ; the martyrs died the death of madmen in the hope of the fanatic ; the saints of old will sleep forever, and the ten thousand times ten thousand will never stand around the throne with palms in their hands.

Standing by the empty sepulchre to-day we preach to you the resurrection of the body. Though laid for a time in the silent grave, or the still depths of the restless ocean, those whom God has taken from us shall rise again. Christ has become "the first fruits of them that sleep," and those that sleep in him shall awake at his appearing. All is not ended when the bright eye is closed in death, when the bounding pulse stands still, and the tongue has spoken its last loving whisper. These eyelids shall again unclose, and from beneath will burst upon us the sunshine which has gladdened our hearts ; life will once more animate the form, and our ears will catch the old familiar tones. He whose feet the women clasped, and by whose side the disciples walked was no unsubstantial ghost. He partook of their common food, he invited their touch, he appeared in their assemblies, he ascended before their eyes. Such as he is, such shall we be. The corruptible shall put on incorruption, the mortal immortality. He shall change our vile bodies that they "may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself." "Because he lives we shall live also"

If then this fact, the very Gibraltar of our faith, the keystone of the arch of Christianity, be true, and Christendom to-day declares its faith in it, all else that the Bible teaches is likewise true. Here is an end of all controversy. His resurrection looks back to his crucifixion and that to the ruin of man. The garden at Calvary authenticoes the story of the garden at Eden. The risen Christ proclaims himself the woman's seed and the world's Redeemer, the only Saviour of sinners. He died for our sins and rose again for our justification. He is now exalted a Prince and a Saviour, at the right hand of the Father, to give repentence and the remission of sins. And so his resurrection points forward too, to the time when he shall come again in the clouds of heaven and all his holy angels with him ; when men shall look on him whom they have pierced, and behold in the Judge of all the earth, the crucified Nazarene.

1. Receive then this Saviour as your God, and give Him the worship which is due to the Eternal one.

2. Accept of his salvation so freely offered, so fully accomplished, so lovingly pressed upon your acceptance.

3. Consecrate yourself to his service. Let all those faculties which are to serve him in heaven be his servants now, those bodily members which he is to glorify be sanctified to him now.

"O Love which lightens all distress,
Love death cannot destroy :
O grave whose very emptiness
To faith is full of joy ;
Let but that love our hearts supply
From heaven's exhaustless spring ;
Then grave, where is thy victory ?
And death, where is thy sting ?

"The shade and gloom of life are fled
This resurrection day ;
Henceforth in Christ are no more dead,
The grave hath no more prey ;
To Christ we live, in Christ we sleep,
In Christ we wake and rise ;
And the sad tears death makes us weep,
He wipes from all our eyes.

"Then wake, glad heart ! awake ! awake !
And seek thy risen Lord,
Joy in his resurrection take,
And comfort in his word,
And let thy life through all its ways,
One long thanksgiving be,
Its theme of joy, its song of praise,
"'Christ died, and rose for me.'"

BELLEVILLE, SATURDAY, APRIL 7.

Our Iron and Steel Interests

The resolution adopted by the City Council at its last meeting, namely that each Committee should report what, if anything, can be done towards securing the establishment of iron smelting works in this city, is not satisfactory in that it does not seem to accept the munificent offer of the Government with sufficient promptness or a proper degree of heartiness. It is objectionable as involving a delay of two weeks at least, as the Committees can hardly be expected to supply at short notice any further information on the subject of inducements than has already been elicited by the very able Committee who formerly had the matter in charge. The final result must be the appointment of a Special Committee, to arrange the preliminaries—a work which could not be done by the Council—and it would have been better had this been done at once, leaving the Standing Committees to report at a later date, if that were deemed necessary, to the special Committee.

We trust, however, that this will be the only delay in connection with the matter, and in this hope we ask the members of the various Committees to be prepared with reports for presentation at the next meeting of the Council.

It will be the duty of the Council, even should such reports be lacking, to appoint a Committee, with instructions to set forth, in such a manner as may be deemed most likely to be of service to the City's interests, the special advantages which Belleville undoubtedly possesses as a location for the manufacture of iron and steel, and to enter into negotiations with capitalists. Such a Committee ought, as we have before urged, to include a good representation of the citizens, in order that all interests may be as carefully consulted as possible.

The bonus offered by the Government for the production of iron is so liberal, and the duty of $5 per ton placed upon steel in ingots, bars, coils and sheets is so considerable, that it can hardly be otherwise than that capitalists will seek to establish such industries in Canada, and that, too, ere long. We do not share in the pessimistic view which it is stated found expression at the Council, namely that there was very little hope of any substantial result. On the contrary, we believe that within a very short time capitalists will be searching for the best location for iron and steel manufactories from the people of such places as are suitable. We therefore urge the appointment in Belleville, with as little delay as possible, of a thoroughly representative and properly authorized body ready to enter into negotiations, on behalf of the City, for the establishment of iron and steel manufactories here. If failure result there will then be no blame attached to the Council for having failed to act up to its duty.

Editorial Brevities.

The Hamilton Spectator and others of our Conservative contemporaries have been alluding of late to our true-blue Liberal-Conservative contemporary the Kingston News, as a Reform newspaper. The News revenges itself, however, by ironically terming the Spectator a notorious Grit sheet.

The Grits refuse to regulate railway freights by means of a Commission, and yet they propose to regulate Mr. McLaren's rates for floating logs through his improvements on his property. Consistent as usual.

The Town Council have now a very responsible duty to perform towards the growth of Prentice. The laudable desire to secure the construction of a water power should not blind them to their interests. Any person with the slightest knowledge of our river can see splendid sites for two dams between Gordon and floodwater. One at the orchard above the river which, if a flume were carried down the bank to floodwater, would give fifteen feet fall; the other at Lecas's island (where the Government engineer locates a dam for the canal) would give eight feet fall. It will be very prudent for the Council to use their influence with Mr. Gilmour to build his proposed dam on either of these sites so that the other may not be destroyed.

The above literary gem is culled from the editorial columns of the last issue of the Trenton Grit paper, which is edited and owned in part by an M.A. of Victoria College—a person who takes it upon him occasionally to lecture his contemporaries on the composition of the editorial articles which have appeared in their columns. We will not imitate the high-bred courtesy of this modern Solon by insinuating that he was drunk when he wrote the above remarkable "editorial"; but we offer the suggestion that it be given a place in the school examination papers, in order that the school boys may point out the sins against the English language which such a pretentious ignoramus has perpetrated in it.

Manufactures

To the Editor of the Intelligencer.

SIR,—I am sorry that the ambiguity of my language should have led you to construe the meaning of, "I would remit all taxes for ten years on the lands, premises and machinery necessarily used in foundries, machine shops, cabinet shops, axe and tool factories and other businesses exporting $5,000 worth of goods manufactured by them and sold outside of this county, and all other manufacturing businesses not now in operation in the city" as to limit the exemption to those manufacturers who export at least $5,000 worth of their manufactures and no others.

What I meant was that the classes of businesses which I would exempt should be placed in three categories.

1st. Foundries, machine shops, cabinet shops, axe and tool factories, &c

2nd. All other businesses now carried on in the city of which $5,000 of their manufactures are exported, and

3rd. All other businesses, the like of which are not now in operation in the city.

You will therefore see that I am more liberal than yourself in this matter, as my programme will exempt all factories, except some small ones working for the home market solely, which require no exemption to continue them in existence.

With regard to your remark, "That the Police are out of the control of the City." Now as the political friends of Belleville will not be considered in the next Legislature as the mere rump of an Opposition, I hope Belleville will have the same privileges accorded to her in this connection as the cities of Brantford, Guelph and St. Thomas.

Beware of Imitations.

Since Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has become celebrated, a number of unprincipled persons have been endeavoring to palm off Electroo and Electric Oil for the genuine Dr. THOMAS ECLECTRIC OIL. Beware of those similar named articles. If their originators had any faith in the healing properties of their own medicines they would, like honest men, give them name of their own, and not try to sell them the reputation of another; but as they know their preparations have no merit, they resort to the most unprincipled means of selling them by getting a name as near as possible to Eclectric. We therefore ask the public when purchasing to see that the name Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is on the front of the wrapper, and the signature of NORTHROP & LYMAN, the proprietors for Canada on the back.

THE CHRISTIAN BROTHERS' LAND QUESTION.

Two Published Letters Undoubtedly Stolen.

ONE LETTER A CLUMSY FORGERY.

A Clear Explanation of the Whole Affair.

Words Attributed to the Premier.

Their Utterance Most Emphatically Denied.

Mail's Correspondence.

OTTAWA, April 5.—The Grit papers are publishing a correspondence purporting to have taken place between the solicitors of the Christian Brothers and the Government of Canada relating to some property in Teroonto which the Christian Brothers had purchased from the Government at auction in 1867, the consideration being $8,000, one-tenth of which was paid at the time of sale. The balance was to have been paid by instalments, with interest at six per cent. The payments were not made, and the matter remained in statu quo till 1879, when an attempt was made to secure a settlement of the outstanding liabilities in order to enable the Christian Brothers to obtain a deed. Mr. J. A. Macdonnell, of Toronto, was employed and he wrote a letter to Sir Charles Tupper on the subject, dated 23rd January, 1879, but whether the letter published is that letter or not is something no one can tell, seeing that the letter in question, the memorandum of Sir Charles Tupper, and the final answer of the Secretary of the Department were stolen and have been handed round among newspapers for some time without the possessor finding any man so dishonorable as to purchase stolen documents, which on the face of them indicted that they were stolen. The probability is that the man who would not hesitate to steal the documents, would not hesitate about inculpating words and sentences which were not in the original. At any rate the Government are only responsible for their own acts, and those acts were:—

TO APPROACH THE GOVERNMENT,

First, the recommendation of Sir Charles Tupper, acting Minister of Public Works, dated May 22nd, that the property should be transferred to the Christian Brothers without the payment of the accrued interest, on condition of the immediate payment of the whole amount of the purchase money by the Christian Brothers: and second, the letter signed by F. Braun, in which the Minister of Public Works regrets that the view taken by the Government, as to the necessity of carrying out the terms of the purchase (such purchase having been effected by auction), has rendered it impossible for them to accede to the representations made by him, (the Minister) on behalf of the Christian Brothers. These

TWO DOCUMENTS SPEAK FOR THEMSELVES.

The first one shows that it was several months after the attention of the Government was called to the subject that the Minister made his report. He was in no great hurry. Matters took their usual course. There was evidently no extraordinary anxiety to conciliate the Archbishop. He was treated exactly as any other man in the country making an application to the Government. The Government did not approve of making an attempt to wean the Archbishop from his supposed regard for the Grits by such means. The Government of Sir John Macdonald took their time, and from January to May turned the subject over in their minds, and finally declined to accede to the wishes of the Archbishop in the matter. The facts as presented in the Grit organs are the strongest proof that the Government were not willing to do anything prejudicial to the public interests, and were not willing to depart from the usual routine even to conciliate an Archbishop. Passing away from the stolen documents, which were published by those who knew them to be stolen documents, we come to the letter purporting to have been written May 29th, 1879, to J. A. Macdonnell, and in which appears the italicised words: "Sir John says he has little confidence in the bread." The letter, of course, could not be among the documents stolen, because it necessarily, if actually sent, was in the possession of Mr. Macdonnell, and could not have been among the stolen documents. Either then the thief must have gone to Mr. Macdonnell's private papers in Toronto and hunted this particular letter out or must have forged it. He must have determined upon adding a second theft to his first, or a second and greater crime to his first crime. On examination it looks remarkably like a

CLUMSILY PREPARED FORGERY.

In the first place it will be observed that while all the other documents given in the statement published by one or two obscure journals are signed by the persons writing them, this document is without any signature. The concocter of the plot thought it better not to go too far. He imagined that he might save himself by the cunning device of omitting the signature. In another essential he has proved himself a clumsy fabricator. The point of the whole thing lies in the attempt to induce the public to believe that Sir John Macdonald made a statement which Sir Charles Tupper endorsed to the effect that there was "little confidence to be placed in the breed," meaning thereby, says the Grit organ, that the Romish Catholics, or the hierarchy of that body, were entitled to but little confidence. The clumsy forger makes Sir Charles Tupper write this in a most confiding way to a man who is himself in fear of that persuasion. The absurdity of such a concoction is only equalled by its malice. The concocter over-reached himself, like many another villain, but independent of the fact that the internal evidence is strongly indicative of forgery, and that the absence of a signature to the only one of the four documents to which the slightest importance can be attached is a remarkably suspicious circumstance. I have the authority of the Minister to affirm in the most explicit and straight-forward way possible that he knows nothing about the letter, that he never wrote it, never used such words in any form, either in writing or verbally, and that the letter from beginning to end is a forgery. The clumsily prepared forgery will probably deceive none but those who have by strong partisan feeling been given over to a delusion to believe a lie. At the same time it is just as well to expose the fact that three of the documents have been obtained by theft from a public department, and not only fasten no wrong doing on the Government, but actually show that the Government declined to seek the support of a prominent man by declining to agree to what, on a review of all the circumstances, they thought would be prejudicial to the public interests; while the fourth, or unsigned letter, of May 20th, is a downright malicious forgery, a fraud attempted to be palmed off on the public.

The Hodgson Case

FLIGHT OF MR. HODGSON—A COMPROMISE WITH THE BANK OF MONTREAL.

(Montreal Star, April 6.)

The Hodgson scandal came to an abrupt close yesterday afternoon by the Bank of Montreal selling out their claim and dropping the case altogether. The consequence of this was that Mr. Hodgson was set at liberty about half-past five yesterday afternoon. In order to avoid further trouble with his other creditors he left for the States by the 6.30 train and was safely across the line before any one dreamed that any agreement had even been thought of. A Star reporter called at the warehouse this afternoon and found only one individual in the office, who evidently knew very little about the matter, and yet was determined to keep that little to himself. Meeting one of the bondsmen, the reporter was informed that the bank had sold out to Mr. Hodgson's brother for 40 cents in the dollar, and that really the residence at Cote St. Antoine "Rosemount" had been made over to the Bank as a receipt in full of all claims, which however was later found to be untrue. The bondsmen were in delightful ignorance of the terms of the compromise and the bank officials refused to say a word on the subject, the reporter then telephoned to "Rosemount" and after giving his name and business was informed through the medium of the person at the Central office that Mr. Hodgson had nothing to say to the Star that afternoon.

Banking and commercial circles were elevated to-day when the truth became known. It appears that negotiations which had been going on between Mr. Hodgson's relatives and the bank for some days, with a view to the purchase of the bank's claims, were consummated yesterday afternoon, and Mr. Hodgson was released. The bank had only appeared as private prosecutor, and the case had not yet been under the charge of the Crown. There was considerable reticence on the part of all parties immediately concerned in the negotiations, and it was impossible to get at the exact details of the settlement. It is said that the bank received some $60,000 or $70,000, and that this amount was paid by telegraphic transfer yesterday. The settlement of the bank's claim does not affect the position of the other creditors here except to put them in a better way, as it withdraws from participation in any property which is left the claim of the bank, which was a large one. The creditors for whom are still down for large amounts will have such recourse against Mr. Hodgson's real estate, which is mortgaged to his brothers; their only chance of realizing upon it, however, being in their ability to upset the mortgage. It is understood that a commissioner's capias was issued last night at the instance of one of the banks, but it was too late to be served, as Mr. Hodgson had already left the country. A sasie gagerie for $1,165, amount of rent due, has been taken against A. Hodgson & Sons by the Sisters of the General Hospital (Grey Nuns), through their attorneys, Messrs. Lacoste & Co.

FIFTH PARLIAMENT—FIRST SESSION.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

OTTAWA, April 7.

The debate on the budget has been in progress since 3.30 yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Wigle, of Essex, delivered his maiden speech, making several pointed illustrations to show that the farmer had been benefitted by the N. P.

Mr. Millar, of Huron made an address characteristic of the pure Grit, and his speech showed that he adopted attachment to the ex-Premier. His argument was that the farmer now received less for his produce than he did in 1879, while he paid more for all the goods he had to purchase.

Mr. Wood, of Westmoreland, while not claiming that protection was the sole cause of the prosperity of the country, contended that it was the duty of the Government to improve the shining hour.

Dr. Sproule of East Grey, made a clever speech.

Mr. Taylor of South Leeds and Mr. Barns of Gloucester, N.B., followed, both speaking from a Government standpoint.

Mr. Hugh Sutherland, of Selkirk, made his maiden speech against a protective policy.

The debate was continued by Mr. J. J. Hawkins, who spoke for an hour, being followed by Mr. Gilmour of Charlotte, N.B., an out-and-out free trader, who still holds the floor.

Daily Intelligencer.

ONE OF THESE DAYS.

One of these days it will be all over,
Sorrow and laughter, and loss and gain,
Meeting and parting of friend and lover,
Joy that was ever so edged with pain.
One of these days will our hands be folded,
One of these days will the work be done,
Finished the pattern our lives have moulded,
Ended our labour beneath the sun.

One of these days will the heart-ache leave us,
One of these days will the burden drop;
Never again shall a hope deceive us,
Never again will our progress stop.
Freed from the blight of the vain endeavor,
Winged with the health of immortal life,
One of these days we shall quit for ever
All that is vexing in earthly strife.

One of these days we shall know the reason,
Haply, of much that perplexes now;
One of these days in the Lord's good season
Light of his peace shall adorn the brow.
Blessed, throughout of tribulation
Lifted to dwell in his sun-bright smile,
Happy to share in the great salvation,
Well may we tarry a little while.

NEPENTHE.

[From the London Spectator.]

The north wind follows free and fills
Our rounding sail, and overhead
Deepens the rainless blue, and red
The sunset burns on quarried hills;

And peace is over all, as deep
As where, amid the secular gloom
Of some far-reaching, rock build tomb,
The nameless generations sleep;

While, undecayed as on the day
That saw them first, the kings of old,
In sculptures calm serene, behold
The slow millenniums pass away.

Still, far behind us, as we cleave
Smooth-flowing Nile, the din of life
And passionate voices of the strife
Are hushed to silence, and we leave

The cares that haunt us, dark regret
For wasted years, and wild unrest,
Yearning for praise or pleasure, blest
With life's last blessing—to forget.

For still in Egypt's kindly air,
Strong antidote of moral woes,
The painless herb, Nepenthe, grows,
Which she whom fair haired Leda bare

Mixed in the wine, and stilled their pain
Who wept in Spartan halls for sire
Or brother, wrapped in funeral fire,
Or wandering o'er the boundless main.

Reproof and Rejoinder.

An Elder of the Kirk having found a little boy and his sister playing marbles on Sunday, put his reproof in this form, not a judicious one for a child: 'Boy, do you know where children go to who play marbles on the Sabbath day?' 'Ay,' said the boy, 'they gang down to the field by the brig.' 'No,' roared the Elder, 'they go to hell and are burned.' The little fellow, really shocked, called to his sister, 'Come awa, Jennie, here's a man swearing awful.'—Dean Ramsey.

A Fellow Feeling.

Little Rock Gazette.

A gentleman was arraigned before an Arkansas justice on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. He had entered a store, pretending to be a customer, but proved to be a thief.

'Your name is Jim Lickmore?' said the justice.

'Yes, sir.'

'And you are charged with a crime that merits a long term in the penitentiary?'

'Yes, sir.'

'And you are guilty of the crime?'

'I am.'

'And you ask for mercy?'

'No, sir.'

'You have had a great deal of trouble within the last two years?'

'Yes, sir, I have.'

'You have often wished that you were dead?'

'I have, please your honor.'

'You wanted to steal money enough to take you away from Arkansas?'

'You are right, judge.'

'If a man had stepped up and shot you just as you entered the store you would have said, 'Thank you, sir?'

'Yes, sir, I would. But, judge, how did you find out so much about me?'

'Some time ago,' said the judge, with a solemn air, 'I was divorced from my wife. Shortly afterwards you married her. The result is conclusive. I discharge you. Here, take this $50 bill. You have suffered enough.'

The Humors of Examinations.

It is related of a rough-and-ready examiner in medicine that on one occasion, having failed to elicit satisfactory replies from a student regarding the muscular arrangements of the arm and leg, he somewhat brusquely said:

'Ah, perhaps, sir, you could tell me the names of the muscles I would use to put in action were I to kick you?'

'Certainly, sir,' replied the candidate, 'you would put in motion the flexors and extensors of my arms, for I should use them to knock you down!'

History is silent, and perhaps wisely so, concerning the fate of this particular student. The story is told of a witty Irish student, who, once upon a time, appeared before an Examining Board to undergo an examination in medical jurisprudence. The subject of examination was poisons, and the examiner had selected that deadly poison prussic acid as the subject of his questions.

'Pray, sir,' said he to the candidate, 'what is a poisonous dose of prussic acid?'

After cogitating for a moment, the student replied with promptitude, 'Half an ounce, sir!'

Horrified at the extreme ignorance of the candidate, the examiner exclaimed:

'Half an ounce! Why, sir, you must be dreaming. That is an amount which would poison a community, sir, not to speak of an individual!'

'Well, sir,' replied the Hibernian, 'I only thought I'd be on the safe side when you asked a poisonous dose!'

'But pray, sir,' continued the examiner, intent on ascertaining the candidate's real knowledge, 'suppose a man did swallow half an ounce of prussic acid, what treatment would you prescribe?'

'I'd ride home for a stomach-pump,' replied the unabashed student.

'Are you aware, sir,' restorted the examiner, 'that prussic acid is a poison which acts with great rapidity?'

'Well, yes' replied the student.

'Then sir, suppose you did such a foolish thing as you have just stated,' said the examiner; 'you ride home for your stomach-pump; and on returning you find your patient dead. What would you, or what could you do then?' asked the examiner in triumph, thinking he had driven his victim into a corner where there was no escape.

'What would I do?' reiterated the student, 'do?—why, I'd hould a post mortem!'

For once in his life that examiner must have felt that dense ignorance united to a power of repartee was more than a match for him.

Getting even with the "Oldest Inhabitant"

He came in and took a chair, and as soon as he thawed out, he began talking to us about the big freeze in 1832, when all the trees on Buffalo Bayou broke down with ice. After he had almost persuaded us that the freezing weather we had just had was tropical compared with that he had gone through, we asked him:

'Colonel, do you remember the time that the Thames was frozen over three feet thick, and it snowed forty days without stopping?'

'Remember it? I should say I did. That was the year that me and Sam Houston came to Texas together. We had a bottle of pure whiskey, but it froze solid. We broke the bottle and chipped off our drinks with a hatchet.'

'Do you remember when the Adriatic was frozen over, and the trees burst open with reports like a cannon?'

'Of course I do. I had a plantation on the Adriatic, and lost over so many niggers.'

'Then you must remember when the Dardanelles and the Black Sea were frozen over, and the snow was piled 100 feet high.'

The Colonel remembered it, and said that he helped to shovel away the snow.

'How old are you, Colonel?'

'I'm a young man yet; only 83 this coming spring.'

'Colonel, the only time the Straits of Dardanelles were frozen over was in the year A. D. 408, so you must be mistaken in your age, you must be nearly 1,475 years old.'

The old man said it was astonishing how tempus fugit, and walked off as balmy as a spring morn.

Our Children.

Why compel them to take those vile and nauseating medicines, when Puttner's Emulsion is so palatable and nice, and produces better results than any other. Most astonishing reports are daily recorded in favor of its cures, where other preparations of the kind have failed, and then been cast aside in disgust.

FOR DELICATE WOMEN, who are suffering from Anœmia and weakness, caused from over nursing, Puttner's Emulsion is just what is required to give tone to the system, and will immediately build them up in health and strength.

G. W. Mingay, Parkdale, Toronto, writes: "My wife had several very severe attacks of cramps in the stomach. Hearing of DR. AUSTIN'S PHOSPHATINE, and its pleasantness to take, I gave her two bottles, and she has not had an attack since, and her health is much improved." For sale by all druggists.

RACKED BY INNUMERABLE PANGS, restless by day, sleepless at night, rising unrefreshed in the morning, without appetite and pestered by varying and perplexing symptoms, the dyspeptic takes indeed a gloomy view of human existence. For him the zest of life seems gone. Heartburn, oppression at the pit of the stomach, and the attendent annoyances of of constipation and billousness, combine to render him utterly wretched. But there is, if he will but take advantage of it, a reliable source of reliable relief from all misery. NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY and DYSPEPTIC CURE is, as its name imports, a botanic preparation, free from mineral poison, and an all-sufficient remedy for indigestion in its most obstinate form. It not only enriches the blood by enabling the digestive organs to convert the food received into nutriment, but depurates it by increasing the action of the bowels and kidneys, the natural outlets for its impurities. But while it relaxes the bowels, it never does so violently and with pain, like a drastic cathartic. It aids, but never forces, Nature, invigorating as well as purifying and regulating the system. It thoroughly removes those diseased humors which tend to vitiate the blood, purifies the urinary secretion, and promotes a flow of healthy bile into the natural channel, besides expelling it from the circulation. Experience has proved that this standard medicine is a thorough remedy for dyspepsia, billousness, costiveness, kidney complaints, scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, lumbago and all impurities of the blood. Price $1.00. Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac-simile of their signature. Sold by all medicine dealers

FOR THE KIDNEYS, LIVER AND URINARY ORGANS.

THE BEST BLOOD PURIFIER.

There is only one way by which any disease can be cured, and that is by removing the cause—whatever it may be. The great medical authorities of the day declare that nearly every disease is caused by deranged kidneys or liver. To restore these, therefore, is the only way by which health can be secured. Here is where WARNER'S SAFE CURE has achieved its great reputation. It acts directly upon the kidneys and liver and by placing them in a healthy condition drives disease and pain from the system. For all Kidney; Liver and Urinary troubles; for the distressing disorders of women; for Malaria, and physical troubles generally, this great remedy has no equal. Beware of impostors, imitations and concoctions said to be just as good.

The Habits, occupations, vices and unnatural modes of living which seem to follow civilization have the effect of depleting the human system of its necessary supply of Iron, and science having determined this, was bound to find means to re-establish that supply. It was an important and difficult task. But it has been accomplished. In the SULPHUR AND IRON BITTERS which have so quickly secured the endorsement of medical men as well as the public generally.

Iron in combination with other vital Tonics is found in a proper form for quick assimilation and the opinion of the ablest medical men who have examined this preparation is that it is the best thing of the kind ever invented.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

IT is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brashy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The VIGOR cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair

The VIGOR is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.

Messrs. W. Branscombe, Levi Payne, W. Yelland, John Bockell, Fred Payne, and W. Morris, while out still fishing in Stony Lake last week, caught six muskinonge and one salmon. The Peterborough Examiner says:—Five of the six muskinonge caught weighed 100 pounds, the six bringing down the scales at 113 pounds.

A "difference" arose between J. E. Proctor of Brighton, and W. Wilder, which resulted in the latter being brought before a Trenton Magistrate who dismissed the complaint. Another information was lodged against Wonder and he was placed in gaol here. Proctor has been served with a writ for $5,000 on that account.

The Napanee Beaver says:—"The pensioners of 1812, in this section, are receiving a circular dated at Sorel, P. Dr. A. Rockwell, James Clarke, License Commissioners for West Hastings, and M. J. Grainger, Inspector, presented themselves before the Council, asking for information relative to a By-law passed in 1875 by the Council, restricting the number of licenses to four in the Township.

The Reeve referred them to the Crooks Act, Sec. 15, which says in no case shall this limit authorize any increase in any municipality in excess of the number of licenses therein fixed for the year ending the 1st March, 1876, unless from the future increase of the population, the Council having taken no action in the matter, except in September, 1876 they refunded the hotel keepers $40 each, which they considered they had no authority to collect, as the Crooks Act took it out of their hands, unless they passed a By-law before the 1st March in each year increasing the fee, the Reeve held that the part of the By-law in force was that made by the Crooks Act which refers to restriction only.

An Aged Scoundrel.

HAMILTON, April 5.—James Robertson, who duped Rev. Dr. Stratton, of Buffalo, and Rev. Mr. Strachan, of Hamilton, was arrested here yesterday. The old man is over 70 years of age, and was married by Dr. Stratton to a Toronto boarding house keeper, aged 60, who secured her husband through the medium of an advertisement. He deceived his wife by representing himself as a millionaire railway man, and at the Police Court to-day Robertson was sent to jail for six months for larceny. Dr. Stratton, in giving his testimony, said:—"I never met a man with more perfect address than the prisoner. He had the manners and the conversation of a gentleman. I never heard anyone say 'I will' in the marriage ceremony with such emphasis. And the prayers he used to offer in my house I have seldom heard such prayers. And then his singing! He could beat me hollow at singing Moody and Sankey hymns especially 'Nearer, My God, to Thee.' Oh, he's a bad one." The reverend gentleman grew eloquent on the treatment which Robertson received at his house. "When he said, 'We treated him like a prince. My wife, who is sickly, came all the way from Philadelphia to take care of him after his wife went away. We bought him medicine, for he was quite sick, and surrounded him with luxury. And then how did he requite us? He represented himself as a millionaire—an owner of mining stock, a railway magnate, and so forth. He also presented my wife with a cheque on the Bank of Montreal for $200, which afterwards stole it from her. He was always interested in large banking operations."

Amphibious Boy Divers.

In the Singapore harbor, and in other places, we saw the boy-divers spoken of by all travellers in the East, writes a clergyman to the Troy Times. The moment we came to anchor our steamer was surrounded by a s arm of naked boys paddling about in their tiny canoes, laughing and shouting to us to throw a copper or a sixpence in the water, promising to catch it before it reached the bottom. In broken English they said:—"Now, you throw sixpence in water; me go down; me catch 'em ebery time; me good diver." Holding up a piece of silver, we shouted, "Ready!" A dozen eager tongues answered, "Ready!" Next moment the coin was glittering in the water ten or fifteen feet beyond them. In a moment two dozen feet were in the air, and a dozen black heads cleaving the water. Every boy disappeared. For full half a minute, which seemed half a hour, there was silence; then one after another came up the boy divers, one of them shouting, as he held up the money, "I've got it, master; I've got it, master." Chucking the coin into the only pocket he had (his mouth), he mumbled out, "Now, pop in a sandier one." We "popped in" another piece, still further away, and down again plunged the amphibious boy-divers, never failing to bring up the money.

A GOOD MEDICINE.—Mr. J. Wyatt, of Rockingham, N.C., has a little boy, five years old, who has been suffering with a skin disease, breaking out all over, ever since he was born. He administered it to the boy, and states there has been a wonderful improvement. The breaking out is rapidly disappearing, and the boy's appetite is good for the first time.—Danville, Va., Times.

BELLEVILLE, MONDAY, APRIL 9.

Canadian Finances.

Under this heading the Monetary Times criticises, in a fair spirit, the financial condition of the Dominion as shown by Sir Leonard Tilley's budget speech. Its opinion as that of an expert in such matters, being worthy of reproduction, we make the following extract :—"Results, it cannot be denied, have fairly vindicated the Tariff Policy. As an instrument for producing revenue, the tariff has exceeded the expectations alike of friend and foe. The consolidated revenue, which did not of course all come from customs, was $33,383,000, and the expenditure $27,007,000 last year ; the surplus being $,316,000. Under ordinary circumstances, a surplus is an abnormal thing and, when large, is generally the result of a mistaken estimate of the year's revenue. Sir Leonard Tilley has produced a surplus by deliberate design, on grounds of policy which he stoutly defends. This is one of the points on which his policy naturally meets with criticism. The ground is taken against the Government that there ought to be no surplus, that only just enough to pay the expenses of the Government ought to be taken from the people in the way of taxation. In a country with no debt to reduce and no public works to construct, this contention could not be gainsaid.

"It cannot be reasonably contended, however, that there are no occasions on which a surplus revenue is permissable. An objectless surplus deliberately produced, would indicate financial quackery. The present surplus is not without a purpose. Canada had been told that she ought not to attempt to build the Pacific railway ; that the work was too ambitious and the expense would be too great ; finally, that if she chose to set about the work, she ought to do it out of her own resources and not let the shadow of her sinister figure fall upon the stock exchanges of Europe. She was taunted with having had a succession of deficits, and reproached with her alleged financial weakness. These taunts merited a practical reply, and a practical reply has been given. It was worth while to give a demonstration of the power of the active resources of the country. We have produced, with comparative ease, a large surplus revenue ; and we have shown that, out of current revenue, we could in one year take over seven millions of dollars ($7,340,000). The building of the Pacific railway went on without recourse to a foreign loan, and without recourse to a foreign loan, Sir Leonard Tilley estimates that it can go on again this year. * * *

"The Minister of Finance feels a natural pride in seeing Canadian securities at the head of the colonial list. The fact is partly due to the financial strength which the country has shown under the present tariff. Not that the varying prices of securities always afford an indication even of the relative value, at different times, of those securities. A better test is the average dividend when they are dividend-earning. The price of Government securities and the rate of interest they bear, afford a test of the credit of the country ; and it is gratifying to see the credit of the country stands higher to-day than ever it stood before."

Our contemporary is not altogether pleased with the prospect of a considerable surplus for the coming financial year ; but, in another article, it makes the following statement, which modifies that opinion materially. It says :

"We are promised another reduction in the tariff, which will lessen the year's revenue a million or a million and a quarter of dollars. A reduction to the latter figure was made last year."

"A Bad Practice."

"Change sides, and handy dandy, which is the Justice, and which is the thief?"

Under the above heading the Ontario boils over with virtuous indignation because, as it asserts, "Mr. Dawson M.P. has, as it appears, been using his influence as a member of the House of Commons, not merely as an elector, let it be noted, with the constituency of Algoma on behalf of the Opposition in the Local Legislature" ; and on this text indites a hypocritical homily on the principle which "Mr. Blake, on first taking office, laid down * * in a very decided manner" ; namely, that Parliament and the Legislatures "should be distinct in the most emphatic sense of the word," and concludes as follows : "It would be as well if the position of Parliament as a body, and as composed of individual members in relation to the Legislatures was clearly defined while the constitution is yet young, and such unwarrantable conduct as that of Mr. Dawson condemned, and its repetition and imitation prevented before such bad practice becomes more precedent." (sic : the italics are ours.)

This is a fair example of the dense obtuseness and purblind incapacity with which the local Grit organ habitually treats every political subject which, for its misfortune, it undertakes to notice. Parliament, "as a body," does not and cannot interfere in any way, manner, or shape with the local elections ; nor can any individual member, as such, exercise any influence over the same, though "individual members" may certainly exercise the same right of interference claimed by Mr. Mowat, when he stood on the same platform with Mr. Blake during the Dominion elections.

But this pure and patriotic sheet had no word of reproof or condemnation, but plenty of applause and encouragement for Messrs. Mowat, Fraser, Hardy, Pardee, and their army of Commissioners, Inspectors, County Court Clerks, contractors and bumbailiffs, when they throw their whole force and influence against the Conservative candidates in the Dominion elections. Oh ! no ! no "bad practice " there.

Verily it makes some difference whose ox is gored—and the Grit ox has been badly gored this time.

Editorial Brevities.

The Montreal Witness is decidedly behind the times in blaming the N. P. for not reducing importations. As the Toronto World forcibly points out : "The truth is that in some respects the N. P. is only now beginning to work. In their eagerness to fight against it, and to prove that it will not avail to establish manufactures in Canada, both English and American exporters have been crowding goods into this market beyond what it could reasonably take. Meantime the production of goods in Canada has been increasing, and they find at last that they have about reached the end of their tether in trying to force upon this country more of their goods than is really wanted."

The Mail thus mercilessly, but deservedly ridicules the Provincial Secretary :

"He (Mr. Hardy) felt that in this case he could use the words of Mercutio in reference to the wound inflicted by Tybalt. 'Tis not so deep as a well, nor so wide as a church door ; but 'tis enough, 'twill serve.' So it was with Mr. Mowat's majority ; though not so large as before—it was large enough, and would serve. —Mr. Hardy at Clinton.

"A more infelicitous quotation from 'Romeo and Juliet' could hardly have been selected by the Provincial Secretary. In fine, it is a confession of the mortal stroke. Let us quote the volatile friend of the hero, of whom it is said that he would have slaughtered Shakespeare if the latter had not killed him :

'I am hurt—a plague on both your houses ! I am spe.l.'

Romeo : Courage man ; the hurt cannot be much.'

Mercutio : 'No, 'tis not so deep as a well, nor so wide as a church door ; but 'tis enough, 'twill serve ; ask for me to-morrow and you shall find me a grave man.'

"It was here, you see, that Brother Hardy came in with his little scissors. What he 'felt,' may be easily imagined when he admitted practically that the most unbrilliant of Mercutios had 'passed in his 'checks.' It was rather hard on the vivacious friend of Romeo to compare him with Mr. Mowat ; yet the whirligig of time brings about its revenges. The Premier, it stands confessed, has shuffled off, politically, his mortal coil. He is as dead as a door nail, Mr. Hardy being a witness."

Riches in Hop Farming.

At the present prices, ten acres in Hops will bring more money than five hundred acres in any other farming ; and, if there is a consumer or dealer who thinks the price of Hop Bitters high, remember Hops are $1.25 per lb., and the quantity and quality of Hops in Hop Bitters and the price remains the same as formerly. Don't buy or use worthless stuff or imitations because the price is less.

Presbytery Notes.

Messrs. C. Cameron and W. Allen have been examined by a committee of the Kingston Presbytery. They asked to be taken under the care of the Presbytery, and given home mission work. Their examination was favorable. It will be reported. The appointments were :

A NEW CANADIAN STEAMSHIP. The new steamship Oregon of the Dominion Line, a sister ship to the Sarnia, owned by the same company, has just made her first voyage from Liverpool to Portland, and on her return voyage will take no cattle. The Oregon is a fine steamer, a four-decker with saloon amidships which, as well as the ladies' cabin, is commodious and beautiful. Her dimensions are 375 feet in length, 45 feet beam and 33 feet depth of hold ; and she has accommodation for 100 cabin, 5 intermediate and 1,000 steerage passengers. Egines are 500 h. p. nominal, but can be worked to 2,500.

Beware of Imitations.

Since Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has become celebrated, a number of unprincipled persons have been endeavoring to palm off Electron and Electric Oil for the genuine DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. Beware of these similar named articles. If their originators had any faith in the healing properties of their own medicines they would, like honest men, give them name of their own, and not try to sell them on the reputation of another ; but as they know their preparations have no merit, they resort to the most unprincipled means of selling them by getting a name as near as possible to Eclectric. We therefore ask the public when purchasing to see that the name Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is on the front of the wrapper, and the signature of NORTHROP & LYMAN, the proprietors for Canada on the back.

IS THE history of medicine no preparation has received such universal commendation for the alleviation it affords, and the permanent cure it effects in kidney diseases, as DR. VAN BUREN'S KIDNEY-CURE. Its action in these distressing complaints is simply wonderful. Sold by all Druggists.

Death of Senator Gibbs.

The Hon. Thomas Nicholson Gibbs, whose death is announced as having taken place in Oshawa on the 7th, was born in Terrebonne, Q., in March, 1821,—his father, a cousin of P. W. Gibbs, C.B., a tutor to the Prince of Wales, having removed there from Kingsbridge, Devonshire, Eng., in 1819. In 1832 the family removed to Oshawa, Ont., being amongst the first to settle in that now prosperous town. Mr. Gibbs was educated in England, and on his return began to take a lively interest in the public affairs of this country. He was the first Reeve elected for Oshawa—in 1850—and the first Warden elected for the County of Ontario —in 1854. He was first elected to the Canadian Assembly in 1866 and sat for that constituency until the Union, and in the Dominion House of Commons until the general elections of 1874. The previous year he had been appointed Secretary of State for the provinces, which position he soon resigned for that of Minister of Inland Revenue, and thus formed one of the Ministry of that day, which resigned on account of the loss of confidence incurred through the Pacific slander. He was recently appointed to a seat in the Senate. Mr. Gibbs was one of the most enterprising men of his time, having been largely interested in milling and manufacturing, and having filled the offices of President of the Dominion Telegraph Company and of the Ontario and Standard Banks. He was also well known as a Christian worker, there being many scattered throughout Canada who will long remember his interesting and valuable instructions in the Sabbath school, while he gave with a free hand to charitable and religious objects.

The SS. Brooklyn Ashore.

PORTLAND, Me., April 7.—The steamer Brooklyn of the Dominion Line, from Portland to Liverpool, went ashore last night on Hog Island ledge, Casco Bay. She is in a bad position and full of water. The passengers have been brought here. The hold is full of water to the steerage.

The SS. Brooklyn is an iron vessel of 3,609 tons, and was built in Glasgow in 1869. She was formerly known as the City of Brooklyn of the Inman Line, and is a first class screw vessel. She was in charge of a pilot at the time of the disaster. Captain Gibson, who commands her, was the same man who has lately so successfully brought in the SS. Quebec to Liverpool. She will probably be lightened and floated.

SCENE—Front of Brignall & Thompson's south window. Persons: Two small boys returning from school. Dialogue: Jimmie: "Look a-here, Tom, ain't them some pumpkins! Wonder who they are for?" Tom: "Whew! Oh, my sire! aren't they fine! them's the daisies. Who are they for! why, for the Salvation Army, of course; didn't ye hear they was a coming!"

ON Friday last one resident of Peterborough bet another that the latter could not get away with three dozen raw eggs. The man who accepted the bet sat three dozen and two. On a certain occasion, a man entered Walker's grocery store in this city, and on the assertion of parties that they would pay for all the eggs he'd eat, he got outside seven dozen and two. And he wasn't very hungry either.

A VERY large congregation assembled in Bridge St. Church last night to hear the Rev. Dr. Jeffers preach on "Endless Punishment." The text selected was Luke 16, 26, "And beside all these between us and you there is a great gulf fixed; so that they which would pass from hence to you cannot; neither can they pass to us, that would come to you." After some prefatory remarks, the Rev. Dr. divided his subject into two heads, First, the Scripturalness of the doctrine, and, 2. Second, the reasonableness of the doctrine.

A FEW days ago a tramp entered the dwelling of Michael Mullins and demanded something to eat. Mrs. Mullins supplied him with food, after which she ordered him to leave the premises. He refused to comply and she, in the absence of her husband, went to a neighbor for assistance. The neighbor went to the house, but Mullins' dog would not let the neighbor in, nor the tramp out, nor did the latter get away till Mr. Mullins came home, after which he bestowed some muscular compliments on his visitor, who took his departure very hurriedly.

SUNDAY MORNING'S FIRE.

AT 2:30 on Sunday morning, the department responded to the alarm of fire, the rear premises on the Dafoe property, opposite the INTELLIGENCER Office, and these owned by Mrs. Neilson to the south of the first named, having been discovered to be in flames. The fire had made considerable headway before it was noticed, and the contents of the buildings could not be removed. The structures were of wood and became a ready prey to the devouring elements. The firemen labored hard & d faithfully, and through their efforts the adjoining property was saved. The barn and sheds on the Dafoe property were occupied by Edwin Harris, who lost a cow, a load of hay, and a quantity of wood. The stables on the Neilson property were occupied by Mr. Foster, Sr., who lost a horse, buggy, two sets of harness, three tons of hay, two loads of straw and a variety of appliances necessary in the business of a veterinary. A stallion owned by James Broad, of Ameliasburg, which was stabled on these premises, was also burned to death. A horse owned by J. Miller, of Thurlow, which had been under Dr. Foster's care for about two months, was taken out of the stable, but as it had inhaled hot air and smoke, it cannot live. The animal ran away about two months ago and suffered a dislocation of the right shoulder and was considered perfectly sound again.) Robert Hamilton occupied a small stable in rear of his agricultural implement store and lost some hay, grain and a robe. James D. Clarke, who occupies the dwelling over this store, lost a quantity of furniture and the contents of other portions of the apartments occupied by him, were greatly damaged by water. Harris place his loss at $60, uninsured; Dafoe figures his at $400, uninsured; Mrs. Neilson loses $1,000 and she is insured in the Royal for $600; Mr. Foster's loss is $500, no insurance. Broad's loss is $500, no insurance. (It is said he had been offered that sum for the animal and that it was to go into the possession of Mr. Coe, of Madoc this week, at the figure named.) Miller's horse was valued at $200, no insurance. Hamilton's loss is about $5, no insurance. J. D. Clarke's loss is about $100 and he was not insured. A frame stable on the north of that occupied by Harris, and owned by George Taylor, was damaged to the extent of $20.

The origin of the fire is a mystery.

Considering the fact that the bell did not ring until some time after the alarm was first given, and that the flames were in full control of the stables before the firemen came on the scene, the members of the brigade are deserving of great commendation for the work done by them in preventing the further spread of the fire.

Spring Assizes

MONDAY 9th April, 1883.

The Court opened at 1.30 this afternoon with Mr. Justice Armour on the Bench.

The Grand Jury list was called, after which Mr. F. R. Daly was chosen foreman.

In addressing them His Lordship said he was happy to state that there were but few cases on the calendar that would require investigation by them and none of these were of a very serious character. This should be a matter of congratulation to the members of the jury and also to the County, as in a County with a population of 60,000, it was gratifying that so few cases would be brought before the Court—if the calendar was an index of the character of the County. The case of the most importance that would be submitted to them, was one of arson. He explained the nature of the offence and remarked that it required careful investigation and that the accused should be put on trial if a fair case were shown against him. The other cases on the docket, they were doubtless well acquainted with. The Jury should visit the gaol, which perhaps was superfluous, on account of the laws and the fact that such institutions were visited by a Government Inspector. Scandals had been brought to light on the other side, in the management of almshouses and the disclosures at the investigations into the Government of Sing Sing had revealed wrong, and therefore it was but right that Grand Juries should have supervision over gaols. If there were any complaints by the prisoners the jury should note them; if they could suggest any improvements or sanitary arrangements, they should do so. The gaol, doubtless like others, had become a place of pleasant resort during the winter, rather than a place of punishment. The gaols, in some instances, had taken the place of poor houses and perhaps it would be judicious to set apart a portion of the gaol premises for those who were unable, through circumstances, to take care of themselves, as then the expense would fall on all alike. He desired the Jury to enter on their duties with despatch, as he was desirous of discharging them as soon as possible, so that the charge of idleness could not be brought against the jury. He trusted, in conclusion, that they would transact the business submitted to them as rapidly as possible consistent with their duties, so that he would be enabled to discharge them at an early date.

O. Hortle, of Manchester, Ontario Co., N.Y. writes:—"I obtained immediate relief from the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. I have had Asthma for eleven years. Have been obliged to sit up all night for ten or twelve nights in succession. I can now sleep soundly all night on a feather bed, which I had not been able to do previous to using the Oil."

UNEARTHING VILLAINS.

LONDON, April 7.—Kirton was arrested at the Euston Railway Station as he was about leaving the Metropolis for the North. Papers found on the other men in custody show that Kirton had been selected to commit the principal acts of destruction, under sealed orders from the chiefs of the secret organization. All the "dynamiters" have been removed to the Millbank Prison and placed in close and separate confinement under a special guard. The convict van in which they were taken to Millbank was escorted by a large force of police, armed with revolvers. From papers found in Whitehead's dynamite factory, at Birmingham, it is believed that a clue has been obtained as to the perpetrators of the Whitechapel murder, and exploding in 18 minutes. Similar dynamite has been seen only at the explosions at Glasgow and at the Times office here.

MURDERS IN IRELAND.

DUBLIN, April 7.—A man named Fraser has been arrested at Mullingar for the murder of Farrelly, in March, 1881. His arrest was made on evidence given by Patrick Devy, who is awaiting extradition to Boston, Mass. A convict sentenced at Tralee assizes has turned approver and given startling evidence of agrarian and other secret society crimes.

BATHTUBS DROWNED.

CHARLESTON, S. C., April 9.—Some timber rafts went in pieces in a gale at the mouth of the Edisto river; 3 raft tenders were drowned.

A BAR ROOM TRAGEDY.

NASHVILLE, April 9.—Last night James Grundy, a commercial traveller from Cincinnati, entered a restaurant here and called for a drink, which on account of the stringent Sunday Law, was refused him. Dudley, a son of ex Governor Porter, seated at the lunch counter eating, remarked, "Damn him, he is drunk already, fire him out." Grundy knocked Porter off the stool. They then grappled and fell, Grundy on the top. Porter cut Grundy over the head four times, making a fearful gash behind the ear. A clerk captured the knife and separated the combatants. The antagonists renewed the struggle, but Grundy was so weak from loss of blood that he fell heavily. Porter escaped. The mounted police captured him. Vague threats afterwards of lynching. It is believed Grundy will die.

Honest and Liberal,

When the Hops in each bottle of Hop Bitters (at the present price, $1.25 per lb.,) cost more than a bottle is sold for, besides the other costly medicines, and the quality and price are kept the same, we think it is honest and liberal in the proprietors, and no one should complain, or buy or use worthless stuff, or cheating bogus imitations because the price is less.

PREPARING FOR THE TRIALS.

DUBLIN, April 9.—A despatch says: Joe Brady, Timothy Kelly, Park Delaney, Thos. Caffery, Daniel Curley, and Fitzharris (known as "Skin the goat") charged with the Phœnix Park murders and other crimes, who will be placed on trial to-day, were to have been conveyed from Kilmainham prison to the court house at 8 this morning, under a strong escort of policemen. The Government feel rather afraid friends of the prisoners will attempt a rescue, and special measures have been taken to ensure the safety of the court building. Suspicious looking men who resemble Americans have been seen in Phœnix Park and other parts of Dublin, in the last few days. Detectives are watching their movements.

HOW THE DYNAMITERS ARE TO BE PUNISHED.

LONDON, April 9.—The Government's bill to be introduced in the House of Commons relative to the explosions, will provide that the maximum penalty for the causing of explosions by which life or property is imperilled shall be lifelong servitude; an attempt to cause an explosion or making or keeping explosives with intent to cause an explosion is made punishable by imprisonment for 20 years; and the unlawful making or keeping of explosives under suspicious circumstances to be punishable by 14 years imprisonment. All accessories to such to be treated as principals. The bill provides for the ordering of official inquiries into crimes and specifies for the arrest of absconding witnesses and for searching for explosives. Penalties shall be inflicted irrespective of the damage done by explosives.

CHAPTER XX.

The dead blank that comes after excitement of any kind is very trying to bear. The dull flow of monotonous life, following the departure of the Scotch baronet, told severely on Kate. The feverish excitement of that brief second engagement had sustained her, and kindled a brighter fire in her blue eyes, and a hot glow on her pale cheeks. But in the stagnant quiet that succeeded, the light grew dim, the roses faded, and the old lassitude and weariness returned. She had not even the absorbing task of playing amateur Sister of Charity, for the fever was almost gone, and there was no more left for her to do.

There was no scandal or eclat this time about the broken off marriage, for it had been kept very secret—only in the kitchen cabinet there were endless surmisings and wonderings.

The wedding garments made for the second time for Miss Danton were for the second time put quietly away.

Father Francis, in all his visits to Danton Hall, never made the slightest allusion to the event that had taken place. Only, he laid his hand on Kate's drooping head with a "Heaven bless you, my child!" so fervently uttered that she felt repaid for all the humiliation she had undergone.

So very quietly at Danton Hall December wore away, and Christmas eve dawned. Grace Danton's wedding day. About ten in the morning the large, roomy, old fashioned family sleigh drove up before the front door, and the bridal party entered, and were whirled to the church. A very select party indeed; the bride and bridegroom, the bride's brother, and the bridegroom's two daughters.

Grace's brown velvet bonnet, brown silk dress, and seal jacket were not exactly the prescribed attire for a bride; but with the hazel hair, smooth and shining, and the bloom and pink of happy light, Grace looked very sweet and fair.

Eeny, in pale silk, and a pretty hat with a large white plume, looked fair, as a lily and happy as a queen, and very proud of her pair of bride maid.

And Kate, who was carrying her cross bravely now, very simply attired, sat beside Doctor Frank and tried to look and seem interested in what he was saying, and all the time feeling like one in some unnatural dream. She saw the dull, gray, sunless sky, speaking of coming storm, the desolate snow covered fields, the quiet village, and the little church, with its tall spire and glittering cross. She saw it all in a vague, lost sort of way, and was in the church and at the altar, hearing and listening and looking on, like a person walking in her sleep. Her father going to be married! How strange and unnatural it seemed. She had never quite realized it before. Nurse, governess, confidante in the house, perhaps because she would never indulge it, and now he was kneeling on the altar steps, with Frank Danton beside him, and Eeny at Grace's left hand, and the Cure and Father Francis were there in stole and surplice, and the ceremony was going on. She saw the ring put on Grace's finger, she heard the Cure's French sentences, and, "Henry Danton, wilt thou have Grace Danton to be thy wedded wife? and that firm, clear 'I will,' in reply.

Then it was all over; they were married. Her pale face dropped on the on the front rail of the pew, and wet it with a rain of hot tears.

The wedding quartet were going into the sacristy to register their names. She could linger no longer, although she felt as if she would like to stay there and die, so she arose and went wearily after. Her father looked at her with anxious, imploring eyes; she went up and kissed him, with a smile on her colorless face.

"I hope you will be very happy, papa," she whispered.

And then she turned turned to Grace, and touched her cold lips to the bride's flushed cheek.

"I wish you very much happiness, Mrs. Danton," she said.

Yes, she could never be mother—she was only Mrs. Danton; her father's wife; but Father Francis gave her a kindly, approving glance, even for this. She turned away from him with a weary sigh. Oh, what trouble and mockery everything was! What a dreary, wrecked piece of business life was altogether! The sense of loneliness and desolation weighed on her heart, this dull December morning, like lead.

There was to be a wedding breakfast, but the Cure, and Father Francis, and Doctor Frank were the only guests.

Kate sat at her father's side—Grace presided now, Grace was mistress of the Hall —and listened in the same dazed and dreary way to the confusion of tongues, the fire of toasts, the clatter of china and silver, and the laughter of the guests. She sat very still, eating and drinking, because she must eat and drink to avoid notice, and never thinking how beautiful she looked in her blue silk dress, her neck and arms gleaming like ivory against azure. What would it ever matter again how she looked!

Captain and Mrs. Danton were going on a brief bridal tour to Toronto—not to be absent over a fortnight. They were to depart by the afternoon train; so, breakfast over, Grace hurried away to change her dress. Dr. Frank was going to drive Eeny to the station, in the cutter, to see them off, but Kate declined to accompany them. She shook hands with them at the door; and then turned and went back into the empty, silent house.

A wedding, when the wedded pair, ashamed of themselves, go scampering over the country in search of distraction and amusement, leaves any household almost as forlorn as a funeral. Dead silence succeeds tumult and bustle; those left behind sit down blankly, feeling a gap in their circle, a loss never to be repaired. It was worse than usual at Danton Hall. The wintry weather, precluding all possibility of seeking forgetfulness and recreation out of doors, the absence of visitors—for the Cure, Father Francis, Doctor Danton, and the Reverend Mr. Clare comprised Kate's whole visiting list now—all tended to make dismalness more dismal. She could remember this time last year, when Reginald and Rose, and Sir Ronald, and all were with them—so many then, so few now; only herself and Eeny left.

The memory of the past time came back with a dulled sense of pain and misery. She had suffered so much that the sense of suffering was blunted—there was only a desolate aching of the heart when she thought of it now.

December and the old year died out in a great wailing burst of snow. January came, and its first week dragged away, and the master and mistress of the house were daily expected home.

Late in the afternoon of a January day, Kate sat at the drawing-room window, her chin resting on her hand, her eyes fixed on the white darkness. The wind made such a racket and uproar within and without, that she did not hear a modest tap at the door, or the turning of the handle. It was only when a familiar voice sounded close to her elbow that she started from her reverie.

"If you please, Miss Kate,"

"Oh, is it you Ogden? I did not hear you. What is the matter?"

Mr. Ogden drew nearer and lowered his voice.

"Miss Kate, have you been upstairs today?"

Kate knew what he meant by this rather guarded question—had she been to see Mr. Richards?

"No," she said in alarm; "is there anything the matter?"

"I am afraid there is, Miss Kate. I am afraid he is not very well."

"Not very well!" repeated Miss Danton, "Do you mean to say he is ill, Ogden?"

Racked by Innumerable Pangs, restless by day, sleepless at night, rising unrefreshed in the morning, without appetite and pester'd by wearying and perplexing symptoms, the dyspeptic takes indeed a gloomy view of human existence. For him the zest of life seems gone. Heartburn, oppression at the pit of the stomach, and the attendant annoyances of constipation and biliousness, combine to render him utterly wretched. But there is, if he will but take advantage of it, a reliable source of reliable relief from all misery. Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure is, as its name imports, a vegetable preparation, free from mineral poison, and an all-sufficient remedy for indigestion in its most obstinate form. It not only purifies the blood by enabling the digestive organs to convert the food received into nutriment, but depurates it by increasing the activity of the bowels and kidneys, the natural outlets for its impurities. But while it relaxes the bowels, it never does so violently and with pain, like a drastic cathartic. It does, but never forces. Naturi, invigorating as well as purifying and regulating the system. It thoroughly removes those diseased humors which tend to vitiate the blood, purifies the urinary secretion, and promotes a flow of healthy bile into the natural channel, besides expelling it from the circulation. Experience has proved that this standard medicine is a thorough remedy for dyspepsia, biliousness, costiveness, kidney complaints, scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, lumbago and all impurities of the blood. Price $1.00. Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac-simile of their signature. Sold by all medicine dealers.

WARNER'S SAFE CURE
FOR THE KIDNEYS, LIVER AND URINARY ORGANS.
THE BEST BLOOD PURIFIER.

There is only one way by which any disease can be cured, and that is by removing the cause—whatever it may be. The great medical authorities of the day declare that nearly every disease is caused by deranged kidneys or liver. To restore these, therefore, is the only way by which health can be secured. Here is where WARNER'S SAFE CURE has achieved its great reputation. It acts directly upon the kidneys and liver and by placing them in a healthy condition drives disease and pain from the system. For all Kidney, Liver and Urinary troubles; for the distressing disorders of women; for Malaria, and physical troubles generally, this great remedy has no equal. Beware of impostors, imitations and concoctions said to be just as good.

For Diabetes ask for WARNER'S SAFE DIABETES CURE.

Plain Truths!

The blood is the foundation of life, it circulates through every part of the body and unless it is pure and rich, good health is impossible, if disease has entered the system the only sure and quick way to drive it out is to purify and enrich the blood.

These simple facts are well known and the highest medical authorities agree that nothing but iron will restore the blood to its natural condition; and also that all the Iron preparations hitherto made blacken the teeth, cause headache, and are otherwise injurious.

Sulphur and Iron Bitters will thoroughly and quickly assimilate with the blood, purifying and strengthening it and thus drive disease from any part of the system, and it will not blacken the teeth cause headache or constipation and is positively not injurious.

St. Johnsbury, Vermont Oct. 21st 1882.

For six years I have been a great sufferer from blood disease, dyspepsia and consumption, and became so debilitated that I could not retain anything on my stomach, in fact life had at times become a burden, and when hope had almost left me, I was induced to give Sulphur and Iron Bitters a trial I am now taking the first bottle and have not felt so well in six years as I do at present.

Mrs. S. L. Moore.

Sulphur and Iron Bitters effectually cures dyspepsia, indigestion and weakness, and renders the greatest relief and benefit to persons suffering from such diseases as kidney and liver complaints, dyspepsia, indigestion etc.

Cathartic Pills

Combine the choicest cathartic principles in medicine, in proportions accurately adjusted to secure activity, certainty, and uniformity of effect. They are the result of years of careful study and practical experiment, and are the most effectual remedy yet discovered for diseases caused by derangements of the stomach, liver, and bowels, which require prompt and effectual treatment. Ayer's Pills are specially applicable to this class of diseases. They act directly on the digestive and assimilative processes, and restore a regular healthy action. Their extensive use by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, is one of the many proofs of their value as a safe, sure, and perfectly reliable purgative medicine. Being compounded of the concentrated virtues of purely vegetable substances, they are positively free from calomel or any injurious properties, and can be administered to children with perfect safety.

Ayer's Pills are an effectual cure for Constipation or Costiveness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Foul Stomach and Breath, Dizziness, Headache, Loss of Memory, Numbness, Biliousness, Jaundice, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Dropsy, Tumors, Worms, Neuralgia, Colic, Gout, Erysipelas, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Gout, Piles, Disorders of the Liver, and all other diseases resulting from a disordered state of the digestive apparatus.

As a Dinner Pill they have no equal.

While gentle in their action, these Pills are the most thorough and searching cathartic that can be administered, and never gripe unless the bowels are inflamed, and then their influence is beneficial. They stimulate the appetite and digestive organs; they operate to purify and enrich the blood, and impart renewed health and vigor to the whole system.

Lady Florence Dixie

WAS HER STATEMENT THE RESULT OF FEMALE HALLUCINATION?

The curious attack which Lady Florence Dixie makes to leave men out of the question in mes disguised as women, and from whose daggers she was mercifully saved by the intervention of a dog, reminds one of a story that has given rise to much comment in the London press. The following remarks from the British Medical Journal are to the point. Recent circumstances have directed attention to the remarkable delusions to which females of suitable, nervous organization are subject, either through hysteria or through similar disorders of the nervous system. Charcot and Barnes cite five instances of the extraordinary self deceptions that are frequent among hysterical patients. Dr. Legrand du Saulle, physician to the Salpetriere, Paris, describes in his standard work, "Les Hysteriques," some remarkable cases of hallucination, where females labored under the belief that they have been struck or stabbed by others, even after having inflicted blows or wounds upon themselves. In one instance a knife was actually found by her husband lying on the floor of her room in a fainting fit, her face covered with blood. On raising her head, her spouse she stated that she had been attacked by a strange man; the Paris newspapers related the case, and within three weeks two similar events occurred in the French metropolis. All these cases proved to be fabricated by the supposed victims. A young girl wounded herself slightly with a pistol, then fired a shot through a door as the most minute details about an imaginary assassin, who, according to her account, fired the weapon, but was forced to run by highly hysterical, and it was proved that she had wilfully wounded herself. In a third case in Dr. du Saulle's practice a young woman was found in a railway carriage, stabbed in the left side. The incident caused great excitement, but it was proved, contrary to her assertions, that she had inflicted the wound herself, and was a hysterical subject. A housemaid was found lying behind a door in a fainting condition covered with bruises. She stated that she had been brutally attacked by two burglars with blackened faces, but she was in perfect health, local woman, and there appears to have been strong evidence that she had contrived to tie her own hands and to gag and bruise herself. Perhaps the strangest case of all occurred to M. Tardieu's practice. A young lady, living at Courbevoie, wished to make herself an object of public interest by posing as a victim of a political conspiracy, which she pretended to have discovered. One night she was found in a state of the greatest mental perturbation at the door of her apartment. She could not talk, but stated in writing that she had been attacked outside her own house by a man, who had attempted to kill her. She made the same time striking her twice with a dagger. Only the lady's clothing was injured, and the body of her dress and her waist were found to be cut through, but at different levels. She tried to make out that the attempt at strangulation had caused the injuries. The doctor remarked in her hearing that this infirmity rapidly disappeared when produced under circumstances of this kind. She soon managed to regain her speech, and in a short time admitted that the whole narrative had been developed out of her inner consciousness. Eccentricity in relation to dress strongly presumptive of self-deception, when a female makes any statement or charges of ill treatment of any kind. The commonest case of assassination, especially if based on reasonable grounds, is particularly liable to predispose nervous or excitable subjects to extraordinary delusions of this kind.

Birds and Telegraph Wires.

A paper has been read before the Electrotechnic society of Berlin giving some interesting particulars relative to birds and telegraph wires. In treeless districts the smaller birds in Germany are very fond of roosting on the poles and wires. Swallows frequently build under the eaves where wires run into telegraph offices, and usually stop working in consequence between the wire and some neighboring body which will carry the electric current to the earth. Storks with wings extended are often caused by large birds alighting on the wires and causing them to swing together and touch. Woodpeckers frequently pick holes through the telegraph poles, and in times of preparation of the wood seems to stop them from doing so. Sulphate of copper, corrosive sublimate, chloride of zinc, and other poisons have been applied to the wood as preservatives again rot; but the birds peck away at them all the same. At the recent electrical exhibition at the Crystal Palace a part of one of these pecked posts was shown. The theory was then broached that the woodpeckers mistook the vibration of the finished wire for the hum of insects, and attacked the post with the notion of getting at them. This theory is now doubted on the ground that the dry poles are frequently infested with insects. But wood saturated with the poisons named above must certainly be found distasteful, and peckers have evidently not yet found this out.

A Lonely Grave.

The Brandon Sun has the following episode relative to the decease of an unknown railway employee last summer: A little mound of earth on the open prairie about a mile east of Broadview is pointed out to travellers as the grave of an unknown navvy, who died last summer after a short illness, and who was laid at rest by his sorrowing comrades. No one knew who he was or where he came from; the only name he was known by was "Mac." "Mac" but he was a cheery companion, a good worker, and beloved by his comrades. When he died they made a rude coffin for his remains, dug a grave by the side of the track, and as they laid all that was mortal of their friend and companion beneath the sod in the resting place, repeated such portions of the burial service as had not escaped their memory. Four rough posts mark the spot. To those among them, died, and was buried. Name, age, parentage, all unknown—such is the brief history of this solitary grave on the prairie. A mother may be waiting tidings of an absent son, whose tongue is forever silenced, whose strong hand she will never again take in hers; perhaps a brother or a father, whose loved ones are all unconscious of his fate, and are hoping and waiting for the day when he will return to them. There is no one to tell them how vain is this longing; the man and his secret lie buried in that lonely grave near Broadview.

Petroleum Solidified.

The London Globe states that the important industrial intelligence has been received that M. Ditman, a Swede, in the employ of Nobel Bros., who monopolize the Caspian petroleum industry, has invented and patented a "process for solidifying kerosene," and returning it again into its natural or original form. M. Ditman made known what he could do, in scientific circles in St. Petersburg about a year ago, whereupon the Messrs. Nobel engaged him and carried him off to their works on the Caspian. It is first proposed to make kerosene candles at the Nobel works, which, it is said, can be shipped to all parts of the continent and sold at prices which will undersell any candle now in the market. The success of M. Ditman's process will revolutionize the Messrs. Nobel's enormous carrying trade, which at present employs a fleet of iron steamers and thousands of tankcars, inasmuch as solid "petroleum" will be transported with much greater facility and more cheaply than in liquid form. But the desired result has not been fully accomplished yet.

The Theory of Total Depravity.

The Toronto Globe, alarmed at the result of the Ontario elections, says: "It is now become imperative upon the Liberals that every shall choose between maintaining a perfect organization well supplied with means, or giving up the ideals of the Fathers." This means, just as surely as the Big Push letter was a demand for a contribution to a bribery fund, that in the Globe's opinion its party must bribe to win. It implies also that the electors of Canada are so utterly corrupt that no party can hope to convince them by fair means. In other words we must adopt the total depravity theory or pronounce the Globe's view calumnious. The Stratford Beacon, another Reform journal, favors the total depravity theory. In an article on the recent elections in Ontario it says:—"A large portion of our people will support any thing Sir John A. Macdonald proposes. There is no insult, no infamy, no wrong, no dishonor, that they will not endure—perhaps or should say enjoy, so long as it emanates from Sir John and is buried against their own Province." As Sir John Macdonald swept Ontario last June, we must believe, if he is the monster of wickedness painted by the Beacon and its confreres, that the majority of the people of that Province are hopelessly wedded to evil-doing. The more reasonable alternative is that the people voted for John as an able and patriotic man, not without his faults, of course, but on the whole a more competent and skilful leader than any of his opponents.

There was a time when Reform journals did with some success claim all the purity for their party. That was before the party had been found out. The revelations in the courts and the jobs perpetrated during the Mackenzie regime convinced the reasonable person, however, that in the matter of political righteousness there is not much to choose between Conservatives and Reformers. The latter certainly do not gain ground by playing the hypocrite.—The Winnipeg Times.

Canada's Governor-General.

A PEN-PICTURE BY A WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENT.

In a Washington letter to the New York Independent, Mrs. Mary Clemmer thus refers to Lord Lorne:—"And now in this year of grace, 1883, we have the Prince Louise's husband!" To the people who call him thus no illuminating thought has declared that we have something more in the Republican Capital—a real MacCallum More! As I looked upon the face of this very handsome man it meant vastly more for itself and its race. It is not need at all the refloried glory of any other. One who can bear on his ancestral shield the arms of the royal Plantagenets can scarcely borrow lustre from the Guelphs, even on a throne. As my sight fell upon him, it was more to me to remember that I saw before me the direct descendant of a hero who fell at Flodden, of another who was the friend of Mary Queen of Scots, that his grandmother was the beautiful Duchess of Sutherland, that his younger brother had been in trade in the city of New York—this wonderful collection of associations clustering around the person of one fair young man was more marvellous to me than the one that he had married a queen's daughter, though she in her own innocent personality is no inconsiderable person. The Marquis of Lorne is a man of commanding figure and of exceptional beauty of countenance. Tall, broad-shouldered, with the movement of a soldier, he throws back with a certain dauntless grace that has in it no self-conscious haughtiness, rather it is the unconscious expression of a fine character, the fine carriage that may become the inherited grace of a lofty race. His features are fine and strong, especially his brow and chin; but a picture which gives merely the outline of his features can impart no idea of the charm of his face, its alike by coloring and expression. So blonde a man is rarely seen; for not only is his abundant hair golden, but his eyelashes are of the same hue, long and curling outward; the deep gray blue eyes that gaze through them take on a remarkable expression, so purely spiritueile one instantly ceases to wonder that the Marquis of Lorne writes poetry, only to marvel much that he can be a canny Campbell, a Hebridean Scotsman. Beholding him for the first time, I understood, at last, the exclamation of a Boston maid made one year ago: "I have seen the Marquis of Lorne! You never saw so handsome a man! And he walks like a king."

A GOOD MEDICINE.—Mr. J. Wyatt, of Rockingham, N.C., has a little boy, five years old, who has been suffering with a skin disease, breaking out on the face, since he was born. He informs us, he saw the advertisement of Dr. J. C. Ayer's Sarsaparilla in the Danville Times, and immediately got it and administered it to the boy, and states there has been a wonderful improvement. The breaking out is rapidly disappearing, and the boy's appetite is good for the first time.—Danville, Va., Times.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA is sold by all druggists, and is a positive remedy for impurities of the blood.

G. W. Mingay, Parkdale, Toronto, writes: "My wife had several very severe attacks of cramps in the stomach, and tried a bottle of AUSTIN'S PHOSPHATINE, and its pleasantness to take, I gave her two bottles, and she has not had an attack since, and her health is much improved." Davy & Clark, Druggists, Renfrew, date of June 3rd, write:—"Burdock Blood Bitters, though comparatively a new preparation, has taken the lead in this locality as a blood purifier. Our sales of it have equalled the sale of all other medicines used for the purpose during the last year."

CUT THIS OUT.

"Frank P. Warner came into our store to purchase a sample bottle of ZOPESSA for a friend, and stated that he (Mr. Warner) was afflicted with Kidney and Liver troubles for years, and had paid $200 or $300 doctor's bills, and has now been completely cured by the use of two large bottles and one sample bottle of ZOPESSA. He was a fat man at one time that he lost 37 pounds of flesh, but after using ZOPESSA claims that he is a sound man, and now weighs 145 pounds. He was loud in its praise, and readily consented to allow us to use his name for reference.

BELLEVILLE, TUESDAY, APRIL 10.

Theft, Forgery and Falsehood.

The following letter from Mr. John A. Macdonnell disposes effectually of the attempt made by a Grit penny-a-liner—who admits that he is a thief, and only lacked the necessary courage to become a forger—to create a sensation by attributing a letter, which he had written, to Sir Charles Tupper:

To the Editor of the Mail.

SIR,—My attention has been called to the fact that some partly stolen and partly forged correspondence, alleged to have passed between Sir Charles Tupper and myself in the year 1879 on the subject of the purchase of the old Bank of Upper Canada buildings from the Government of Canada by the Christian Brothers, of which order his Grace the Archbishop is in this diocese the head, has been published in a Hamilton paper, ostensibly as a special telegraphic despatch from its Ottawa correspondent. The fact that such a message never passed over the wires obviates the necessity of characterizing the special correspondent in question as a very special liar. The remark, however, will apply with equal force to the editor of the journal in question, who published the correspondence knowing it to be false in material part if not in whole.

The gravamen of the attack which has been based upon the letters in question is that Sir Charles Tupper is alleged to have repeated in writing to me a statement alleged to have been made by Sir John Macdonald to him, that "no reliance is to be placed on the breed," i. e., the Irish Catholics. Sir Charles Tupper is perfectly aware that I am myself a Roman Catholic, Sir John Macdonald is aware that my mother was an Irish Catholic, and both know that my then partner, Mr Foy, is a Catholic Irishman. It is not probable, therefore, that Sir John Macdonald would make use of such an expression, intending it to be repeated to me, and that Sir Charles Tupper would put it in writing, thereby insulting us both, who, in addition to being political friends, were also the partners of his son. The fact that Sir John Macdonald never made the statement to Sir Charles Tupper, that Sir Charles Tupper never repeated it to me, never wrote, and that I never received such a letter, disposes somewhat effectually of the material portion of the scandal, and leaves the stigma of so dastardly a statement with the newspaper which first gave currency to it. I live in hope, however, that the Irish Catholic will survive it.

So far as my letter is concerned, I can only say that it was a private letter, and that I kept no copy of it. How far it is true, and how far untrue, I cannot at this distance of time say. It contains one expression, however, which certainly is not mine. The term "gent" is, I am informed, commonly used by that class of persons of whom the editor of the paper in question is typical. I never made use of it in my life, in conversation or in writing, and would not, therefore, have applied it to the distinguished Archbishop of Toronto.

It is apparent, therefore, that in addition to the black dishonor of reading and then publishing a private letter, these people have committed both theft and forgery.

I am at a loss to know to what to liken them. To compare them to pirates would be injustice to the latter, for they at least have one merit—they sail under their proper colors. Perhaps the best plan is not to attempt a comparison.

Yours, &c.,
JOHN A. MACDONNELL.

Editorial Brevities.

The verdict of a coroner's jury at Kingston has a marked significance for our local rulers. It is as follows:

"That Margaret Ann Burns came to her death from natural causes, no doubt hurried on from exposure in going to the police station, and confinement there on the night of March 10th. No blame can be attached to any officer of the police in the discharge of his duty. We do not think the police cells a fit and proper place of confinement for any human being; as they are not capable of being properly ventilated."

The Peterborough Review makes this good point: "Speaking of the Orange Bills, the Globe says Sir John Macdonald can 'whip the French Bleus into line' if he wishes. Speaking of the Boundary Award the Globe says that those same Quebec Bleus have coerced Sir John Macdonald into robbing his own Province. It would be well for our contemporary to try if it could make its falsehoods a little more consistent."

The Globe dogmatically asserts that the Premier did not, in his speech on the address, say that the Dominion Parliament had not the right to impose a second license fee on liquor sellers. This is a mere quibble. When Sir John said that the license fee was payable to the Provincial Government, he said, in a way which everybody could understand, that the Provinces only could impose a license fee.

The Globe alleges that "a high tariff is simply high taxation." This allegation is not true, nor is it true that a low tariff means low taxation. Great Britain with a low tariff raises a revenue of $450,000,000 or thereabouts, or say $14 for every head of the population of the country. Canada, with a much higher tariff, raises less than $8 per head of her population. Every inhabitant of Great Britain and Ireland thus pays $6 more for Governmental purposes than does his fellow Briton who resides in the Dominion of Canada. Moreover, the taxation in Great Britain is felt much more than in Canada, as a large portion of the revenue of that country is derived from direct taxation, which is unknown in Canada except for municipal purposes. Thus it is apparent that the high tariff of Canada is not high taxation, as compared with the low tariff of the mother country.

The Montreal Witness (Grit) frankly admits that the Conservatives polled very nearly as many votes as did their opponents in the recent elections for the Ontario Legislature. It says:—"In regard to the more recent Provincial returns the Globe has just published the majorities of the successful candidates of each party, and claims a majority of a little over three thousand of the entire vote cast in the Province in favor of its party. One of the leading Conservative journals, the INTELLIGENCER, gives also an elaborate statement claiming a majority of two hundred and sixty-nine for its party. Probably the actual truth lies somewhere between these figures. There are somewhere between a quarter of million and three hundred thousand voters in Ontario, and with such a close division or two successive contests the evenness of the balance is apparent enough. As matters stand the parliamentary majority in favor of the Mowat Government seems to be somewhere about eight or nine, with one election yet to take place, and a part of these representatives elected by the smallest possible majorities. The prize of Ontario seems so nearly within the reach of the Conservative party that their hope of yet obtaining it seems bright."

A friend favors us with an extract from the columns of our contemporary, which is herewith reproduced verbatim et literatim:

Sir Charles Tupper will take his pace on his back and go off to Britain in a dak or two. It would have paid Canada if by had done so long ago. The country has paid dear for the rule of Macdonald, Tupper & Co. But who will tak the Great Stretcher's place?

The above is truly remarkable, as well for the brutality of the reference to Sir Charles Tupper as for the fact that it is reproduced from the Hamilton Times without credit, and for the amusing typographical errors which fitly adorn it. How Sir Charles will look with his pace on his back, and how he will go off to Britain in a dak or two, we shall probably learn from this accurate and veracious chronicler in good time.

FLOUR FROM MANITOBA—A LARGE SHIPMENT—FIRST ARRIVAL BY THE NEW COMBINATION ROUTE.

(Montreal Witness, April 9.)

Some time ago the departure of a special train of freight from Montreal to Winnipeg by the Canadian Pacific and Vanderbilt combination route was chronicled in this paper. It appears that a return trade of some magnitude by the same route is now beginning. A train of twenty-one cars of flour shipped by Messrs. A. W. Ogilvie & Co., from Winnipeg on the 28th of March, arrived at Hochelaga on Friday last, April 6th, thus doing the whole distance within ten days. This is remarkably good time when the zig zag character of the route is considered. This is the first shipment of produce cast by this route, and the first fruits of the great harvest which will result from the development of the North West.

Riches in Hop Farming.

At the present prices, ten acres in Hops will bring more money than five hundred acres in any other farming; and, if there is a consumer or dealer who thinks the price of Hop Bitters high, remember Hops are $1 25 per lb., and the quantity and quality of Hops in Hop Bitters and the price remains the same as formerly. Don't buy or use worthless stuff or imitations because the price is less.

Trenton Correspondence.

TRENTON, April 7th, 1883.

The voting on the separation from the County of Hastings took place yesterday and separation was carried by 89 majority. The majority of the community were not aware that an election was being held. The County have every reason to be thankful to the Corporation of Trenton for separating from the County for municipal purposes, as Trenton has ever been an expensive appendage to the County.

Capt. Forte is making the necessary preparations for the opening of navigation, which he believes will not occur before the 25th of the present month.

Messrs. Gilmour & Co. have put heavy sieving on their "Crater" or large furnace for burning up refuse mill wood.

The busy hammer of the carpenter can be heard in almost every direction, notwithstanding the cold weather, in constructing new buildings, and converting every building into a dwelling that can be made available.

The ice is firm in the river yet. Crossing the river with teams has been discontinued above the bridge.

I am advised that S. S. Peck, ex M. P. P., was on Thursday last re-appointed Stipendiary Magistrate for Haliburton, at a salary of $1,200 per annum.

Beware of Imitations.

Since Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has become celebrated, a number of unprincipled persons have been endeavoring to palm off Electrics and Electric Oil for the genuine DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. Beware of these similar named articles. If these originators had any faith in the healing properties of their own medicines they would, like honest men, give them name of their own, and not try to sell them the reputation of another; but as they know their preparations have no merit, they resort to the most unprincipled means of selling them by getting a name as near as possible to Eclectric. We therefore ask the public when purchasing to see that the name Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is on the front of the wrapper, and the signature of NORTHROP & LYMAN, the proprietors for Canada on the back.

THE PHŒNIX PARK MURDERERS.

The Last Act in the Tragedy Approaching.

Trial of the Murderers.

TRUE BILLS.

DUBLIN, April 9.—The jury have found a true bill against Joe Brady, one of the alleged Phœnix Park murderers. He pleads not guilty. True bills were returned to-day at the Green street Court House against Timothy Kelly, Daniel Curley, Patrick Delaney, James Mallett, Peter Maroney, the brothers Hanlon, Thos. Caffrey, Tim Fegan and Fitzharris alias Skin the Goat, for being concerned in the Phœnix Park assassinations. Special guards surrounded the court, and large crowds gathered in the vicinity. Judge O'Brien presided. The prisoners were brought to court under the escort of a troop of dragoons.

DUBLIN, April 10.—The trial of Brady, on the charge of murdering Cavendish and Burke, has been postponed until to-morrow, owing to Adams, the counsel assigned by the Court, declining to conduct the defense on the ground that he was not prepared. The court house is strongly guarded again to day.

Tweed Correspondence.

An accident of a serious nature happened Joseph Pringle the other day. His son and he were splitting wood in the yard. He was in the act of piling up some, when he threw back his left hand and the son's axe came in contact with his wrist, severing the hand from the arm, except just a little skin. Dr. Pomeroy is in attendance, and hopes it will be all right again, but it will take some time.

The Rev. gentleman made a suitable reply and thanked the friends who thought him worthy of such a costly gift. He would long remember the people of Tweed and he would wear the gift with pride, not for its intrinsic value but from the manner in which the presentation had been made.

A superb oyster supper was then partaken of by those present.

THE most serious damage done by the ice in its passage down the river, was the tearing down of about 70 feet of the wing dam at Walker & Co.'s foundry, thus partially destroying the water power. As, however, the firm have a steam engine, they are independent of water power, and their business will suffer no interruption. A portion of Lazier's dam was also torn away.

IN the Police Court to-day, a charge of violating the liquor law, preferred by the Inspector against Dr. Deane, of Trenton, was enlarged. Thomas Parsons, for being drunk, was fined $20 and costs, and for abusing Officer Newton was assessed a similar sum, or 4 months in gaol for each offence.; Lewis Miller and Robert Barrow, charged with vagrancy, were dismissed.

G. S. JOHNSTON drove to the depot today and when he was returning, his horse ran away. When opposite the Hambly homestead the horse ran into the ditch on the north side of the road, upset the vehicle, threw Mr. Johnston out and fell on him. The bus boys and street railway men helped to extricate him, and he was taken home unhjured. The harness had to be cut in several places before the horse could rise.

SHORTLY before six last evening, the ice, which in broken and irregular masses had been piled in the vicinity of the railway bridge, broke and came down the stream. Its progress was very rapid and as it neared the mouth of the river, the water rose rapidly. In the vicinity of the lower bridge the sight as the ice came down was a grand one. Huge cakes were carried against the piers to be tossed and turned by the force of the water and broken ice behind. Little damage resulted and all thoughts of a flood have been dissipated.

THE Fay Templeton Opera Company's presentation of "Patience" did not attract a very large audience to the Metropolitan Hall last night, and for two reasons: 1st. They did not bring a good reputation as to their ability; and 2d. Many theatre goers will not risk the dangers of the Metropolitan Hall, unless the promised performance is of a highly attractive kind. The performance was, however, better than was expected, being fully up to the average degree of merit of travelling companies. The chief drawbacks were the lack of an orchestra, and of a male singer or two of ability.

WEATHER PROBABILITIES—Toronto, April 10.—Lake, north to east winds, fair, cooler weather, followed by local rains to-night or Wednesday.

PRESENTATION.—The spacious halls of Mrs. J. W. Hill, grand-daughter of the celebrated chief Tyendinaga, were well filled on the evening of the 30th ult., when a goodly number of Mohawks, together with some of the first white families of the neighborhood, had assembled at a complimentary party given to Miss Maggie Johnston, who has retired from the position of teacher in the Central School, Tyendinaga. An interesting feature of the evening was an address and the presentation of an elegant and costly album. Mr. John Lash delivered the address, and Miss Sarah Hill presented the Album, on behalf of the company assembled. It was entirely a surprise to Miss Johnston, as she had received at X mas a present of a beautiful silver Cake-basket from the same good people. It is not likely she will soon forget her Bay of Quinte friends—whites and merry Mohawks.

SURPRISE PARTY.—About two hundred men, women and children came to Mr. Wm. Vankleek's, 9th con. of Thurlow, on Monday night, 2nd April. Nearly every lady had a basket; well filled tables were spread and the baskets unpacked, and the contents were set. All present partook sumptuously, after which the house was called to order and Mr. Fox, of Huntingdon, was appointed chairman, and Mr. J. W. Sills came forward and read a highly complimentary address, and presented Mr. and Mrs. Vankleek with a silver cruet. The Rev. H. I. Allen, of Foxboro, was called upon and made a few very appropriate remarks, also Mr. W. H. Sills, Mr. Wm. Sayers and others. The entertainment was brought to a close by singing the Doxology and prayer by Mr. Allen. Mr. Vankleek has let his farm to Mr. Joseph Phillips, and he and his son have bought a farm in Western Ontario, whither they purpose removing.

Spring Assizes.

MONDAY, April 9.

NICHOLSON VS. MIDLAND RAILWAY COMP'Y. —This was an action brought to recover damages from the defendants for alleged negligence in driving an engine, tender first, within the limits of the corporation, at a greater speed than that prescribed by law, and without taking the necessary precautions to prevent accident. The occasion of the accident was the funeral of the late Felix Graham. The funeral procession had left the R. C. Church in this city, after divine service had been performed, and the funeral cortege was proceeding down what is known as the Catholic Church hill, when an engine, without, as is alleged, ringing a bell or blowing a whistle, came suddenly around the sharp curve where the track intersects Church Street, and so frightened the plaintiff's horse, that the plaintiff and the priest who was riding with him, were both thrown out of the buggy, and the plaintiff's thigh was broken. The plaintiff is permanently injured. Damages are laid at $5,000. The case has been already put over twice on payment of costs, on the application of defendants. To-day an appeal was lodged against the order postponing the trial a third time, which was not then decided, the appeal to be argued to-morrow morning.—Dickson, Q. C., Burdett, and McMahon for pl'ff; Bethune, Q. C., Bell, Q. C., and Biggar for deft.

WHITE & CO., VS. H. L. BOYDEN.—Consent verdict for plaintiffs. Dickson for plffs., Robertson & Thomas for deft.

SHORT VS. SHORT.—Two cases. These were settled out of court, and are the same cases under the same name as were heard at the Chancery Sittings held here recently. Dickson, Q. C., for pltf., Burdett for deft.

LISGHAM VS. FROST.—Case settled between the parties. Markell for pltf., Peterson & Peterson for deft.

MARY GIBSON VS. THE MIDLAND RAILWAY. —This was an action brought under Lord Campbell's Act to recover pecuniary damages sustained by the loss of her son. The deceased was a brakeman in the employ of the defendants. While walking along a train of freight cars which were passing under the bridge of the C. P. & M. road, at Peterborough, he was struck on the head by the needle beam of the bridge, the injuries resulting in almost instant death. According to an Act passed by the Ontario Legislature in 1881, all bridges crossing a railroad track must be of such height as to leave a clear space of at least seven feet below the lowest beam of the bridge and the highest point of any car running on the road. It was contended by the defendants that they had no power to alter the bridge, as it belonged to a third railroad company, and did not therefore come within the meaning of the Act. His Lordship expressed himself as agreeing with the defendants in that contention, but thought it best to submit certain questions to the jury, so that the case might not again have to come down to trial. The following questions were therefore put to the jury; 1st. Were the defendants guilty of negligence in not altering the bridge? 2nd. Was the plaintiff guilty of contributory negligence? 3rd. What amount of damages, if any, should the plaintiff receive?

The jury answered the two first questions in favor of the plaintiff's contention and assessed the damages at $909, leave being reserved to the defendants to have a verdict entered in their favor. Clute, W. N. Ponton, and S. S. Wallbridge for plff.; Bethune, Q. C., Bell, Q. C., and Biggar, for deft.

BROWNLEE VS. FOWLDS et al.—An action brought to recover the value of some machinery of which the defendant was alleged to be the gratuitous bailee. The plaintiff was nonsuited. Clute for plff.; Bethune, Q. C., for deft.

TRAVERTON VS. ROW.—An action for false imprisonment arising out of the alleged theft by the plaintiff from the defendant of a quantity of oats. The case was tried at the last Assizes, when the jury disagreed. The case was again entered for trial when an amicable arrangement was effected between the parties, each party paying their own costs. Dickson, Q. C., for plff.; Burdett and McMahon for deft.

BYERS VS. DOWSEY.—This was settled out of court. Burdett for plff.; Marden for deft.

SCOTT & SANSON VS. EVERGREEN CEMETERY Co.—Verdict by consent for the plaintiff $644.04. O'Rourke for plff.; Delaney & Ostrom for deft.

O. Bertle, of Manchester, Ontario Co., N. Y., writes:—"I obtained immediate relief from the use of Dr. Sanom' Electric Inhaler. I have had Asthma for eleven years. Have been obliged to sit up all night for ten or twelve days in succession. I can now sleep soundly all night on a feather bed, which I had not been able to do previous to using the Oil."

A DISTRESSING ORDER.

SALAMANCA, April 10.—Caster, U. S. agent for the Seneca Indians, has received orders from the Secretary of the Interior to serve notices on all white occupants of lands on the Cattaraugus reservation, except those within the limits of Salamanca Red House, Carrollton, Great Valley and Vandalia, to vacate the same within 30 days. These lands are held under leases from the Indians which have been declared illegal. Extensive and costly improvements have been made upon them by lessees, some of whom have been in possession for 30 years. Thousands of dollars have been invested in erecting saw mills, tanneries and other manufactories. If the lands are not vacated within the time specified, U. S. troops will be sent to drive the occupants off. In case of neglect or refusal to leave the lands, the lessees will also be subject to arrest and a fine of $1,000. The order has created great consternation among the lease holders, whom long undisturbed possession had brought to look upon the lands as theirs almost in fee simple.

Honest and Liberal,

When the Hops in each bottle of Hop Bitters (at the present price, $1.25 per lb.,) cost more than a bottle is sold for, besides the other costly medicines, and the quality and price are kept the same, we think it is honest and liberal on the proprietors, and no one should complain, or buy or use worthless stuff, or cheating bogus imitations because the price is less.

One of Earth's Angels.

'Yes, Miss Kate, I am afraid he is. He wasn't very well last night, and this morning he is worse. He complains dreadful of headache, and he ain't got no appetite whatsomever. He's been lying down pretty much all day.'

'Why did you not tell me sooner?' Kate cried, with a pang of remorse at her own neglect. 'I will go to him at once.'

She hastened upstairs, and into her brother's rooms. The young man was in the bedroom, lying on the bed, dressed and in a sort of stupor. As Kate bent over him and spoke, he opened his eyes, dull and heavy.

'Harry, dear,' Kate said, kissing him, 'what is the matter? Are you ill?'

Harry Danton made an effort to rise, but fell back on the pillow.

'My head aches as if it would split open, and I feel as if I had a ton weight bearing down every limb. I think I am going to have the fever.'

Kate turned pale.

'Oh, Harry, for Heaven's sake don't think that! The fever has left the village; why should you have it now?'

He did not reply. The heavy stupor that deadened every sense bore him down, and took away the power of speech. His eyes closed, and in another moment he had dropped off into a deep, lethargic sleep.

Kate arose and went out into the corridor, where she found Ogden waiting.

'He has fallen asleep,' she said. 'I want you to undress him, and get him into bed properly, while I go and prepare a saline draught. I am afraid he is going to be very ill.'

She passed on, and ran down stairs to her father's study, where the medicine chest stood. It took her some time to prepare the saline draught; and when she returned to the bed-chamber, Ogden had finished his task, and the sick man was safely in bed. He still slept, heavily, deep; but his breathing was labored and his lips parched.

'I will give him this when he awakes,' Kate said; 'and I will sit up with him all night. You can remain in the next room, Ogden, so as to be within call, if wanted.'

Kate remained by her sick brother through the long hours of that wintry night. She sat by the bedside, bathing the hot face and fevered hands, and holding cooling drinks to the dry lips. The shaded lamp lit the room dimly, too dimly to see to read; so she sat patiently, listening to the snow-storm, and watching her sick brother's face. In the next room Mr. Ogden slept the sleep of the just, in an arm-chair, his profound snoring making a sort of accompaniment to the howling of the wind.

The slow, slow hours dragged away, and morning came. It found the patient worse, weak, prostrated, and deadly sick, but not delirious.

'I know I have the fever, Kate,' he said in a weak whisper; 'I am glad of it. I only hope it will be merciful and take me off.'

Kate went down to breakfast, which she could not eat, and then returned to the sick room. Her experience among the sick of the village had made her skilful in the disease; but, despite all she could do, Harry grew weaker and worse. She dared not summon help, she dared not call in the Doctor, until her father's return.

'He ought to be here to-day,' she thought. 'Heaven grant it! If he does not, and Harry keeps growing worse, I will go and speak to Father Francis this evening.'

Fortunately this unpleasant duty was not necessary. The late afternoon train brought the newly wedded pair home. Kate and Eeny met them in the Hall, the latter kissing both with effusion, and Kate only shaking hands, with a pale and anxious countenance.

Mrs. Grace went upstairs with Eeny, to change her travelling costume, and Captain Danton was left standing in the hall with his eldest daughter.

'What is it, my dear?' he asked; 'what has gone wrong?'

'Something very serious, I am afraid, papa. Harry is ill.'

'Ill! How?—when?—what is the matter with him?'

'The fever,' Kate said, in a whisper, 'No one in the house knows it yet but Ogden. He was taken ill night before last, but I knew nothing of it till yesterday. I sat up with him last night, and did what I could, but I fear he is getting worse. I wanted to call in the Doctor, but I dared not until your return. What shall we do?'

'Send for Doctor Frank immediately,' replied her father, promptly; 'I have no fear of trusting him. He is the soul of honor, and poor Harry's secret is as safe with him as with ourselves. Grace has heard the story. I told her in Montreal. Of course, I could have no secrets from my wife. I will go to the village myself, and at once; that is, as soon as I have seen the poor boy. Let us go up now, my dear.'

Kate followed her father upstairs, and into the sick man's room. With the approach of night he had grown worse, and was slightly delirious. He did not know his father when he bent over and spoke to him. He was tossing restlessly on his pillow, and muttering incoherently as he tossed.

'My poor boy! My poor Harry!' his father said, with tears in his eyes. 'Misfortune seems to have marked him for its own. Remain with him, Kate; I will go at once for Doctor Danton.'

Five minutes later the Captain was galloping towards the village hotel, through the gray, gathering dusk. The young Doctor was in, seated in his own room, reading a ponderous looking volume. He arose to greet his visitor, but stopped short at sight of his grave and anxious face.

'There is nothing wrong, I hope?' he inquired; 'nothing has happened at the Hall?'

The Captain looked around the little chamber with the same anxious glance.

'We are quite alone?' he said.

'Quite,' replied his brother-in-law, very much surprised.

'I have a story to tell you—a secret to confide to you. Your services are required at the Hall; but before I can avail myself of these services, I have a sacred trust to confide to you—a trust I am certain you will never betray.'

'I shall never betray any trust you may repose in me, Captain Danton,' the young man answered gravely.

Some dim inkling of the truth was in his mind as he spoke. Captain Danton drew his chair closer, and in a low, hurried voice began his story. The story he had once before told Reginald Stanford, the story of his unfortunate son.

Doctor Frank listened with a face of changeless calm. No surprise was expressed in his grave, earnest, listening countenance. When the Captain had finished his narrative, with an account of the fever that rendered his presence at once necessary, a faint flush dyed his forehead.

'I shall be certain now,' he thought. 'I only saw Agnes Darling's husband once, and then for a moment; but I shall know him again if I ever see him.'

'I shall be with you directly,' he said, rising; 'as soon as they saddle my horse.'

He rang the bell and gave the order. By the time his cap and coat were on, and a few other preparations made, the hostler had the horse at the door.

It was quite dark now; but the road was white with snow and the two men rode rapidly to the Hall with the strong January wind blowing in their faces. They went upstairs at once, and Doctor Frank, with an odd sensation, followed the master of Danton Hall across the threshold of that mysterious Mr. Richards' room.

The Captain's son lay in a feverish sleep, tossing wildly and raving incoherently. Kate, sitting by his bedside, he mistook for some one else, calling her 'Agnes,' and talking in disjointed sentences of days and things long since past.

'He thinks she is his wife,' the Captain said, very sadly; 'poor boy!'

The Doctor turned up the lamp, and looked long and earnestly in the fever flushed face. His own seemed to have caught the reflection of that red glow, when at last he looked up.

'It is the fever,' he said 'and a very serious case. You sat up last night, your father tells me, Miss Kate?'

'Yes,' Kate answered.

She was very white and thoroughly worn out.

'You are not strong enough to do anything of the kind. You look half-dead now. I will remain here all night, and do you at once go and lie down.'

RACKED BY INNUMERABLE PANGS, restless by day, sleepless at night, rising unrefreshed in the morning, without appetite and pestered by varying and perplexing symptoms, the dyspeptic takes indeed a gloomy view of human existence. For him the zest of life seems gone. Heartburn, oppression at the pit of the stomach, and the attendant annoyances of of constipation and biliousness, combine to render him utterly wretched. But there is, if he will but take advantage of it, a reliable source of reliable relief from all misery. NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY and DYSPEPTIC CURE is, as its name imports, a botanic preparation, free from mineral poison, and an all-sufficient remedy for indigestion in its most obstinate form. It not only enriches the blood by enabling the digestive organs to convert the food received into nutriment, but depurates it by increasing the action of the bowels and kidneys, the natural outlets for its impurities. But while it relaxes the bowels, it never does so violently and with pain, like a drastic cathartic. It aids, but never forces, Nature, invigorating as well as purifying and regulating the system. It thoroughly removes those diseased humors which tend to vitiate the blood, purifies the urinary secretion, and promotes a flow of healthy bile into the natural channel, besides expelling it from the circulation. Experience has proved that this standard medicine is a thorough remedy for dyspepsia, biliousness, costiveness, kidney complaints, scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, lumbago and all impurities of the blood. Price $1.00. Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac-simile of their signature. Sold by all medicine dealers

FOR THE KIDNEYS, LIVER AND URINARY ORGANS.

THE BEST BLOOD PURIFIER.

There is only one way by which any disease can be cured, and that is by removing the cause—whatever it may be. The great medical authorities of the day declare that nearly every disease is caused by deranged kidneys or liver. To restore these, therefore, is the only way by which health can be secured. Here is where WARNER'S SAFE CURE has achieved its great reputation. It acts directly upon the kidneys and liver and by placing them in a healthy condition drives disease and pain from the system. For all Kidney, Liver and Urinary troubles; for the distressing disorders of women; for Malaria, and physical troubles generally, this great remedy has no equal. Beware of impostors, imitations and concoctions said to be just as good.

Plain Truths!

The blood is the foundation of life, it circulates through every part of the body and unless it is pure and rich, good health is impossible, if disease has entered the system the only sure and quick way to drive it out is to purify and enrich the blood.

These simple facts are well known and the highest medical authorities agree that nothing but iron will restore the blood to its natural condition; and also that all the Iron preparations hitherto made blacken the teeth, cause headache, and are otherwise injurious.

SULPHUR AND IRON BITTERS will thoroughly and quickly assimulate with the blood, purifying and strengthening it and thus drive disease from any part of the system, and it will not blacken the teeth cause headache or constipation and is positively not injurious.

St. Johnsbury, Vermont Oct. 31st 1882.

For six years I have been a great sufferer from blood disease, dyspepsia and constipation, and became so debilitated that I could not retain anything on my stomach, in fact life had almost become a burden, and when hope had almost left me, I was induced to give SULPHUR AND IRON BITTERS a trial I am now taking the third bottle and have not felt so well in six years as I do at present.

MRS. S. L. MOORE.

SULPHUR AND IRON BITTERS effectually cures dyspepsia, indigestion and weakness, and renders the greatest relief and benefit to persons suffering from such diseases as kidney and liver complaints, dyspepsia, indigestion etc.

Cathartic Pills

Combine the choicest cathartic principles in medicine, in proportions accurately adjusted to secure activity, certainty, and uniformity of effect. They are the result of years of careful study and practical experiment, and are the most effectual remedy yet discovered for diseases caused by derangement of the stomach, liver, and bowels, which require prompt and effectual treatment. AYER'S PILLS are specially applicable to this class of diseases. They act directly on the digestive and assimilative processes, and restore regular healthy action. Their extensive use by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, is one of the many proofs of their value as a safe, sure, and perfectly reliable purgative medicine. Being compounded of the concentrated virtues of purely vegetable substances, they are positively free from calomel or any injurious properties, and can be administered to children with perfect safety.

AYER'S PILLS are an effectual cure for Constipation or Costiveness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Foul Stomach and Breath, Dizziness, Headache, Loss of Memory, Numbness, Biliousness, Jaundice, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Dropsy, Tumors, Worms, Neuralgia, Colic, Gripes, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Gout, Piles, Disorders of the Liver, and all other diseases resulting from a disordered state of the digestive apparatus.

As a Dinner Pill they have no equal.

While gentle in their action, these PILLS are the most thorough and searching cathartic that can be employed, and never give pain unless the bowels are inflamed, and then their influence is healing. They stimulate the appetite and digestive organs; they operate to purify and enrich the blood, and impart renewed health and vigor to the whole system.

FIFTH PARLIAMENT—FIRST SESSION.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

MONDAY, April 10

CHARITABLE ASSOCIATIONS.

Mr. Colby, in introducing a bill to amend and extend to the Dominion chapter 71 of the Consolidated Statutes of Canada, respecting charitable, philanthropic, and provident associations, said the Act, the provisions of which this bill proposes to amend, is chapter 71, an Act respecting charitable, philanthropic, and provident associations. The provisions of that Act are that any number of persons may unite themselves in a society for charitable purposes generally. It provides for the establishment of branches, for incorporation, election of officers, &c. That Act is operative in its fullest sense, and indeed, its provisions have been extended in the Province of Quebec. In the Province of Ontario the substantial provisions of the Act are incorporated in a similar Act, and effective machinery is applied by which these provisions might be made operative. The object of this bill is to provide that machinery in which the original Act seems to have been somewhat defective, and to extend its provisions to those societies which are to be carried on in the various provinces of the Dominion. He introduced another clause which includes within it voluntary associations for the promotion of immigration. There are in various parts of the Dominion unincorporated societies, who are endeavoring to promote the immigration of particular classes of immigrants, suited to the needs of particular localities. The object of the Act is to carry out the benevolent intentions of Dominion chaper 71, and to do it in a cheap, inexpensive, and summary manner.

The bill was read a first time.

ORANGE INCORPORATION.

On the order for the second reading of the bill to incorporate the Loyal Orange Association of British America,

Mr. White (Hastings) said: Mr. Speaker, I shall not on this occasion to ask the indulgence of the House while I make a few explanations regarding this bill. One of the members of the committee of the Orange Association in whose charge the bill was placed, wishes me have it stand for another week, and another of its members wishes me to go on with it. When the bill came up a week ago, the leader of the Government asked me to allow it to stand. Of course, I am aware that, no matter who leads the Government, the projector of a bill which is under consideration always consults the leader of the Government in reference to it, and when the First Minister asked to have the bill stand, it was with my permission. In order that there may be no difficulty about this matter, I desire to ask the further indulgence of the House to allow the bill to take its place on the order paper for another week, and by that time if the Worshipful Grand Lodge, who are to decide this question, do not not come to a conclusion what course to pursue, then, no matter whom it hurt, or whom I injure, I will go on with the bill. I warn them now that I will have no more badgering or trouble about the matter. I am not a member of the House to be kicked about by any party. I think sir, I have been very badly treated all through in this matter. If the House will not grant me this privilege, I am ready to go on with the bill now. I am always ready. I wish to return my sincere thanks to the House for having already allowed the order to stand over, and I hope they will extend me this further courtesy.

Mr. Pickard asked whether the general bill just introduced by the member for Stanstead (Mr. Colby) would not cover the ground proposed to be covered by the Orange bill?

Mr. White (Hastings)—I wish to inform the hon. gentleman that I have had no communication with any party regarding a general bill. Individually, I want no general bill. What I want is an Act of incorporation for the Orange Association, and I am satisfied that nine-tenths of the members of the society want the same. I have nothing to do, directly or indirectly, with the bill of the hon. member for Stanstead, and if I thought allowing the matter to stand was going to jeopardize the bill, I would go on with it now.

Mr. Blake pointed out that the time for reporting private bills would expire on the 18th inst., and that the postponement asked would render it impossible to put the bill through this session.

The bill was allowed to stand.

PROVINCIAL AND DOMINION RIGHTS.

Mr. Dawson moved for correspondence between the Government of the Dominion and the Government of Ontario in reference to the dispute as to the title of lots covered by water in the harbors of lakes Huron and Superior to private individuals. In making the motion, he stated that at Prince Arthur's Landing and at Thunder Cape the Government of Ontario had sold lands under water, which had been previously claimed by the Dominion Government. Under the navigable waters Act of the Dominion reserve, upon which buildings had been erected by the Dominion Government. A conflict of authority as to the possession of these lands would lead to serious embarrassment, and he hoped that means would be taken to decide the question as to who was the real owner of the property.

Mr. Blake—I think it will be found that the grant referred to by the hon. gentleman was a proper one, and that it was expressly on condition that the properties should not interfere with navigation.

Mr. Dawson—I think the grant at Silver Islet was made with a very proper object; but those further grants are at Prince Arthur's Landing, and the lands are taken up by speculators for the purpose of getting some claim which would be valuable to themselves in the future.

Sir John Macdonald—This is a very important matter, and the whole subject has been reviewed and decided recently by the Supreme Court here. In a case coming from Prince Edward Island the court has decided that grants by the Provincial Government of land covered by water within the harbors of the Dominion are illegal and invalid. The decision has gone further than I thought it would go. While it is quite clear that the water which is there is within the control of the Legislature here, yet I always thought that the land covered by water, whatever it might be worth, belonged, subject to the right of navigation, to the different provinces. However, this decision seems to controvert that, and it is so strong and specific in its terms that the Prince Edward Government have applied to the Dominion Government to pay for all their harbor improvements, on the ground that they belong to the Dominion and not to the provinces.

Mr. Blake—May I ask the hon. gentleman if that decision applies to inland waters?

Sir John Macdonald—I fancy it would apply to inland waters, but I am not quite sure that it does. The decision is not that below low water mark the land belongs to the Dominion, but it is the land covered by water in every harbor.

The motion passed.

The night session was occupied by a discussion of Mr. Hawkins' motion asking for a committee of enquiry into the conduct of the County Judge of Kent in refusing to grant a recount in the Bothwell election case. Mr. Hawkins enlarged at considerable length on what he termed the injustice that had been done to Mr. Stephens, Returning Officer for Bothwell, by the Liberal Press, and accused Judge Bell of having conspired with the Liberals to secure the election of Mr. Mills.

Mr. Cameron (Huron) considered the motion was improper and quoted a number of precedents to show that if the Judge was to be impeached by the House it could only be by petition.

Sir John Macdonald agreed with him that the motion was an improper one, as the Bothwell election case was sub judice, and asked Mr. Howkins to withdraw it.

Mr. Blake objected to to the motion being withdrawn, as the charges had been made openly against Judge Bell by Mr. Hawkins, and it would be unfair to withdraw it without giving him an opportunity of making a statement if he desired, just as he would have if the matter had been brought up on petition.

After some remarks on technical points in connection with the matter by Sir John Macdonald, and a few remarks from Mr. Hawkins, the motion was declared lost, and the House adjourned at midnight.

Daily Intelligencer.

BELLEVILLE, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 11, 1883.

An Abusive Crank.

The Ottawa Citizen says:

We have received from "Henry Youle Hind, M. A." of Windsor, N. S., a pamphlet entitled "Manitoba and the North-West Frauds," in which the author, notorious in connection with his efforts to cry down the credit and resources of the country, endeavors to impeach the testimony of Prof. Macoun and others in regard to the fertility and value of the North-West. If Mr. Hind is under the impression that the press of this province will aid him in his unpatriotic efforts, the sooner he is undeceived the better.

A copy of the pamphlet above referred to was received at this office several days ago; but a perusal of the title page was sufficient to warrant its consignment to the waste basket, without further acquaintance with its contents being sought. The man who styles Professor Macoun a "charlatan" and alleges that the Professor has been guilty of imposture and fraud in speaking favorably of the Nort-West, is either a knave or a pestilent idiot. Mr. Hind is probably the latter, at least the world at large generally consider him to be such.

Editorial Brevities.

Forgery is the latest accomplishment added to the previously extensive repertoire of Grit propagandists. Witness the letter attributed to Sir Charles Tupper (but which has no signature attached) published amongst the stolen correspondence anent the Bank of Upper Canada premises in Toronto. The Hamilton Tribune, which first published the correspondence, ought to be prosecuted, in order that the personality of the thief and forger may become known.

The Ottawa Free Press says:

"The Citizen discourses on the coal question. The organ does not seem to be aware that not a ton of Nova Scotia coal goes farther west than Montreal, and very little gets that far. The increased output at the mines is owing solely to the demand of foreign steamships, and has no more to do with the duty than the man in the moon."

The Free Press is mistaken. Nova Scotia coal is used as far west as Brockville, and occasional cargoes come to Belleville and Cobourg.

The Kingston Whig asks the following question:

The Belleville INTELLIGENCER wants us to say that the kind of coal used in stoves is hard, or anthracite coal, which is not produced in Nova Scotia, but is imported from Pennsylvania. Then when Nova Scotia coal won't suit why are the poor taxed 50c a ton to protect it?

The duty on anthracite coal used is not wholly protective. It was imposed partially for revenue purposes.

The height of impudence is reached by the Peterborough Examiner, which asserts that the present Government have no real intention of proceeding with the work on the Trent Valley Canal, and tries to leave the inference that, if a Grit Government were in power, the canal would be built. The people do not forget, if the Examiner fails to remember, that Mr. Mackenzie's Government gave the Trent Works to the Provincial Government; that Mr. Mowat took an appropriation to tear down the works, which would have prevented the construction of the canal; that the present Government refused to ratify the transfer and resumed possession of the works; that they took a vote of $200,000 for constructing a long stretch of the canal; that Mr. Mackenzie protested against this action as a monumental folly; that the Ontario Government tried last year to prevent the progress of the work by seeking to secure a dam which retains the waters necessary for feeding the canal; that the Dominion Government at once expropriated this dam; that work is progressing actively; and that the sum of $246,000 is to be revoted this year for the continuance of the work. The attempt at deceit is a bold one, but the editor of the Examiner is the only person who is deceived—that is, if he really believes he can deceive his readers by so clumsy an artifice.

Spring Assizes.

TUESDAY, April 10.

LANDON VS. JOHNSON.—Action for slander. The plff. resides at Hoard's Station and the defts., is a farmer residing in Rawdon. Defts. alleged he was induced to pay plff. money on the ground that he represented himself to be the Collector of the Township of Seymour and stated it to other persons. Plff. brings his action. Action dismissed with costs. Skinner, sol., Clute, counsel for plff.; Markell, sol., Dickson, Q. C., for defts.

BIBER VS. YOUNG.—Action for clearing land. An investigation of accounts. After hearing some witnesses the Judge suggested arbitration, the parties consented and the matter was referred to arbitrament of J. Parker Thomas, to whom all matters in difference were referred. T. A. O'Rourke, sol., Burdett for plff.; Delaney & Ostrom, Dickson, Q. C., for defts.

The Grand Jury brought in a true bill against William Carson for larceny.

PARRY VS. SHOREY.—This was a case brought by Mr. Wm. R. Parry, of Sidney, against one Chester C. Shorey, of the same place, for an alleged assault committed on her by Shorey, in the month of August last. The facts of the case are as follows: Shorey is a farmer, a married man, the father of five or six children and resides about half a mile from Parry's. The plff., Mrs. Parry, is the second wife of Wm. R. Parry and by whom he has four or five children. One night in the month named, the plff., says the deft., came to her place to return some bags that he had borrowed. After putting them away, the deft. she says came to the pump where she was and after a little talk, made an indecent proposal and placed his hand upon her. This was the whole case for the plff. The deft. swore positively that he did not lay hands on the plff., nor make use of any improper expression. After he had taken a drink at the well he says, he started to go home when the plff. threw him a kiss. He said "are you going to kiss me," to which, she made some questioning remarks such as what is that you said? &c, to which he replied are you going to kiss me.

Witnesses were also called for the defence, near neighbors of both parties, who swore that after the occurrence of the assault, the plaintiff and her husband had told them that the defendant did not lay hands on the plaintiff. It being necessary to show in order to mitigate the damages that might be given the plaintiff supposing the assault to be proven that the plaintiff's character was not that of a chaste or modest woman, two witnesses were called on behalf of the defendant, a Miss Wilson and one Thos. Vannorman. The former swore that she had served at the house of the plaintiff and that while there had frequently seen Thos. Vannorman kiss the plaintiff and also seen them scuffle and roll over together on the floor and on one particular occasion she heard the little son of the plaintiff exclaim after he had looked into a bedroom off the kitchen "I saw ma kiss Tom!"

The jury brought in a verdict for the defendant. Clute for plff., Burdett and McMahon for defts.

SUTHERLAND VS PATTERSON.—Action on a guarantee. Defendant could not go on, a necessary witness being absent. Case made a remanet.—Bell & Biggar for plff; Denmark & Northrup for deft.

KANE VS KIRKPATRICK.—Action for seduction. Plff. non-suited.—Burdett for plff; Clute & Williams for deft.

NICHOLSON VS. G. J. RAILWAY.—This case was put over, on payment of costs of the day.

ROSS VS. COLEMAN.—This was an action for illegal distress and assault. The plaintiff keeps a hair store on Front Street and at one time occupied a store owned by the defendant. The plaintiff alleges that her goods were destroyed for rent which she did not owe and that on a certain occasion deft. assaulted her.

John C. Phillips swore that he, as a bailiff had entered plaintiff's premises and asserted that he would have to make a seizure unless the rent due was paid. The rent was afterwards paid by Mr. Peoples.

James Peoples testified that he was called on by a bailiff, who said the goods in plff's store had been seized and unless the money was pat', the goods would be removed. The money was paid ($5.50) under protest by the advice of the bailiff. The plff. was present when the money was paid to the bailiff. I took a bill of sale of the plff's goods on the 13th of Oct., on which evening she moved away. Witness assisted Miss Ross in her business by loaning her money.

Jennie C. Ross, the plff., being sworn said she knew Mr. Coleman; she first saw him at his own house some time after the 16th of August, 1882; went to see him about a shop she afterwards occupied; John B. Patterson had possession of the shop before she took it and gave $25 for possession; Mr. Coleman asked the witness what business she was going into and she told him, after which she asked that writings be drawn. On the lease formerly given to Patterson, the deft. wrote something and read to her. The witness said that as interlineation in the writing was not read to her; she never signed the paper nor did Mr. Coleman. The deft. promised the plff. a month's rent for putting the premises in repair. The rent was to commence on the 29th of September. Mr. Coleman did not say anything about taxes. Witness took away the counter and shelves she had put in the shop. Plff. was served with a notice for $27.50 for taxes; she occupied the store from the 4th of October to 13th of November and carried on a hair dressing business; Phillips called in the plaintiff's store several times and she gave him ink, paper and pen to make a memorandum of her goods; she never agreed to pay any back rent; her goods were distrained again but not sold; defendant was in her shop before the seizure took place; he came on the 12th of October in the afternoon, about five o'clock; Mr. Coleman said "Good evening," and was answered; he then spoke about putting in a glass in the window; he spoke about the girl who worked for the plaintiff and was told that she was away. The conversation then turned on the placing of a stove and the plaintiff motioned where she would have it put, and as she was going behind the counter he put one arm around her neck and the other around her waist in a rude manner and pinched her and said "you're a darling," and kissed her on the cheek. He pressed her to his person very rudely and pinched her on the breast. She struggled and got away from him much frightened. She asked Mr. Coleman how he dare do such a thing, after which she told him to go out directly and he laughed; she tried to get past and he stepped in front of her; she then went into the middle room and he said if he were a young man she wouldn't run away from him; she seized a loom on which hair is braided, but it fell from her hand; she then ran out of the back door and closed and held it; he followed and drew the door open several times, and she shut it; he went away, saying "don't be a fool" or "what a fool"; he went out and she tidied up the shop, locked it and went to her hotel; she went to her room, where she suffered from a nervous sick headache; three or four days after there were black marks on her person where Mr. Coleman had pinched her; she did not feel safe in remaining in that shop under such a landlord.

In the cross examination of the witness she said she formerly lived in Montreal; she knew Lavoie and Devitt there; she went to Kingston and took orders from her person; she went to Napanee, whence she came to Belleville on the 16th of Aug; she lived in Madoc before she went to Montreal; Mr. Coleman did not say anything to her about back rent or taxes, nor did she promise to pay such; he allowed witness a month's rent in order to enable her to fit up the premises; he had said that Patterson was a drunken, worthless fellow, and he would be glad to let her have the shop instead of him; everything that had passed between Mr. Coleman and the witness prior to the assault was proper; he had visited her store several times and introduced several men to her; about three days after the assault the deft's. son presented an account for rent amounting to $25, which she refused to pay; subsequently the deft. told witness that she would have to pay it; he shook his hand and said he'd have it out of her or Patterson; she then ordered him out of the shop and he went; the deft. used a good deal of strength when he put his arms about her; she first spoke of this occurrence to Holden Read, it might be a month after the assault, and she afterwards related it to Mr. Heuderson; she did not give instructions to have Mr. Coleman complained of to the Government or brought before the Magistrate; she did not wish to spread the news of this assault, as she did not want to create a scandal; when the bailiffs came to her store in the Crenk block she told them that she was going to punish Mr. Coleman for his conduct towards her.

Riches in Hop Farming.

At the present prices, ten acres in Hops will bring more money than five hundred acres in any other farming; and, if there is a consumptive dealer who thinks the price of Hop Bitters high, remember Hops are $1.25 per lb., and the quantity and quality of Hops in Hop Bitters and the price remains the same as formerly. Don't buy or use worthless stuff or imitations because the price is less.

Beware of Imitations.

Since Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has become celebrated, a number of unprincipled persons have been endeavoring to palm off Electrem and Electric Oil for the genuine DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. Beware of these similar named articles. If their originators had any faith in the healing properties of their own medicines they would, like honest men, give them name of their own, and not try to sell them upon the reputation of another; but as they know their preparations have no merit, they resort to the most unprincipled means of selling them by putting a name as near as possible to Eclectric. We therefore ask the public when purchasing to see that the name Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is on the front of the wrapper, and the signature of NORTHROP & LYMAN, the proprietors for Canada on the back.

"CONDITIONS OF SUCCESS" was the title of an address given at the Congregational Church last evening, and it would seem as if the Pastor and managers of that Church had well studied the subject in reward to such services as the one of which we write, and had well fulfilled the "conditions" required, for the tea was a success, and did much credit to the caterer, Mr. Wallace, Confectioner, of Front St.) The service of praise was a success, under the leadership of Mr. Smith. The addresses by Rev. C. W. Watch and Rev. M. W. McLean were a success, filled as they were with instruction and helpful thought; and perhaps the greatest success of all was the proving of the fact, that a tea meeting and religious service can be so combined as to result in spiritual good to those attending, and to redound to the glory of God. We feel sure the pastor, Rev. Wm. Stacey, will be glad that his efforts in this direction are so successful.

Dungannon and Faraday Correspondence.

The winter has been long and severe, but we have had lately several days of thaw, and the snow is beginning to go slowly, and the roads are becoming bad. The season has been, considering the deep snow, pretty good for lumbermen, certainly better than 1882, or the previous year, when they had to quit for want of snow to draw their logs.

Wages are good, $1.50 a day on the railway, and at the mines, and hands scarce. Hay has gone up within the last two months (what with lumbering and the mines) and the price paid at the mines is from $18.00 to $20.00 per ton.

We have amused ourselves during the long and dreary winter with tea-meetings, concerts and social gatherings, and on March 26th a dramatic entertainment was given at the Town Hall, L'Amable, which was very successful. The pieces performed were "Dearer than Life" and "More Blunders than One," this being, I believe, the first instance of two plays being acted by amateurs in the back townships, or even the North Riding of Hastings. The ladies and gentlemen who performed acquitted themselves well, indeed Mr. J. C. Jarman proved himself to be a first class actor.

Settlers are coming in well, and the population has increased so that our Council at its next meeting will have to take into consideration the formation of several new school sections.

A Fatal Fire.

PARENTS LEAVE THEIR CHILDREN ALONE, THE HOUSE IGNITES AND A LITTLE ONE IS SACRIFICED.

WELLESLEY, Ont., April 10.—This morning about 7 o'clock a farm-house about a mile from the village, belonging to John Hamel, was found to be on fire. The father was with his wife in the barn, and had left their five children at home, the eldest boy about 10 years old. When they awoke they found the house on fire, and the boy picked up courage to secure three of the smaller children, but a boy of about 4 years old would not come out, and consequently was burnt to the bones. When picked out nothing could be identified of a child. The others, when free, ran over half a mile to the next house bare footed, with no clothes on but their shirts.

School Matters.

The Chairman and Messrs. Tennant, Moore, Holden, Martin, Hayne, Diamond, Northcott, Richards, Weasley, Wills, Rev. Mr. McLean, Walker, and Rev. Mr. Burke, were present at the regular meeting of the School Board last night.

A letter from Mr. Narraway regarding drawing cards was read, and laid on the table. A communication from Prof. Wright in regard to the students' drill was also submitted.

Mr. Diamond gave notice of a motion rescinding the rules of the Board regarding the classification of the Central School; also that that School be reclassified.

The Finance Committee recommended the payment of several accounts.

A report of the attendance at the High School was handed in.

Mr. Holden said that the teacher of No. 5 School had complained to him that the pupils of other schools had visited her school premises on Saturday last, and acted in a very gross manner. This ill-conduct had been repeated on several occasions.

Mr. Northcott hoped that an example would be made of these boys, so that a stop could be put to their depredations.

The Inspector said the boys had entered the school, spilled ink over the desks, and committed other depredations.

The Special Committee appointed to memorialize the Government for the establishment of a Meteorological station here reported, submitting a copy of the memorial they intended forwarding to the Government.

The Board went into Committee of the whole to reports, Mr. Northcott in the chair.

The Finance Committee's report was passed. It embraced an account for desks, $35.50; brooms, $1.50; repairs, $22.12; election expenses, $4; stationery, $47.20; wood, $37.

The Special Committee's report was adopted.

Committee rose and reported.

On the question of adoption, Mr. Wills moved that the report be referred back for the purpose of striking out the account for seats, it was presented by J. M. Walker & Co., which firm was represented on the Board, and the account was not therefore legal.

Mr. Diamond said that the desks were cheaper than could be obtained elsewhere by fifty cents each.

The Chairman read the law, which states that a member of the Board cannot enter into any contract with it, &c., or his seat would be lost to him.

Mr. Wills wanted the account laid over, as if it were pressed, the alternative would have to be acted on.

Mr. Holden said that after the desks were supplied, it was too late to say that we would not pay for them. In the future we should adhere to the rule and now it would be taking the firm rather short if Mr. Wills' suggestion were acted on.

Mr. Wills said that if this account were paid, the members of that firm on the Board should vacate their seats in accordance with the statutes.

Rev. Mr. Burke did not like the idea of taking the seats and using them and not paying for them.

Mr. Diamond said that the Board should not have ordered seats from that firm knowing the circumstances of the case. We should deal honorably with the firm.

Rev. Mr. Maclean said that if the Board as a Board did not order the seats, then the Board should be guided by the statute.

Mr. Hayne said there were no seats for the children in No. 4 school and he had given Walker & Co., the order for them.

Mr. Wills again contended that if the account was passed and paid, Messrs. Macoun and VanAllen would vacate their seats.

Mr. Holden claimed that the gentlemen named were not members of the Board, as they had sold their seats to the Board last year. If the effect of passing this account would be to vacate their seats, then their seats had been vacated long ago. If Messrs. Macoun and Vanallen choose to risk their seats and ask the payment of that account then the responsibility would rest on. Their seats, however, could not be declared vacant, unless a majority of the Board so decided. He considered the Board was looking the stable after the horse was gone.

Mr. Wills' motion was lost by a vote of 5 to 7 and the report was adopted.

Mr. Wills' notice of motion for the rescinding of the resolution ordering the purchase of a school site in Bleecker ward, was again laid over.

The Inspector reported the attendance at the several schools during March. The whole number of pupils attending the schools in that month was 1,248 and the average attendance 953.

The report was referred to the Committee on School Management, as was also Prof. Wright's letter.

An investigation by the Inspector was ordered into the outrages committed at the Station School and he was directed to have the perpetrators brought to justice.

Mr. Martin was appointed on the Committees on which Mr. Maxon, his predecessor, had served.

A discussion which arose on Mr. Narraway's communication revealed the fact that drawing was one of the compulsory subjects taught in the schools. A motion was presented by Mr. Wills allowing children who did not wish to learn drawing, to study some other subject during the time devoted to that branch, but parents of such children were informed that such children could not be promoted to the High School unless they acquired a knowledge of that subject.

Mr. Tennent seconded Mr. Wills' motion.

Mr. Carmichael moved in amendment, seconded by Mr. Northcott, that the matter be referred to the Minister of Education.

The amendment was withdrawn and the motion passed.

Adjourned.

O. Borile, of Manchester, Ontario Co., N.Y., writes:—"I obtained immediate relief from the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. I have had Asthma for eleven years. Have been obliged to sit up all night for ten or twelve nights in succession. I can now sleep soundly all night on a feather bed, which I had not been able to do previous to using the Oil."

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT AT A MINE.

Eight Men Fall 2,000 Feet.

Another Fails 100 Feet and Escapes.

NORWAY, Mich., April 11.—At Keelcyadge Mine, Menominee Range, Michigan iron district yesterday, ninety feet of ground between the main engine house and number one shaft caved in. The engine house, in which were 9 men and all the mine machinery and four large boilers, went down from a thousand to two thousand feet. All the men were killed outright or buried alive, except Ed. Wicks, who went down a hundred feet, and then remained on the top of the debris with one leg broken at the thigh, and one of his ribs fractured. His recovery is doubtful. A pump and boiler must be put in before the other bodies can be recovered. It will take a week or more. The mine was about to be abandoned as the ore body was exhausted. All the men were on the surface hoisting steam pipes out of the shaft. The accident was the most disastrous that ever occurred in the Lake Superior mines.

LATER.—Crowds have gathered in the neighborhood, and every effort will be made to get the bodies out. The names of the killed are: Patrick Egan, Wm. Morse, Rich'd Williams, Wm. Pollard, Wm. Jeffrey, Thos. James, and W. Henderson.

MORNING DESPATCHES.

AMERICAN.

SCARE IN A CHURCH.

CHARLESTON, S. C., April 11.—For weeks the people in this section have been greatly excited over an epidemic of mad dogs. Ten dogs have been shot. Last night while the congregation at Davidson Presbyterian College was engaged in prayer, a supposed mad dog ran up the aisle, foaming and howling. The church was crowded, and a panic ensued. Men, women, and children attempted to get out; some mounted benches while the pastor leaped to the top of the pulpit, crying "kill it! kill it!" One of the worshippers fired twice at the dog, and others with canes and spittoons beat the dog to death. Some of the women fainted, and others were badly bruised.

Honest and Liberal,

When the dregs in each bottle of Hop Bitters (at the present price, $1.25 per lb.,) cost more than a bottle is sold for, besides the other costly medicines, and the quality and price are kept the same, we think it is honest and liberal in the proprietors, and no one should complain, or buy or use worthless stuff, or cheating bogus imitations because the price is less.

The Bad and Worthless

are never imitated or counterfeited. This is especially true of a family medicine, and it is positive proof that the remedy imitated is of the highest value. As soon as it had been tested and proved by the whole world that Hop Bitters was the purest, best and most valuable family medicine on earth, many imitations sprung up and began to steal the notices in which the press and people of the country had expressed the merits of H. B., and in every way trying to induce suffering invalids to use their stuff instead, expecting to make money on the credit and good name of H. B. Many others started nostrums put up in similar style to H. B., with variously devised names in which the word "Hop" or "Hops" were used in a way to induce people to believe they were the same as Hop Bitters. All such pretended remedies or cures, no matter what their style or name is, and especially those with the word "Hop" or "Hops" in their name or in any way connected with them or their name, are imitations or counterfeits. Beware of them. Touch one of them: Use nothing but genuine Hop Bitters, with a bunch or cluster of green Hops on the white label. Trust nothing else. Druggists and dealers are warned against dealing in imitations or counterfeits.

Daily Intelligencer.

One of Earth's Angels.

'Thank you very much,' Kate said, gratefully. 'I can sleep when I know you are with him. Do you think there is any danger?'

'I trust not. You and I have seen far more serious cases down there in St. Croix, and we have brought them round. It is a very sad story, Kate—I am very sorry for your brother.' Kate stooped and kissed the hot face, her tears falling on it.

'Such pretty hair Harry! The crime of that dreadful murder should not lie at his door, but at that of the base wretch he made his wife.'

'Are you quite sure, Miss Danton,' said the young Doctor, seriously, 'that there may not have been some terrible mistake? From what you say, father tells me, your brother had very little proof of his wife's criminality beyond the words of his friend Furniss, who may have been actuated by some base motive of his own.'

'He had the proof of his own senses,' Kate said, indignantly; 'he saw the man Crosby with his wife, and heard his words. The guilt of Harry's rash deed should rest far more on her than on him.'

She turned from the room, leaving her father and the young Doctor to watch by the sick man all night. The Captain sought his wife, and explained the cause of her brother's sudden summons; and Kate, in her own room, quite worn out, lay down dressed as she was, and fell into a profound, refreshing sleep, from which she did not wake until late next morning.

When she returned to her brother's chamber, she found the Doctor and the Captain gone, and Grace keeping watch. Mrs. Dantqn explained that Frank had been summoned away about an hour previously to attend a patient in the village; and the Captain, at her entreaty, had gone to take some rest. The patient was much the same, and was now asleep.

'But you should not have come here, Mrs. Danton,' Kate expostulated. 'You known this fever is infectious.'

Mrs. Danton smiled.

'My life is of no more value than yours or my husband's. I am not afraid—I should be very unhappy if I were not permitted to do what little good I can.'

For the second time there flashed into Kate's mind the thought that she had never done this woman justice. Here she was, generous and self-sacrificing, risking her own safety by the sick bed of her husband's own son. Could it be that after all she had married her father because she loved him, and not because he was Captain Danton of Danton Hall?

'Father Francis ought to know,' she mused; 'and Father Francis sings her praises on every occasion. I am sure Reg loves her dearly, and the servants like and respect her in a manner I never saw surpassed. Can it be that I have been blind, and unjust, and prejudiced from the first? At last, that my father's wife is a thousand times better than I am?'

The two women sat together in the sick room all the forenoon. Kate talked to her step mother far more socially and kindly than she had ever talked to her before, and was surprised to find Grace had a ready knowledge of every subject she started. She smiled at herself by-and by in a little pause in the conversation.

'She is really very pleasant,' she thought. 'I shall begin to like her presently, I am afraid.'

Early in the afternoon, Doctor Frank returned. There was little change in his patient, and he spoke for his remaining. He stayed half an hour, and then took his hat to leave. He had more pressing cases in the village to attend, and departed promising to call again before nightfall.

The news of Mr. Richards' illness had spread by this time through the house. The young Doctor knew this, and wondered if Agnes Darling had heard it, and why she did not try to see him. He was thinking about it as he walked briskly down the avenue, and resolving he must try and see her that evening, when a little black figure stepped out from the shadow of the trees and confronted him.

'Angels and ministers of grace defend us,' ejaculated the Doctor; 'I thought it was a ghost, and I find it is only Agnes Darling. You look as pale as a ghost, though. What is the matter with you?'

She clasped her hands and looked at him piteously.

'He is sick. You have seen him? Oh, Doctor Danton! is it Harry?'

'My dear Mrs Danton, I am happy to tell you it is. Don't faint now or I shall tell you nothing more.'

She learned against a tree, white and trembling, her hands clasped over her beating heart.

'And he is ill, and I may not see him. Oh, tell me what is the matter.'

'Fever. Don't alarm yourself unnecessarily. I do not think his life is in any danger.'

'Thank God! Oh, thank God for that!' She covered her face with her slender hands, and he could see the fast falling tears.

'My dear Agnes,' he said kindly. 'I don't like to see you distress yourself in this manner. Besides there is no occasion. I think your darkest days are over. I don't see why you may not go and nurse your husband.'

Her hands dropped from before her face, her great dark eyes fixed themselves on his face, dilated and wildly.

'You would like it, wouldn't you! Well, I really don't think there is anything to hinder. He is calling; for you perpetually; if it will make you happy to know it. Tell Miss Danton your story at once; tell her who you are, and if she doubts your veracity, refer her to me. I have a letter from Mr. Crosby, testifying in the most solemn manner your innocence. I wrote to Mrs. Agnes, as I could not find time to visit him. Tell Miss Kate to-day, if you choose, and you may watch by your husband's bedside to-night. Good afternoon. Old Renaud is shouting out with rheumatism; I must go and see after him.'

He strode away leaving Agnes clinging to the tree, trembling and white. The time had come then. Her husband lived, and might be returned to her yet. At the thought she fell down on her knees on the snowy ground, with the most fervent prayer of thanksgiving in her heart that she had ever uttered.

Some two hours later, and just as the dusk of the short winter day was falling, Kate came out of her brother's sick-room. She looked jaded and worn, as she stayed for a moment at the hall window to watch the grayish yellow light fade out of the sky. She had spent the best part of the day in the close chamber, and the bright outer air seemed unspeakably refreshing. She went to her room, threw a large cloth mantle around her shoulders, drew the fur-trimmed hood over her head, and went out.

The frozen fish pond glittered like a sheet of ivory in the fading light; and walking slowly around it, she saw a little familiar figure, robed like a nun, in black. She had hardly seen the pale seamstress for weeks, she had been too much absorbed in other things; but now, glad of companionship, she crossed over to the fish pond and joined her. As she drew closer, and could see the girl's face in the cold, pale twilight, she was struck with its pallor and indescribably mournful expression.

'You poor, pale child!' Miss Danton said; 'you look like some stray spirit wandering ghostly around this place. What is the matter now, that you look so wretchedly forlorn?'

Agnes looked up in the beautiful, pitying face, with her heart in her eyes.

'Nothing,' she said, tremulously, 'but the old trouble, that never leaves me. I think sometimes I am the most unhappy creature in the whole wide world.'

'Every heart knoweth its own bitterness,' Miss Danton said, steadily. 'Trouble seems to be the lot of all. But yours—you have never told me what it is, and I think I would like to know.'

They were walking together round the frozen pond, and the face of the seamstress was turned away from the dying light. Kate could not see it, but she could hear the agitation in her voice when she spoke.

'I am almost afraid to tell you. I am afraid, for oh, Miss Danton! I have deceived you.'

'Deceived me, Agnes?'

'Yes; I came here in a false character. Oh, don't be angry, please; but I am not Miss Darling—I am a married woman.'

'Married! You!'

She looked down in speechless astonishment at the tiny figure and childlike face of the little creature beside her.

'You married!' she repeated. 'You small, childlike-looking thing! And where in the wide world is your husband?'

HACKED BY INNUMERABLE PANGS, restless by day, sleepless all night, rising unrefreshed in the morning, without appetite and pestered by varying and perplexing symptoms, the dyspeptic takes indeed a gloomy view of human existence. For him the zest of life seems gone. Heartburn, oppression at the pit of the stomach, and the attendant annoyances of of constipation and biliousness, combine to render him utterly wretched. But there is, if he will but take advantage of it, a reliable source of speedy relief from all misery. NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY and DYSPEPTIC CURE is, as its name imports, a vegetable preparation, from mineral poison, and an all-sufficient remedy for indigestion in its most obstinate form. It not only enriches the blood by enabling the digestive organs to convert the food received into nutriment, but depurates it by increasing the action of the bowels and kidneys, the natural outlets for its impurities. But while it relaxes the bowels, it never does so violently and with pain, like a drastic cathartic. It is also a tonic, and by thus invigorating as well as purifying and regulating the system. It thoroughly removes those diseased humors which tend to vitiate the blood, purifies the urinary secretion, and promotes a flow of healthy bile into the natural channels, thus expelling it from the circulation. Experience has proved that this standard medicine is a thorough remedy for dyspepsia, biliousness, costiveness, kidney complaints, scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, lumbago and all impurities of the blood. Price $1.00. Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac-simile of their signature. Sold by all medicine dealers

FOR THE

KIDNEYS, LIVER AND URINARY ORGANS.

THE BEST BLOOD PURIFIER.

There is only one way by which any disease can be cured, and that is by removing the cause—whatever it may be. The great medical authorities of the day declare that nearly every disease is caused by deranged kidneys or liver. To restore these, therefore, is the only way by which health can be secured. Here is where WARNER'S SAFE CURE has achieved its great reputation. It acts directly upon the kidneys and liver and by placing them in a healthy condition drives disease and pain from the system. For all Kidney, Liver and Urinary troubles; for the distressing disorders of women; for Malaria, and physical troubles generally, this great remedy has no equal. Beware of impostors, imitations and concoctions said to be just as good.

Plain Truths!

The blood is the foundation of life, it circulates through every part of the body and unless it is pure and rich, good health is impossible, if disease has entered the system the only sure and quick way to drive it out is to purify and enrich the blood.

These simple facts are well known and the highest medical authorities agree that nothing but iron will restore the lost blood and build up condition; and also that all the Iron preparations hitherto made blacken the teeth, cause headache, and are otherwise injurious.

SULPHUR AND IRON BITTERS will thoroughly and quickly assimilate with the blood, purifying and strengthening it and thus drive disease from any part of the system, and it will not blacken the teeth cause headache or constipation and is positively not injurious.

St. Johnsbury, Vermont Oct. 21st 1882.

For six years I have been a great sufferer from blood disease, dyspepsia and constipation, and became so debilitated that I could not retain anything on my stomach. In fact he had almost become a burden, and when hope had almost left me, I was induced to give SULPHUR AND IRON BITTERS a trial and I am now taking the third bottle and have not felt as well in the years as I do at present.

MRS. S. L. MOORE.

SULPHUR AND IRON BITTERS effectually cures dyspepsia, indigestion and weakness, and renders the greatest relief and benefit to persons suffering from such diseases as kidney and liver complaints, dyspepsia, indigestion etc.

Ayer's

Cathartic Pills

Combine the choicest cathartic principles in medicinal virtue, and in proportions adjusted to secure activity, certainty, and uniformity of effect. They are the result of years of careful study and practical experiment, and are the most effectual remedy yet discovered for diseases caused by derangement of the stomach, liver, and bowels, which require prompt and effectual treatment. AYER'S PILLS are specially applicable to this class of diseases. They act directly on the digestive and assimilative processes, and restore a healthy action. Their extensive use by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, is one of the many proofs of their value as a safe, sure, and reliable purgative medicine. Being compounded of the concentrated virtues of purely vegetable substances, they are positively free from calomel or any injurious properties, and can be administered to children with perfect safety.

AYER'S PILLS are an effectual cure for Constipation or Costiveness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Foul Stomach and Breath, Dizziness, Headache, Loss of Memory, Numbness, Biliousness, Jaundice, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Dropsy, Tumors, Worms, Neuralgia, Colic, Gripes, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Gout, Piles, Disorders of the Liver, and all other diseases resulting from a disordered state of the digestive apparatus.

As a Dinner Pill they have no equal.

While gentle in their action, these PILLS are the most thorough and searching cathartic that can be employed, and never give pain unless the bowels are inflamed, and then their influence is healing. They stimulate the appetite and digestive organs; they operate to purify and enrich the blood, and impart renewed health and vigor to the whole system.

Dominion Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

TUESDAY, April 10

LIQUOR LICENSE ACT.

Sir John Macdonald moved the substitution of other members in the place of Messrs. Ross, Blake, Burpee, Laurier, Casgrain, and Robertson, of Shelburne, members of the Opposition who refused to serve on the select committee appointed to consider the liquor licenses question. Nothing was said by the Opposition in explanation of their course. Probably they felt that the least said the soonest mended.

FISHERY LAWS.

The Minister of Marine and Fisheries introduced a bill making better provision for the issue of fishery leases and licenses. This he considered necessary by a decision of the Supreme Court which limits the power of the Federal Government to close duties, and assures the riparian rights to the owners of the soil.

WHEAT INSPECTION.

The Minister of Inland Revenue introduced a resolution to give Winnipeg power to appoint an Inspector of Grain, and to provide that thirty Fife wheat, when grown in Manitoba or the Territories, may be inspected as higher than No. 2.

MILITIA.

In moving the second reading of the bill consolidating and amending the several Acts relating to the Militia and defence of Canada, Mr. Caron referred with pride to the military history of the Dominion, and gave an outline of our militia system, which he regarded as a credit to the country. In addition to consolidating the existing laws, the bill provides for some changes. There will now only be two kinds of militiamen, active and reserve, which will apply to the present and past fine forces. It is proposed to divide a troop of cavalry between Kingston and Quebec, half being attached to B battery and half to A battery. The most important feature of the bill is a provision for three schools of infantry instruction, which will be invaluable for training officers. If the bill becomes law, it is the intention of the department to issue commissions only to persons holding certificates from these schools. The bill further provides for the appointment of a Quartermaster General, and contains new regulations regarding court-martials and other matters.

The debate which followed brought all the military men in the House to their feet, and others besides.

Mr. Vail, Minister of Militia in the Mackenzie administration, considered it his duty to say something, but he got off nothing of any something, but he got off nothing of any something, but he got off nothing of any something, but he got off nothing of any something, but he got off nothing of any something, but he got off nothing of any importance. He complained of the fact that the Department in giving large orders for clothing in Britain was not observing the protection policy of the Government.

Mr. Kaulbach, Halifax, complained that the militia was too small. It should be one million dollars at least.

Mr. Ross, of Middlesex, argued that the contemplated changes were in the wrong direction. The Department should devote its attention to improving the men in drill and general proficiency rather than providing further training for the officers, who were well trained already. He protested against the appointment of a Quartermaster-General as being altogether unnecessary, and said the time had come when the Major-General of Militia should be a Canadian officer.

When the House went into Committee on the bill some passages occurred between the leader of the Opposition and the Minister of Militia. Finally Mr. Caron moved that the Committee rise and report progress, which was done.

The House adjourned at 11.40.

The Reform Press and the Leader.

(From the Regina Leader.)

The Belleville INTELLIGENCER says:

"The British press are delighted because Mr. N. F. Davin, a clever Conservative—says through the Regina Leader, of which he is the editor:—'The very fact of desiring Sir John's return is proved that Mr. Meredith, even in his own estimation, is no leader of men.' This is Mr. Davin's opinion, and may be taken for what it is worth. However, as the Kingston News points out, let the Grits apply the same process of reasoning to the assistance rendered by Mr. Mowat to Mr. Blake in the Dominion election of June last year, and they will find that they have the following to rejoice over:—'The very fact of desiring Mr. Mowat's aid proved that Mr. Blake, even in his own estimation, is not a leader of men.' How do our Grit friends like the conclusion to which their acceptance of Mr. Davin's induction has led them?"

We think the reasoning of the Kingston News perfectly just. If Mr. Blake had been a real leader of men he would long ago have shown his strength and would have made himself quite independent of all the said Mr. Mowat could give him. Never had any man such a chance as Mr. Blake. He was brought into Parliament at a time when the Conservative party was suffering from being in power too long, when the health of the Conservative leader was poor, before Sir Charles Tupper and Sir Hugh Allan, before Dalton McCarthy had been heard of, and when the leader of his own party was not only out of Parliament but had practically resigned all political impossibility." Mr. Blake had distinguished himself as a lawyer, and he was brought forward by the Globe with such a flourish of trumpets as never was heard about an untried man. Ere he had the opportunity to do anything he was credited with the power of doing everything. One admirer told us he believed Blake could have written an epic poem. And "so he could" we replied, "but nobody could read it." He was born on our soil—a great advantage, for it was calculated to catch the feeling of Nativism which disfigured Canada First, and separated strong spirits from it—but which was yet a power. He had had a good education. Now what has he done with it all? Has he shown capacity, or tact, or statesmanship, or courage? He cowered under the eye of the late George Brown, whose eye was yet no eye to make a first-class man quail; in or out of the House his finesse reminds one of nothing so much as a demoralized water barrel trying to make believe it is a single lantern; his statesmanship—never rose above fads such as Imperial Confederation, sneers in borrowed phrase against British Columbia, and insane attack on the North-West No; Mr. Blake is no leader of men. We should like to see some strong men on both sides of the House. But the machines and the meanest defect of greatness hit off in immortal lines by Alexander Pope:—

Should such a man, too fond to rule alone
Bear, like the Turk, no brother near the throne,
View him with scornful yet with jealous eyes,
And hate for arts that caused himself to rise;
Damn with faint praise, assent with civil leer,
And without sneering teach the rest to sneer;
Willing to wound, and yet afraid to strike,
Just hint a fault, and hesitate dislike;
—these things have left the House of Commons of Canada with little of the material out of which leaders are made. For let there be no mistake, you must have the real stuff, the incommunicable fire, in order to make a leader. Silk purses are good, and power vests are good, but silk purses made out of sows' ears have been failures since the birth of time, and will continue to prove failures in Canada or elsewhere.

The Cunning of Sharks.

A letter from the Bahamas says: A volume could be written about the habits and traits of the tropical sharks. In the teeming fish life of these tropical waters they find abundant food, all the more easily captured because of the transparency of the sea. It follows that there is an enormous development of shark life, both as to number and species, as compared with more temperate ocean climes. In his relations with the fishermen the shark is a vile marplot. You may be gleefully hauling in fish after fish, and congratulating yourself on an hour or two of sport. Suddenly just as you have started a four-pounder upward, you see a gleaming white flash. Pull rapidly as you will, you will pull in vain. Thirty feet more of line, it may be, are drawn in, when the hook seems to strike a rock. Perhaps the check is but momentary; then on drawing in you find only the head of handsome fish whose body has gone into Mr. Shark's maw. But more likely you have put too much strain upon the line, and in that case the shark, fearing the escape of the prey, has bolted hook, fish, and sinker, bite off only the severed line comes back. The negro fishermen, with the aid of their glasses, have been able to make a thorough study of the habits of these pirates of the deep, and give the shark a high character for cunning. Of these negroes aver, a shark will sometimes follow a boat for a mile until it comes to anchor. Then, lying in the shadow of some subaqueous rock, so as not to frighten the fish from biting, the shrewd fellow will dart out the instant a hooked victim begins his ascent. With a hungry shark around, not more than one out of three hooked fish ever reaches the rail; and there is proportionate and vexatious loss of hooks and sinkers. After his novel fishing is ended, the shark rids himself of these impedimcats by rubbing his nose and lips against projecting rocks. Sharks of the moderate size of ten or twelve feet may sometimes be caught with a rope and a huge hook hung to a chain. But even then they have a clever way of following up the line, turning on the back, and by a side snap of the teeth cutting the line. Sharks of from twenty to thirty feet long, have never been caught by line, and the negroes tell wondrous tales as to the chain hooks and huge cords broken in tackling the big fellows. We have had lately here an illustration of their voracity. A negro sailor had caught one day an ordinary shark ten feet in length and weighing some 250 pounds. He left the creature over night on a line attached to his boat. The next morning only the head was found. It had been severed from the body by a single clean cut just behind the gills. As a rule, when once the sharks get actively at work around the line all legitimate sport ends for that anchorage in fifteen or twenty minutes, as the fish fly to the rocks for protection. But sometimes the fisherman, tying together a bottle and piece of iron, drop it down on a cord attached to a boat. The rise and fall of the craft on the waves keeps up a constant twinkling below, and, as water is a good sound conductor, the sharks flee in terror. A ray of sunlight cast down through the water glass often has a similar effect.

A Good Medicine.—Mr. J. Wyatt, of Rockingham, N.C., has a little boy, five years old, who has been suffering with a skin disease, breaking out all over, ever since he was born. BELLEVILLE, THURSDAY, APRIL 11.

An Untruthful Critic.

Under the above heading the Hamilton Spectator thus conclusively shows how unassailable the tariff really is, by the absurd and dishonest modes of criticism to which the Grit leaders are driven as their only resort:

Mr. Figurative Paterson is ingenious. Two of his points against the existing tariff are that it has depreciated the value of bank stocks and it has encouraged trade with the United States at the expense of that with Great Britain. One would naturally suppose that in support of these statements he would compare the figures for a series of years before with a series after the change in the tariff or else compare the last year under the old tariff with the fiscal year last closed. He does not do either, for the very excellent reason that to do either would wholly disprove his assertion. But he compares prices of bank stocks in 1878 with prices in 1879, before the effects of the National Policy began to be felt; and he compares 1881 with 1882 to show that the National Policy has caused a greater increase in our trade with the United States than in our trade with Great Britain. Let us look at the second subject first. The following figures will show our imports from Great Britain and the United States from 1876 to 1882:

	Great Britain.	United States.
1876	$40,734,260	$46,070,033
1877	39,572,233	51,312,660
1878	37 431,130	48 631,739
1879	30,993,130	43,730,219
1880	34,461,224	29,346,948
1881	43,53,,8,8	36,704,112
1882	50,397,341	48,289,052

In the four years ending with 1879 we imported from the United States $41,000,000 worth of goods more than from Great Britain. In the three years since, we have [illegible] from the United States. The change has favored Great Britain to the extent of $15,000,000 annually. And yet Mr. Paterson has the hardihood to assert exactly the contrary.

As to the bank stocks, we take the table of yesterday and compare it with that published on the corresponding date in 1878.

	1878.	1883.
Bank of Montreal	150½	200
Ontario Bank	92½	112
Molson's Bank	90	103
Bank of Toronto	136	183½
Merchants' Bank	63	124
Canadian Bank of Commerce	114½	134
Imperial Bank	105	140
Federal Bank	103	161
Dominion Bank	122½	201
Standard Bank	78½	114½
Bank of Hamilton	100	114
Canada Life Assurance Co	182½	305
Hamilton Gas	120	150
City Gas Company (Montreal)	150	170½

It will be seen that there is nothing in the comparison to support Mr. Paterson's theory that bank stocks have depreciated. On the contrary, every stock is higher than in 1878, while some have appreciated nearly a hundred per cent. Dominion securities, too, are worth much more than under Reform rule, and the benefit to the people is that the average rate of interest is much lower. Mr. Paterson's bold assertions are wholly without truth.

Editorial Brevities.

The Grit papers copied with strong approval the opinion of the Regina Leader on Mr. Meredith's capabilities as a party leader. The same journal has given its opinion as to Mr. Blake's leadership of the Grit party, and we now ask the Grit press to give place to that opinion. The article in question is reproduced in another column.

The Grit press have of late been boasting very loudly of the abilities of the members of their party in the Commons as debaters. Here is the opinion expressed by a disinterested observer—the Ottawa correspondent of the Montreal Star:

The Budget debate sufficed to draw out the best talent existing on both sides of the House, and by the result it was apparent that the Reformers are at a great disadvantage as compared with their political opponents on this score, and that, too, in larger proportion even than the great difference in numbers between the two parties. The Government of the day has naturally, by its National policy, drawn to its support a strong following of gifted, patriotic and zealous young men.

The Grit press are not at all pleased with the fact that the Government have decreed reciprocity of tariffs between Canada and the United States in the article of agricultural implements. They would rather that the Yankees should supply our North west with such articles. The Regina Leader, however, takes the opposite view, and says:—"We are not disposed to grumble at agricultural implements being still more protected, because we saw here in 1879 that all the agricultural implements came from the States, and we still see that they are making a desperate struggle to capture the market, resorting even to fraud, to drive our own manufacturers out of the market. Let every farmer coming to our country determine to bring only instruments manufactured in Canada. Our own instruments are better. The Canadian goods are honester goods."

OBITUARY.

WM. SAYERS.

Our aged brother has gone to his rest. He was born in the County of Donegal, Ireland, in the year 1793. He was married in the year 1828 and came to this country in 1830, and resided in Prince Edward County about 14 years. He then moved to Hastings County, where he spent the remainder of his life, esteemed by all who knew him. He was attached to the Church of his choice, was a Methodist for many years. Sound and loyal to the Queen, and the British Nation, a true patriot. All whom the writer met with had a good word for father Sayers. Towards the end of his days he was a great sufferer. He was, however, throughout his trials patient and resigned, anxious to depart and be with Christ, if the Lord only willed it. He bore up manfully, and put the best construction on the designs of Providence. He quietly and peacefully fell asleep in Jesus, having finished his course November 21st, 1882. The esteem of his many friends might have been seen by their number at the funeral and their devout attention and sympathy, with the address and tribute paid by the writer on that solemn occasion in Bethel Church, Hungerford.

ANN SAYERS.

The devoted wife of the above, W. Sayers, within a few days followed him. This, indeed, was her desire to live long enough to see him at rest, then was her work seemingly accomplished and she died in peace. She was born in the same County of Donegal, Ireland, in the year 1808. She proved a great help-meet. Her religious experience was uniform. There was a conscious carrying out of personal obligations. She shrank not from self-denial in regard for the interest of others; she was unassuming in manner, quiet and reserved; her character was irreproachable. The religion of Jesus Christ was her stay. A few days of rapidly failing strength, for she did not rally after her aged companion had left her, and she peacefully passed away over the river of death, to meet at the river of life "Where angel feet have trod." Mr. and Mrs. Sayers left a large and influential family settled in different parts. Their faithful son, Robt Sayers, and his sympathizing wife, with whom, for many years they had resided, had to say farewell to both father and mother in one short fortnight, after exercising the best of care through their prolonged feebleness. Mrs. Sayers was buried by the remains of her departed companion after a solemn service in the same church, Hungerford. She died Dec. 2rd 1882.

FIFTH PARLIAMENT—FIRST SESSION.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

OTTAWA, April 11.—The business of private members had precedence in the Commons to-day.

In answer to Mr. Casey, the Hon. Mr. Pope said the Government had arranged for a [illegible] this year.

A lively debate sprung up on a motion by Mr. Blake for copies of letters, memorials or representations asking for an increase in the tariff on any of the articles on which the proposed tariff resolutions alter the rates of duty.

The Minister of Customs, in the absence of Sir Leonard Tilley, who has been indisposed for the past two days, asked that the resolution be withdrawn on the ground that it was not advisable to reveal the correspondence, which, for the most part, was private and confidential.

Mr. Blake did not ask for private correspondence, but he considered the House was entitled to know on what representations the changes in the tariff were to be made.

The debate was remarkable for the speech of the Hon. Peter Mitchell, who attacked Mr. Bowell for refusing the information asked for, and took occasion to say that the N. P. had not benefitted a single interest in Northumerland, N.B., which county he represented. The Opposition received the hon. gentleman's remarks with great favor.

The Premier said that the motion struck at the root of obtaining full and exhaustive information on any matter that the Government deemed desirable.

In replying to the Premier, Mr. Mitchell was interrupted by the member for Cardwell, whereupon he accused Mr. White of being a rabid partizan, and said he would vote every time as the Premier wished.

Mr. White got up and said Mr. Mitchell was not worth replying to, as it was well known what his tongue was. This made the member for Northumberland very angry, and he attempted to reply, but he was compelled to sit down amidst loud and continued cries of order.

A division then took place on the motion, which was lost on a vote of 65 for and 115 against.

The House devoted the night session to Mr. McCarthy's Railway Commission bill. Mr. McCarthy explained that the measure was misunderstood. It was not revolutionary, but merely provided a means to compel Railway companies to obey the law.

Messrs. Girouard and McCallum opposed the bill, and Messrs. Casey, Orton, White (Renfrew), McNeill and Armstrong lifted up their voices in favor of it as beneficial to the country at large.

The motion that the House go into Committee on the bill was lost.

The House adjourned at 11.35.

Honest and Liberal.

When the Hops in each bottle of Hop Bitters (at the present price, $1.25 per lb.,) cost more than a bottle is sold for, besides the other costly medicines, and the quality and price are kept the same, we think it is honest and liberal in the proprietors, and no one should complain, or buy or use worthless stuff, or cheating bogus imitations because the price is less.

A common, and often fatal, disease is Jaundice. Regulate the action of the Liver, and cleanse the blood with Burdock Blood Bitters, and the worst case may be speedily cured.

Spring Assizes.

Mr. Burdett moved for a non suit on the count for rent, but His Lordship declined to accede to the request.

CHARLES L. COLEMAN, the defendant, testified that he was visited by the plaintiff, who wanted to rent a shop from him which he had rented to one Patterson; he told her that she would have to see Patterson; she afterwards saw witness several times and finally she got the lease transferred for $25; he told Miss Ross that whoever went into the shop would be responsible for the rent and taxes; he denied having made any agreement with Miss Ross to give her a month's rent free, nor was any agreement made about improvements; witness paid the taxes after the plaintiff left the premises; he did not want to get rid of Patterson, though he might have said he was a drinking man; witness first learned that steps were being taken for charging him with assault and battery from Mr. Henderson; he denied having assaulted the plaintiff as she alleged; he was only in the shop once alone; when he got the letter from Mr. Henderson he went to the latter's office, where he was made acquainted with the allegations as to an assault, how that the father of the plaintiff stamped around and the plaintiff's black eyes flashed when she related the story of the wrong done her.

(Here, Mr. Henders n, the plt'f's solicitor, denied the truth of Mr. Coleman's statement.)

"It's false," he added.

"It's not false," replied witness, and you would not say it to me in another place."

Witness asked that a complaint be made to the Magistrate or to the Government, but this was not done; another letter was received from the plt'f's lawyer and the writ was issued afterwards.

Thos. Coleman was called and deposed that he witnessed the assignment of the lease and corroborated his father's testimony. J. B. Patterson; the next witness gave evidence to same effect as Mr. Thos. Coleman as to who were present at the time of the execution of the assignment of the lease and as to the forms of assignment and as to back rent.

Peter Maher deposed that he was with the bailiff when he entered the plt'f's store, and said that the bailiff made no distress. He did not hear her say there was no rent due; there were no customers in the shop when he and the bailiff went in.

Philip Lavoie was called for the purpose of impeaching plt'ff's evidence; he deposed that he would not believe the plt'ff under oath, and there were many more in Montreal who would not believe her; plt'ff was in his employ three months, and on one certain order she beat him out of $5; her character as a lady was good, but she was not honest in business.

Charles Devott, a French merchant, from Montreal, was also called by the deft. for the purpose of shewing the veracity of the witness, but being unable to talk English he was sworn, and through an interpreter deposed to the same effect as the previous witness as to the plaintiff's character as an honest and square dealing person.

Mr. Comerford from Madoc deposed he had known plt'f. since she was 13 or 14 years of age. Her reputation in Madoc and neighborhood was good and he had never heard anything against her. He would believe her under oath. Her family is a respectable one.

Holden Reed testified that he had known the plt'f. in Madoc, and from what he knew of her, and of her veracity and truth he would believe her under oath.

Mr. Clute for the defts. then addressed the the case before them for their decision.

He was followed by G. E. Henderson, Q. C., for plt'f., who made a very lengthy and exhaustive argument, after which the Judge addressed them and they retired.

MARTHA LUCAS VS. MERVILLE KNOX.—Action for an assault for ejecting her from a house alleged to be her sister's, Mrs. Knox, step mother of the deft. Deft. is a son of the late Jacob Knox, and by his father's will became entitled to the farm on which he had been living with his father prior to his death. The step mother declined to accept under her late husband's will, and had requested the plt'f., her sister, to come and stay with her for a short time. Deft., thinking the house was his, requested plt'f. to leave, she did not comply, and he put her out on a cold day in January last, using no more force than necessary.

The Judge was of opinion that plt'f. had no right there, and should have gone when requested by deft., but in order to avoid another trial, requested the jury to assess damages as if plt'f. had a right to be there and was wrongfully put out. Damages for plt'f. $50. Burdett for plt'f., Denmark & Northrup for deft.

CUTHBERT VS. DAVOE.—Action for inflicting two severe punishments on a scholar in school. Parties settled.—Flint & Sherry for pl'ff; Holden & Anderson for deft.

Beware of Imitations.

Since Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has become celebrated, a number of unprincipled persons have been endeavoring to palm off Electron and Electric Oil for the genuine DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. Beware of these similar named articles. If their originators had any faith in the healing properties of their own medicines they would, like honest men, give them name of their own, and not try to sell them the reputation of another; but as they know their preparations have no merit, they resort to the most unprincipled means of selling them by getting a name as near as possible to Eclectric. We therefore ask the public when purchasing to see that the name Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is on the front of the wrapper, and the signature of NORTHROP & LYMAN, the proprietors for Canada on the back.

IS THE history of medicine no preparation has received such universal commendation for the alleviation it affords, and the permanent cure it effects in kidney diseases, as DR. VAN DUSEN'S KIDNEY-CURE. Its action in these distressing complaints is simply wonderful. Sold by all Druggists.

The information was elicited that Carey, when plotting the murders, was a member of the Sodality which received the sacrament in stated periods. Carey said he was promised pardon before he determined to testify against his fellow conspirators.

A photograph was handed to Carey, which witness identified as that of the man known as "No. 1."

Kavanagh, who drove the car in which the murderers rode, repeated his former evidence. His testimony showed that it was Brady who directed him where to drive, and who designated the place for him to wait for the murderers

SLOW OFFICIALS.

NEW YORK, April 12.—Nothing is known at the German Consulate here concerning the complaints of the flood sufferers in Germany that they have not yet received any of the money subscribed in this country for their benefit. It is thought here that the money is all right, but that the German officials are slow.

TERRIBLE CRUELTIES IN HAYTI.

It is stated that the revolution in Hayti, reported yesterday, is due to the cruelties practiced on the mulattos. Under President Saloman's administration there has always been bitterness between the blacks and mulattoes; the latter, forming a third of the population, have been shut off from all political privileges. The present Government banished some mulattoes, imprisoned others, and shot hundreds after a brief insurrection. Prisons are filled with women and children, and banished mulattoes. One day 7 men, and another day 28 men, were taken out of prison and shot without a trial. In the latter case the dead bodies were mutilated by the blacks. Nearly all the property of the mulattoes has been confiscated.

Riches in Hop Farming.

At the present prices, ten acres in Hops will bring more money than five hundred acres in any other farming; and, if there is a consumer or dealer who thinks the price of Hop Bitters high, remember Hops are $1.25 per lb., and the quantity and quality of Hops in Hop Bitters and the price remains the same as formerly. Don't buy or use worthless stuff or imitations because the price is less.

Her bow was carried away and she put into Hampton Roads leaking. The Captain tried to reach Norfolk but was forced to beach the steamer off Lambert Point light last night. She now lies half under water. The passengers were taken to Old Point without accident. Wreckers are trying to raise her. The steamer is owned by F. Alexander & Son, New York.

The Smith Medicine Co.

Gentlemen,—I have very much pleasure in testifying to the efficacy of Dr. Smith's German Worm Remedy. I found it to operate successfully after only two doses. Have tried other remedies with the same child without success. Yours truly, W. T. HART, 128 Amherst St., Montreal.

NOW THAT there is a reliable remedy for kidney troubles, half the terrors attached to those complaints have been removed. For this let all be thankful, and to DR. VAN BUREN'S KIDNEY CURE award all praise for having thus removed a hitherto considered fatal disease from our path. It was never known to fail. Sold by all Druggists.

The Bad and Worthless

are never imitated or counterfeited. This is especially true of a family medicine, and it is a positive proof that the remedy imitated is of the highest value. As soon as it had been tested and proved by the whole world that Hop Bitters was the purest, best and most valuable family medicine ever known on earth, many imitations sprung up and began to steal the notices in which the press and people of the country had expressed the merits of H. B., and in every way trying to induce suffering invalids to use their stuff instead, expecting to make money on the credit and good name of H. B. Many others started nostrums put up in similar style to H. B., with variously devised names in which the word "Hop" or "Hops" were used in a way to mislead people to believe they were the same as Hop Bitters. All such pretended remedies or cures, no matter what their style or name is, and especially those with the word "Hop" or "Hops" in their name or in any way connected with them or their name, are intended for counterfeits. Beware of them. Touch one or counterfeits. Beware of them. Touch none of them. Use nothing but genuine Hop Bitters, with a bunch or cluster of green Hops on the white label. Trust nothing else. Druggists and dealers are warned against dealing in imitations or counterfeits.

One of Earth's Angels.

Agnes Darling covered her face with her hands, and broke out into a hysterical passion of tears.

"Don't cry, you poor little unfortunate. Tell me if this faithless husband is the friend I once heard you say you were in search of!"

"Yes, yes," Agnes answered, through her sobs. "Oh, Miss Danton! Please, please, don't be angry with me, for indeed, I am very miserable."

"Angry with you, my poor child," Kate said tenderly; "no indeed! But tell me all about it. How did this cruel husband come to desert you? Does he not love you?

"Oh, yes, yes, yes."

"And you—did you love him?"

"With my whole heart."

The memory of her own dead love stung Kate to the very soul.

"Oh!" she said, bitterly, "it is only a very old story, after all. We are all alike; we give up our whole heart for a man's smile, and rarely we get our reward. This husband of yours took a fancy, I suppose, to some new and fresher face, and threw you over for her sake!"

Agnes Darling looked up with wide black eyes.

"Oh, no, no! He loved me faithfully. He never was false, as you think. It was not that; he thought I was false, and base, and wicked. Oh! she cried, covering her face with her hands again; 'I can't tell you how base he thought me.'

"I think I understand," Kate said, slowly. "But how was it, if it was not true, of course."

Agnes lifted her face, raising her solemn, dark eyes mournfully to the gaze of the earnest blue ones.

"It was not true," she replied simply; "I love him with all my heart, and him only. He was all the world to me, for I was alone, an orphan, sisterless and brotherless. I had only one relative in the wide world —a distant cousin, a young man, who boarded in the same house with me. I was only a poor working girl in New York, and my husband was far above me—I thought so then, I know it since. I knew very little of him. He boarded at the same house, and I often saw him at the table. How he ever came to love me—a little, pale, quiet thing like me—I don't know; but he did love me—he did—it is very sweet to remember that now. He loved me, and he married me, but under an assumed name, under the name of Darling, which I know now was not his real one."

She paused a little, and Kate looked at her with sudden breathless interest. How like this story was to another, terribly familiar.

"We were married," Agnes went on, softly and sadly, 'and I was happy. Oh, Miss Danton, I can never tell you how unspeakably happy I was for a time. But it was not for long. Troubles began to gather thick and fast before many months. My husband was a gambler"—she paused a second or two at Miss Danton's violent start—"and got into the habits of staying out very late at night, and often, when he had lost money, coming home moody and miserable. I had no influence over him to stop him. He had a friend, another gambler, and a very bad man, who drew him on. It was very dreary sitting alone night after night until twelve or one o'clock, and my only visitor was my cousin, the young man who lived in the house with me. He was destinely engaged to a young lady, whose family were wealthy and would not for a moment hear of the match, I was his only confidante, and he liked to come evenings and talk to me of Helen. Sometimes, seeing me so lonely and low-spirited, he would stay with me within half an hour of Harry's return; but Helen knows neither he nor I ever dreamed it could be wrong. No harm might ever have come of it, for my husband knew and liked him, but for that gambling companion, whose name was Furnise."

She paused again, trembling and agitated, for Miss Danton had uttered a sharp, involuntary exclamation.

"Go on! Go on!" she said breathlessly.

"This Furnise hated my cousin, for he was his successful rival with Helen Hamilton, and took his revenge in the cruelest and basest manner. He discovered that my cousin was in the habit of visiting me occasionally in the evening, and he poisoned my husband's mind with the foulest insinuations.

"He told him that William Crosby, my cousin, was an old lover, and that—oh, I cannot tell you what he said! He drove my husband, who was violent and passionate, half mad, and sent him home one night early, when he knew Will was sure to be with me. I remember that dreadful night so well—I have terrible reason to remember it. Will sat with me, talking of Helen, telling me he could wait no longer; that she had consented, and they were going to elope the very next night. While he was speaking, the door was burst open, and Harry stood before us, livid with fury, a pistol in his hand. A second later and there was a report—William Crosby sprang from his seat and fell forward, with a scream I shall never forget. I think I was screaming too; I can hardly recollect what I did, but the room was full in a moment, and my husband was gone—how, I don't know. That was two years ago, and I have never seen him since; but I think—"

She stopped short, for Kate Danton had caught her suddenly and violently by the arm, her eyes dilating.

"Agnes!" she exclaimed, passionately; "what is it you have been telling me! Who are you!"

Agnes Darling held up her clasped hands.

"Oh, Miss Danton," cried, "for our dear Lord's sake, have pity on me! I am your brother's wretched wife!"

CHAPTER XXI.

The two women stood in the bleak twilight looking at each other—Agnes with piteous, imploring eyes, Kate dazed and hopelessly bewildered.

"My brother's wife!" she repeated. 'You! Agnes Darling!"

"Oh, dear Miss Danton, have pity on me! Let me see him. Let me tell him I am innocent, and that I love him with my whole heart. Don't cast me off! Don't despise me! Indeed, I am not the guilty creature he thinks me!"

"Agnes, wait," Kate said, holding out her hand. "I am so confounded by this revelation that I hardly know what to do or say. Tell me how you found out my brother was here! Did you know it when you came!"

"Oh, no. I came as seamstress, with a lady from New York to Canada, and when I left her I lived in the Petite Rue de St. Jacques. There you found me; and I came here, never dreaming that I was to live in the same house with my lost husband."

"And how did you make the discovery! Did you see him!"

RACKED BY INNUMERABLE PANGS, restless by day, sleepless at night, rising unrefreshed in the morning, with appetite gone, and debilitated by varying and perplexing symptoms, the dyspeptic takes indeed a gloomy view of human existence. For him the sun of life seems gone. Heartburn, oppression at the pit of the stomach, and the attendant annoyances of of constipation and biliousness, combine to render him utterly wretched. But there is, if he will but take advantage of it, a reliable source of reliable relief from all misery. Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure is, as its name imports, a botanic preparation, free from mineral poison, and an all-sufficient remedy for indigestion in its most obstinate form. It not only enriches the blood by enabling the digestive organs to convert the food received into nutriment, but depurates it by increasing the action of the bowels and kidneys, the natural outlets for its impurities. But while it relaxes the bowels, it never does so violently and with pain, like a drastic cathartic. It aids, but never forces, Nature, invigorating as well as purifying and regulating the system. It thoroughly removes those diseased humors which tend to vitiate the blood, purifies the urinary secretion, and promotes a flow of healthy bile into the natural channel, besides expelling it from the circulation. Experience has proved that this standard medicine is a thorough remedy for dyspepsia, biliousness, costiveness, kidney complaints, scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, lumbago and all impurities of the blood. Price $1.00. Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac-simile of their signature. Sold by all medicine dealers

WARNER'S SAFE CURE

FOR THE

KIDNEYS, LIVER AND URINARY ORGANS.

THE BEST BLOOD PURIFIER.

There is only one way by which any disease can be cured, and that is by removing the cause—whatever it may be. The great medical authorities of the day declare that nearly every disease is caused by deranged kidneys or liver. To restore these, therefore, is the only way by which health can be secured. Here is where WARNER'S SAFE CURE has achieved its great reputation. It acts directly upon the kidneys and liver and by placing them in a healthy condition drives disease and pain from the system. For all Kidney, Liver and Urinary troubles; for the distressing disorders of women; for Malaria, and physical troubles generally, this great remedy has no equal. Beware of imposters, imitations and concoctions said to be just as good.

Plain Truths!

The blood is the foundation of life, it circulates through every part of the body and unless it is pure and rich, good health is impossible; if disease has entered the system the only sure and quick way to drive it out is to purify and enrich the blood.

These simple facts are well known and the highest medical authorities agree that nothing but iron will restore the blood to its natural condition; and also that all the Iron preparations hitherto made blacken the teeth, cause headache, and are otherwise injurious.

SULPHUR AND IRON BITTERS will thoroughly and quickly assimulate with the blood, purifying and strengthening it and thus drive disease from any part of the system, and it will not blacken the teeth cause headache or constipation and is positively not injurious.

St. Johnsbury, Vermont Oct. 21st 1882.

For six years I have been a great sufferer from blood disease, dyspepsia and constipation. For three years I have believed that I could not retain anything on my stomach, in fact I had almost become a burden, and when hope had almost left me, I was induced to give SULPHUR AND IRON BITTERS a trial. I am now happy to say that I feel well and have not felt so well in six years as I do at present.

MRS. S. L. MOORE.

SULPHUR AND IRON BITTERS effectually cures dyspepsia, indigestion and weakness, and renders the greatest relief and benefit to persons suffering from such diseases as kidney and liver complaints, dyspepsia, indigestion etc.

Ayer's

Cathartic Pills

Combine the choicest cathartic principles in medicine, in proportions accurately adjusted to secure activity, certainty, and uniformity of effect. They are the result of years of careful study and practical experiment, and are the most effectual remedy yet discovered for diseases caused by derangement of the stomach, liver, and bowels, which require a prompt and effectual treatment. AYER'S PILLS are specially applicable to this class of diseases. They act directly on the digestive and assimilative processes, and restore them to healthy action. Their extensive use by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, is one of the many proofs of their value as a safe, sure, and perfectly reliable purgative medicine. Being compounded of the concentrated virtues of purely vegetable substances, they are positively free from calomel or any injurious properties, and can be administered to children with perfect safety.

AYER'S PILLS are an effectual cure for Constipation or Costiveness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Foul Stomach, and Breath, Dizziness, Headache, Loss of Memory, Numbness, Biliousness, Jaundice, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Dropsy, Tumors, Worms, Neuralgia, Colic, Gripes, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Gout, Piles, Disorders of the Liver, and all other diseases resulting from a disordered state of the digestive apparatus.

As a Dinner Pill they have no equal.

While gentle in their action, these PILLS are the most thorough and searching cathartic that can be employed, and never give the unpleasant sickness the bowels are inflamed, and then their influence is healing. They stimulate the appetite and digestive powers, they operate to purify and enrich the blood, and impart renewed health and vigor to the whole system.

Farm Buildings.

Since a considerable part of every farmer's capital is locked up in farm buildings, his success or failure often depends upon the extent and character of the buildings he may erect. The money spent in buildings, especially in the case of the farmer who is in debt or whose land needs improvement to make it produce to a profit, should be limited to that which is necessary for use and comfort. For instance the desire for display and extravagance in the matter of the home has often crippled the farmer's efforts to improve the farm. A house to cost $5,000 is a construction that has led to the ruin of many a farmer, since the larger the building the greater the expense of furnishing, heating and keeping in order. Houses costing $5,000 to $8,000 each are unsuited to the requirements of average farmers. Near large cities, where farming is of the market garden style rather than of the practical, such expensive structures may not be out of place, but many of our best and most prosperous farmers would not exchange their humbler and more comfortable houses for these pretentious mansions even at a great cost. The expense of repairing, painting and keeping up a large house, and the cost of heating it during the cold season, are not offset by the comfort derived from its use. The occupancy of expensive premises is apt to stimulate habits of extravagance in other respects.

Farmers in the finest agricultural regions of Pennsylvania have immense farms which are an index of the productive capacity of their fertile acres, yet their barns and houses have but small and often inconvenient houses for themselves. Perhaps the economic ideas of these sober Dutch settlers have been pushed to an extreme, and their own comfort may be sacrificed to a certain extent; yet this fault is more easily remedied than that of extravagant outlay. When the farm is thoroughly improved and the barns and sheds are in good shape it is comparatively easy for a farmer to put up almost any kind of a residence for himself and family that good taste and good judgment may suggest. To reverse this order by first erecting a costly mansion is not so profitable, as many men have found to their cost. The fine, expensive house adds nothing to the farmer's ability to labor, or to the productive capacity of his farm. The good barn, particularly if it has a warm basement for keeping roots, does add very materially to the possibilities of the farm.

The judicious planning and erection of farm buildings demands the careful thought of the experienced farmer. The convenience of farmers will be greatly promoted by placing the farm buildings, and especially the barns, as nearly as possible in the centre of the tilled land. The crops have to be drawn to, and the manure from, the main barn, and the saving of carriage from having the barn centrally located is an important item in the economy of the farm. Very often it is the point which determines whether the farm, or the outlying portions at least, shall be profitable or otherwise. We have known many farms where the far off lots, receiving little or no manure, have actually grown poorer, until they become too unproductive for profitable culture On a farm of fifty acres or less this difference in distance between the fields is not less noticable; but on larger farms the best security for general distribution of manure will be found in having the barns and barnyard as nearly in the centre of the farm as other conditions will permit. For the same reason the building should not be located on a steep hill or in a deep hollow.

The barns for stock should, if possible, front to the east or south, so that the barnyard may be partially sheltered from the severest winds. Where there is an elevation of a few feet it is easy to construct a deep basement, with a comparatively slight rise above the surface for a roadway. The basement should, if possible, be nine feet deep, and with wide doors, so that waggons for drawing manure or grain may be driven under it. One of the best arrangements of this kind is a trap-door at one side the floor, down which bags of grain may be slid upon the waiting waggon below, thus saving the heaviest labor of lifting. With this trap-door is also handy for throwing down hay or other feed to be distributed to the stock below.

Every basement barn should be supplied with a cistern in the corner best protected from the cold, to hold water for stock. In a cistern of 500 barrels capacity, with proper cistable, as it is very important that it be cleaned out occasionally, and the smaller the receptacle the more frequently it should be cleaned. The water for stock can be drawn from near the bottom of the cistern, and by regulating the flow it may be allowed to run all the time, so that the ordinary demands of the stock may keep water in the drinking tub from overflowing. The advantage of having good water at all times under cover and always unfreeze in winter, is very great in respect to all kinds of stock. Milch cows often suffer, causing decrease in the yield of milk, rather than go a few rods from comfortable quarters for a supply of water. If the requisite water is provided under shelter, cows will drink several times per day and will be in no danger of overloading their stomachs at any one time with a large quantity of cold water.

Open sheds for storing all farm buildings is a shed for storing waggons and various farm implements. It is better in the storage of waggons that the wheels be stored rather than of boards, but the shed should be made tight above and at the sides, to exclude rain, snow and drifting winds. A few hundred dollars' worth of farm tools are exposed to the weather which might be housed in a building that need not cost more than $30 to $75. The saving in putting waggon tires alone will nearly pay the interest on the cost of a building to keep them under cover. The farm house should always be never be placed close to the grain or house barns, and absolutely never where the hens can get at the fodder or waggons for rest on them. In a manner that hens make will well pay for housing them at all seasons, while their capacity for profitable egg production demands that the house be entirely comfortable in winter. If possible, it should be so arranged as to give a southern or eastern exposure, and if built of boards, should at least be double battened as a protection against cold.—American Cultivator.

An Infant Camel.

There has been an interesting increase in the happy family of birds and beasts which is assembled around the old arsenal in Central park. The latest comer is a young camel, which began its career of earthly troubles on Saturday night. Its experience of life was a rare one for a camel, for it found itself reposing in a heap of snow. Nevertheless, it did not pine for the hot sands of the great Sahara, which ought to have been its native health, but proceeded to make itself as comfortable as it could until the day dawned and a keeper removed the youthful quadruped to more comfortable quarters. For six hours the little infant was not permitted to draw nourishment from the natural source. The old Mrs. Camel was inclined to be somewhat ungracious toward her little one, and had to be tied up with strong ropes before she would permit the caresses of her babe. Said baby is about the size of a colt, and is so ugly that if it ever catches sight of itself it will go off in a dark corner and die. It consists principally of legs. Those are long, lean, knotty, and apparently very much in their own way. The infant camel has a back just like any other camel's. There is no hump visible yet. The keeper says that the young beast will sprout a hump in the course of time and be as proud of it as a boarding school miss of the first down on his upper lip. The infant's neck, moreover, is so short that it could not eat grass, if there were any there, without lying down. This slight inconvenience will also disappear in time, and the babe's neck will then turn out and double back on itself in the manner most approved by camels which have reached the years of discretion. He has been kept housed since his birth on account of the severity on the ground. This young animal is the third camel born in the park His mother was born there before him, and he is therefore a true American. William A. Conklin, superintendent of the menagerie, says that none of the animals suffer from the cold weather.—N. Y. Times.

That Husband of Mine

Is three times the man he was before he began using "Wells' Health Renewer." $1. Druggists.

A Pleasing Incident.

In a very elegant palace car entered a weary faced, poorly dressed woman with three children—one a babe in her arms. A look of joy crept into her face as she settled down into one of the luxurious chairs, but it was quickly dispelled as she was asked rudely to "start her books." A smile of amusement was on every face as the frightened group hurried out to enter one of the common cars. Upon one young face, however, there was a look which shamed the countenance of the others. "Auntie," said the boy to the lady beside him, "I am going to carry my basket of fruit and the box of sandwiches to the poor woman in the next car. You are willing of course?" He spoke eagerly, but she answered: "Don't be foolish dear, you cannot feed them yourself, and perhaps the woman is an impostor." "No I'll not need them," he answered decidedly "it is a very low hour, you know I had a hearty breakfast, and don't need a lunch. The woman looked hungry, auntie, and so tired too, with those three little babies clinging to her. I'll be back in a minute, auntie. I know mother wouldn't like it if I didn't speak a kind word to one of those when I meet them." The worldly auntie brushed a tear from her eye after the boy left her, and said audibly: "Just like his dear mother." About five minutes later, as the lady passed the mother and the children, she saw a pretty sight—the family feasting as perhaps they had never done before; the dainty sandwiches were eagerly eaten, the fruit basket stood open. The eldest child, with her mouth filled with bread and butter, said: "Was he pretty boy an angel, mother?" "No," answered the mother, and a grateful look brightened her faded eyes: "but he is doing angel's work, bless his dear heart!"

Parcel Postage.

Mr. R. C. Filliter has done a material service to the public by pressing upon the Dominion and British Governments, through our columns, the desirability of establishing a parcel post between Canada and the mother country, as he has elicited the fact that these Governments will in all probability carry out the object for which Mr. Filliter has worked with disinterested zeal for a length of time. The following correspondence will explain itself:

CUSTOMS DEPARTMENT,
OTTAWA, March 2, 1883.

MY DEAR SIR,—I am in receipt of yours of the 1st inst., together with letter and newspaper for Hon. John Carling. I will bring the question of Parcel Postage under his notice at the earliest moment.

Yours truly,
M. HOWELL.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
OTTAWA, March 13, 1883.

SIR:—I am directed by the Postmaster General to acknowledge the receipt of your note of the 1st inst., respecting the establishment of a Parcel Post with Great Britain, and to say that he will give every attention to your representations. I am, Sir,

Your obed't serv't,
WM. WHITE,
Sec'y.

Mr. Filliter also forwarded a copy of his letter to the Hon. Henry Fawcett, Postmaster General of Great Britain, and received the following highly encouraging reply:

GENERAL POST OFFICE,
LONDON, March 27, 1883.

SIR:—I beg leave to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 2nd inst., with the copy of the WEEKLY INTELLIGENCER to which you refer, and to inform you that the Department is at the present time actively engaged in preparing for the establishment of an Inland Parcel Post in this country, which must precede the consideration of any arrangements for an International Parcel Post. The latter question will, however, be taken in hand as soon as the Department is in a position to deal with it effectually. I am, Sir,

Your obed't serv't,
F. E. BAINES.

Editorial Brevities.

The free traders hold that the consumer pays the duty in Canada, and that the Canadian producer pays the duty on all that he exports to the United States. At least, this is the only logical deduction that can be drawn from their advocacy of a reciprocity treaty with the United States, which they hold would give Canadians better prices for their barley, lumber, &c., because of the abolition of the duties imposed by our neighbors. Evidently there is a bad flaw in the free-traders' conflicting assertions—we cannot dignify them with the title of arguments.

The Hamilton Times asks, with characteristic assumption, "Who but a lunatic would endorse Tilley's taxation policy?" This reminds us of the inmate of a lunatic asylum who declared that he was confined because all the rest of the world were lunatics, and that they, being the stronger, had imprisoned him. The Times has, we hope, a sufficient degree of sense to see the point, as its lunacy is assuredly a monomania on the subject of the tariff.

Although the Times is thus afflicted, in common with Sir Richard Cartwright—who has been punished by being confined to private life—it has not always been so. In 1875 it preached the strongest kind of protection. Let us hope for our afflicted contemporary's return to reason; or, if that be impossible, for a mitigation of its mental malady, which will manifest itself by the absence of such a wild outbreak as the assertion that all the people of Canada are lunatics except the editor of the Times and a favored few like himself, whom he specially excepts.

For several months past the Grit press have been abusing Mr. Stephens, a gentleman who acted as Returning Officer in Bothwell, for alleged unfairness towards the Grit candidate. Now that Mr. Hawkins, who was returned for the constituency, has brought a charge of unfairness against the County Judge, in refusing to recount the ballots at his request, the Grit papers declare that Mr. Hawkins has acted improperly in attacking a public official who is not in a position to defend himself. What a significant exposition this is of the Grit idea of fair play.

One of the liveliest debates of the session occurred on Wednesday night, when Mr. Blake moved for correspondence respecting changes in the tariff, between the Finance Minister and outside parties—a motion which the Mail very pertinently terms a "Paul Pry motion." Mr. Bowell, who acted for the Finance Minister, refused to gratify the prurient curiosity of the Opposition, for the reason that the correspondence, generally speaking, is confidential, and some of the changes are made at the instance of deputations who are heard by the Minister, and whose speeches are not reported. Sir John A. Macdonald pointed out the constitutional doctrine that the Ministers are responsible for their acts, and the Mail significantly tells Mr. Blake that if he "can't attack the tariff with success, he should not want to break open the Minister's locked portfolio." There was quite a sharp debate, and the motion was finally rejected by 115 to 65.

The Opposition fared very badly. In fact, they were beaten at every point, and even Peter Mitchell—clever but eccentric—could not save them. Mr. Paterson, the future Finance Minister of the Grit party, wanted the motion passed, arguing that because one letter was read by the Minister of Finance in his budget speech last year, other parties ought to be advertised in a similar manner. Sir John quieted Mr. Paterson by giving him the following bonbon:

Does he want the Finance Department searched in order to find whether there is any letter or any advertisement, as he calls these letters, urging the necessity of protecting cigars? (Laughter.)

Mr. Paterson—That's all right.

Sir John Macdonald—The hon. gentleman knows what I mean.

Mr. Paterson—Yes.

Mr. Paterson deals in cigars. We charge him nothing for this advertisement.

Mr. Charlton, being a Yankee, wanted things done in the Yankee way, as others of his party do, regardless of the differences in the systems of Government. He stated, what is the fact, that all the proposed tariff changes are given publicity to in Congress. Mr. Thos. White sat heavily on Mr. Charlton, as the following report of what was said evidences:

Mr. White (Cardwell) said, there was no analogy between the United States parliamentary system and ours. Across the border there was no Government responsible to the people as ours was for tariff changes. Any one man could propose tariff changes in Congress. Here it was different. We had responsible Ministers, and thank God for that.

Sir John Macdonald—Themember for North Norfolk does not think so. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. White,—No, he does not, and the fact that he prefers the American system shows after all how little capable he is of judging what the proper course under our system is. (Hear, hear.)

The Princess Louise.

HER ROYAL HIGHNESS'S LIFE IMPERILLED BY FIRE—A NARROW ESCAPE.

NEW YORK, April 12.—The Charleston (South Carolina) News publishes the following correspondence from Bermuda, dated the 28th March:

"It is not generally known here, that the Princess Louise's life was imperilled by fire on the night of the 26th inst. The Princess had retired as usual on Monday night, but was awakened about midnight by the presence of suffocating smoke. Once awakened she saw that her apartments were on fire. She aroused the household, and for a time intense excitement prevailed, the servants hurrying to and fro, carrying water to check the fire, and the ladies in waiting, fearing that the Princess had received some injury, added to the confusion by occasional hysterical screams. Once the fire was out, and all were satisfied that Her Royal Highness had not sustained the slightest injury save the severe shock occasioned by the discovery of the fire, the house resumed its usual quiet. It is not known how the fire originated, but as the day had been damp and chilly a fire had been kindled in the grate of the Princess's bed chamber, and it is believed that the fireplace was not secure, and in some mysterious way, the fire caught the joist supporting the chamber floor. Invitations for a large dinner party at Eaglewood on the day following the fire were cancelled, the workmen were called to repair the drawing room ceiling, which had fallen, and other damages, and remove, as far as possible, all traces of the fire."

Campbellford Correspondence.

CAMPBELLFORD, April 12, '83

A very fashionable wedding came off here to-day in the R. C. church, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. Father Casey. The bride was Miss M. T. Nealon, youngest daughter of W. Nealon, Esq., of this Township. She was elegantly attired in an ecru Nun's veiling train skirt, which was handsomely trimmed with rich lace. The basque was embossed satin. The fair bride was enveloped in a tulle veil which reached to the ground. Her wreath of flowers was very tastefully arranged, and she looked altogether very charming. The groom was Mr. Jno. Cleary, merchant of this village. Both being so highly respected, a great assemblage went to the church to congratulate them on the pleasing event. Many were the expressions of hope that the union would be a happy one. A sumptuous repast was provided at the bride's father's, where a number of friends spent a few hours together previous to the departure of the happy couple by the evening train for Ottawa and Montreal to spend their honey moon.

Mrs. C. Bonnycastle, who will go to Qu'Appelle in the course of two months, will be able to present her husband with one of the first "prairie chickens," which was found in their house on Friday morning last. It is one of the male kind, and a very fine specimen. Both mother and child are doing well.

Mr Bog, Manager of the Standard Bank here, returned with his charming wife from their wedding trip a few days since, and in the evening were serenaded by the band boys, who are always ready to welcome strangers with their sweet strains of music.

Mr. D. Waters, merchant, of this village, has had a great bereavement in his family in the loss of his only son, a fine little fellow about 3 months old. It was taken to Belleville for interment.

It is very gratifying to hear the farmers speaking so highly of the grand appearance of the grain, which they say never looked better in the locality.

Beware of Imitations

Since Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has become celebrated, a number of unprincipled persons have been endeavoring to palm off Electron and Electric Oil for the genuine DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. Beware of these similar named articles. If their originators had any faith in the healing properties of their own medicines they would, like honest men, give them name of their own, and not try to sell them the reputation of another; but as they know their preparations have no merit, they resort to the most unprincipled means of selling them by getting a name as near as possible to Eclectric. We therefore ask the public when purchasing to see that the name Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is on the front of the wrapper, and the signature of NORTHROP & LYMAN, the proprietors for Canada on the back.

To the Editor of the Intelligencer.

BELLEVILLE, 12 April, 1883.

SIR,—My attention has been called by John B. Patterson, of this city, to a report of the cross-examination of Jessie E. Ross, in the trial of the case of ROSS vs. COLEMAN, in which evidence it was stated by the plaintiff that the defendant said to her that Mr. Patterson was a "drunken, worthless fellow" and "that I would be glad to let her have the shop instead of him."

The INTELLIGENCER, in justice to Mr. Patterson, should have also published my evidence in denial of this statement, and I trust will without delay do so.

I remain,
Your ob't ser't,
C. L. COLEMAN.

[Mr. Coleman's evidence was duly published on the day on which his letter was written. The INTELLIGENCER does not need prompting in such matters.]

THE MURDER TRIALS.

Other Witnesses give Important Testimony.

The Prosecution Closed in Brady's Case.

ATTEMPTS AT AN ALIBI.

The Prisoner Convicted.

DUBLIN, April 12.—Joseph Smith, the prisoner who turned informer, repeated the story of his doings in the Phœnix Park, as related by Carey at the hearing. Smith said he was sworn in as an invincible, three weeks before the murders were committed. The invincibles' secret sign for recognizing each other was the holding of a knife in the palm of the hand. Daniel Curley introduced himself to the witness by this sign. Other witnesses were called by the prosecution, including Gold, the Phœnix park ranger, and a son of James Carey. The latter deposed concerning the search for the knives used by the murderers, which he said was reported to Brady. The physicians who examined the bodies of Lord Cavendish and Mr. Burke, testified to the relative nature of the wounds. The prosecution had rested, and the defence opened. The photographs recognized by Carey as "No. 1," were those of Tyner.

DUBLIN, April 13.—In the Brady trial a clerk named Kennedy, swore he spoke to Brady, who was accompanied by a girl, on Dominick Street between 5 and 7 o'clock on the evening of the Phœnix Park murders. He recognized as the girl Annie Meagher, who testified yesterday that she was with Brady that evening. Witness also met Brady on the following day. The latter declared that the murders would ruin the cause of Ireland. The defence announced that they would call no other witnesses, and the argument of counsel for the defence and the prosecution followed.

The Judge charged the Jury. The Jury retired, but soon returned, and announced that they had found Brady guilty of the murder of Cavendish and Burke. Brady was then sentenced to be hanged.

Dr. Webb moved for an arrest of judgment. He telegraphs that under the Crimes Act the Jury was not legally formed.

Honest and Liberal.

When the Hops in each bottle of Hop Bitters (at the present price, $1.25 per lb.) cost more than a bottle is sold for, besides the other costly medicines, and the quality and price are kept the same, we think it is honest and liberal in the proprietors, and no one should complain, or buy or use worthless stuff, or cheating bogus imitations because the price is less.

THE ice shove on Wednesday night broke the boom at Sutherland's mill in Canifton, from its fastenings and carried it down stream.

THE License Commissioners for the West Riding of Hastings will meet on Tuesday next to transact the preparatory work usual before the licenses are granted.

MR. HENRY COREY returned home this morning from a business trip through the Maritime Provinces. He reports a very active demand for his goods and large sales.

IT would be well if the police would prevent the cutting up of floats and other timber which is carried down by the stream, as this property, which is valuable, should not be appropriated by those who have no claim on it.

SOME jurymen are not overworked. This circumstance was made prominent to day when two of the jury panel, young city residents, were engaged in playing mumble the peg and exercising their muscle by throwing pebbles. And all this for $1.60 a day.

WHILE Fred Bleecker was driving over a small bridge in rear of Thompson's factory, above Lingham's Mill, last evening, his horses broke through. The bridge had to be cut away before the horses could be liberated and even then they had to be allowed to fall into the river in order to enable them to reach terra firma again.

THE Port Hope Times says:—"Ordination services at St. John's church, Sunday morning, were well attended. Mr. Sibbald, of Belleville, was admitted to Priest's orders, His Lordship, the Bishop of Toronto, conducting the ceremony, assisted by Dr. O'Meara. The Bishop preached a sermon suitable to the occasion. In the evening the newly ordained minister, Rev. Mr. Sibbald, delivered a vigorous discourse."

SEVERAL large pieces of timber and some lumber, which had probably formed part of a structure of some character, were carried down the river by the current, at noon today.

WEATHER PROBABILITIES—Toronto, April 13.—Lakes, fresh winds, followed by moderate from the eastward, fair to cloudy weather, stationary or higher temperature.

Along the Docks.

Captain James Mullins' privateer, the Turtle Dove, has been thoroughly overhauled and is nearly ready for business. She is painted white and her covering board is a light green, and altogether she looks quite neat. It is expected that the improvements made on her will have the effect of increasing her speed.

The new owners of the John Wesley arrived here yesterday and at once proceeded to bend the sails of their craft. She was the first vessel on which a fly was hoisted in the harbor this year.

The Mary Foster has been furnished with a new cabin.

Captain O'Brien will command the Olivia during the coming season.

The carpenter work on the interior of the Prince Edward was finished last evening and the painters now have full possession of the ship.

The repairs to the L. D. Bullock will not be completed before the middle of next week.

The southern portion of the G. J. R. dock is being raised to the same height as the other part, on which the rails have been relaid.

A large consignment of timber will be brought down by the G. J. R. next week and unloaded on the ice at the dock.

St. Charles' Carriage Works.

The output of any manufacturing establishment is an indication of the extent of its business, and when one has been enabled to inspect and size up that of Mr. James St. Charles, here, he cannot but come to the conclusion that trade, in his line, is exceedingly brisk.

In his show rooms all classes of vehicles are presented for the examination of intending purchasers and admirers of what is neat and nice in four-wheeled rigs. There are light open and top buggies, attractive phaetons, tasty democrats and family carriages. All were made at this establishment, and the material used in their construction is the best that can be procured, while the workmanship of the blacksmith, woodworker and painter cannot be excelled.

Among the noticeable features now receiving the finishing touches, are an omnibus for Cunningham Brothers, of Trenton, and a family carriage for Mr. Richard Campion, of Marmora. The bus is a very handsome exhibit of what can be done here and is a credit to the establishment. The painting was done by Mr. William Boselly and is as smooth as a mirror, while the ornamention was the work of Mr. Fred Richardson, whose ability and skill are widely known. The cushions and backs will be of red plush and the trimmings and finish will be in keeping with the other decorations of the vehicle. It will cost $800 and will be forwarded to its purchasers next week. Campion's carriage will be the equal of the finest yet produced in this city. The iron work on it is elaborate and reflects great credit on the workman. The vehicle, which will seat four, is provided with a leather top and the cushions and backs will also be of leather. This carriage cost $400. Two vehicles almost similar to this are receiving the attentions of the painters, and when completed will be owned by residents of this city. A handsome delivery waggon for Paterson's biscuit and cigar establishment has just been turned out here, and that there must be money in in that business is evidenced by the fact that a large delivery waggon for Wallace, is also being finished at this shop.

Mr. St. Charles is doing a very prosperous business and has enough orders now on hand to keep his large force of men employed until July.

HORRIBLE ACCIDENT.

A G. T. R. Brakeman the Victim.

Fatal Injuries Sustained.

Another of those horrible casualties that mark the era of railroads occurred this morning about a mile west of the G. T. R. station in this city, the victim being a young man named Henry Hicks, who was employed as a brakeman.

About 2.30 this morning, freight train No. 20, Conductor Robertson, left the depot here for Toronto, and Hicks was one of the brakemen. While the train was traversing the space between the two overhead bridges, Hicks, who was on top of the cars, in stepping from a refrigerator car to an ordinary freight car (which was considerably lower) slipped and fell to the track, and four cars and a van passed over him, cutting off his right hand and left foot, mangling the right leg, injuring his back, and severely bruising his head and face. The train had proceeded but a short distance beyond the scene of the accident when the unfortunate brakeman was missed and it was then backed up. His fellow employees carried him back to the van, and the train ran back to the depot, when Hicks was taken into the station and Dr. Wilson summoned. The doctor, on seeing him, pronounced the case hopeless. Rev. Mr. Burns was also sent for and attended to the spiritual wants of the injured man. Hicks fully realized that his injuries were fatal, and courted the advent of death by so expressing himself and refusing to take stimulants. When asked if he had any message to leave, he replied: "Tell my mother to meet me in Heaven." His mother was telegraphed for, and when Hicks was informed of this fact he expressed the hope that he would live to see her, and was then induced to take stimulants, which temporarily invigorated him. At ten o'clock he was alive, but his breathing was heavy and the finger of death had then made its impress on his face. Hicks is in his twentieth year and was only about a week in the service of the company; in fact this was the fifth trip to Toronto, where he ran out from. He was a resident of Colborne, where his father keeps the Globe House. Hicks is spoken of as a splendid young fellow, quiet, gentlemanly and good natured, and he was therefore well liked.

Hicks' father arrived at 10:30, and bestowed what attentions he could on his unfortunate boy.

At 12:15 this afternoon, a telephone message stated that Hicks was still alive, but was sinking rapidly.

Dominion Parliament.

FIFTH PARLIAMENT—FIRST SESSION.

OTTAWA, April 12.—After routine, Mr. Dalton McCarthy introduced a bill to facilitate the transfer of land in the North-West. He explained that the measure introduced into Canada was the Torrens system, which obtains in the Australian colonies, the principal provision being that the owners of the land will hold the Government certificates of their ownership, and when they sell their land these certificates will be removed by the Government in the name of the purchasers without the trouble and cost involved in searching titles, conveyancing, etc. It is proposed to establish the head office at Regina, the chief officer to be known as Registrar-General.

Mr. Blake approved of the bill, which he said was similar to the one submitted by Hon. Mr. Mills in the last Parliament. The measure will greatly reduce the legal expense of transfers.

Mr. Small introduced a bill to increase the harbor accommodation of Toronto, extend the esplanade, and control the use and management thereof. It has not yet been decided whether the measure will be treated as a public or private one.

Mr. Costigan moved the House into Committee, to consider a resolution to consolidate and amend the Acts respecting the Inland Revenue.

This matter brought a number of French members to their feet. They occupied the time up to recess in discussing the excise duty of two cents per pound on tobacco manufactured from Canadian leaf. The general sentiment was in favor of the removal of this tax, so as to encourage the growth of the weed in Quebec, the habitants having a particular liking for the native product.

The motion passed and stands for further action.

After recess the House went into Committee on the Militia Consolidation bill, advanced it considerably, and reported. The only noteworthy feature of the debate was a request by Mr. Landerkin that seven men of the Durham Company, 35th battalion, who contracted typhoid fever in camp, should be recompensed.

The Customs Consolidation bill was then taken up, seventy-two clauses being passed.

Mr. Peter Mitchell was again in a combative mood, and bothered Mr. Bowell whenever he had an opportunity.

The House adjourned at 11.45.

O. Bortle, of Manchester, Ontario Co., N.Y., writes:—"I obtained immediate relief from the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. I have had Asthma for eleven years. Have been obliged to sit up all night for ten or twelve nights in succession. I can now sleep soundly all night on a feather bed, which I had not been able to do previous to using the Oil."

TROUBLE WITH STRIKERS—MEN MURDERED.

SPRINGFIELD, Ills., April 13.—There have been daily assaults on the men who have taken the places of the strikers at the rolling mills here. Yesterday several men from the mill walked two miles into the country. A gang of strikers followed them and beat them and threw them off the bridge. Two of the victims who have not returned, are said to be very seriously injured. Physicians left here to attend them, but became alarmed and returned last night. As the party were leaving the mill the strikers fired on them with rifles shot guns and pistols. It is said that fifty shots were fired. John Waldron was killed. Thirty-four buckshot entered his side, breast, throat and face. Brainard Mulkurn was shot in the chest and arm. It is thought he will survive. Sam Britten was slightly wounded. There is great excitement. There have been no arrests. The murderers are unknown, as they fired from ambush. The workers express their determination to continue to run the mills.

TERRIBLE FIGHT WITH A DESPERADO.

Riches in Hop Farming.

At the present prices, ten acres in Hops will bring more money than the one hundred acres in any other farming; and, if there is a consumer or dealer who thinks the price of Hop Bitters high, remember Hops are $1.25 per lb., and the quantity and quality of Hops in Hop Bitters and the price remains the same as formerly. Don't buy or use worthless stuff or imitations because the price is less.

St. THOMAS, Ont., Jan. 3, 1882.

M. HILTON WILLIAMS, M. D.:—

MY DEAR SIR,—In September last I contracted a severe cold, which settled on my lungs, quite seriously affecting the left one. I had a very bad cough, accompanied by expectoration, indicative of Pulmonary Phthisis. My strength decreased and spirits sank very low, and when I called upon you, I was in doubt whether any medical treatment would avail in my case. Under your treatment I have already recovered my wonted strength and health. My strength has increased, my cough has ceased, and in every way I feel much benefitted by your treatment.

You are at perfect liberty to use these statements as you please. Very sincerely yours,

B. F. AUSTIN,
Principal Alma Ladies' College, St. Thomas, Ont.

Rev. W. H. Poole, D. D., at present of Detroit, Mich., but formerly of Toronto, and well known in the Canada Methodist Church throughout Ontario, says:

DR. WILLIAMS, DEAR SIR,—During the past few years, I have had many opportunities of hearing of the effects of your system of inhalation upon persons afflicted with throat and lung trouble. A large number of persons of my acquaintance are strong in their recommendation of the system. Having myself been thus help when from the use of other systems there seemed to be no help for them. If this will meet the eye of any such friend in Canada, who may be benefitted, it will be to me a source of pleasure. Yours, very truly,

W. H. POOLE,
427 Fourth Avenue, Detroit, Mich.

We would advise all those who are afflicted and having failed in obtaining any permanent relief from other systems to try this, the only rational system, and the only means by which permanent cures may be effected.

Over 40,000 cases treated during the past eighteen years for some form of head, throat, or lung trouble from nearly every part of the civilized world.

CONSULTATION FREE, and prices within the reach of all.

Those who desire to investigate for themselves had better call personally at the office, but if impossible to do so may write for "List of Questions" and "Medical Treatise," both of which will be sent free of charge. Address:

The Bad and Worthless

are never imitated or counterfeited. This is especially true of a family medicine, and it is positive proof that the remedy imitated is of the highest value. As soon as it had been tested and proved by the whole world that Hop Bitters was the purest, best and most valuable family medicine on earth, many imitations sprung up and began to steal the notices in which the press and people of the country had expressed the merits of H. B., and in every way trying to induce suffering invalids to use their stuff instead, expecting to make money on the credit and good name of H. B. Many others started nostrums put up in similar style to H. B., with variously devised names in which the word "Hop" or "Hops" were used in a way to induce people to believe they were the same as Hop Bitters. All such pretended remedies or cures, no matter what their style or name is, and especially those with the word "Hop" or "Hops" in their name or in any way connected with them or their name, are imitations or counterfeits. Beware of them. Touch none of them. Use nothing but genuine Hop Bitters, with a bunch or cluster of green Hops on the white label. Trust nothing else. Druggists and dealers are warned against dealing in imitations or counterfeits.

Daily Intelligencer.

One of Earth's Angels.

'Yes, Miss Danton; the night you were all away at the party, you remember, I saw him on the stairs, returning to his room. I thought then it was a spirit, and I fainted, as you know, and Doctor Danton was sent for, and told me it was no spirit, but Harry himself.'

'Doctor Danton!' exclaimed Kate, in unbounded astonishment. 'How did Doctor Danton come to know anything about it?'

'Why it was he—oh, I haven't told you. I must go back to that dreadful night when my cousin was shot. As I told you, the room was filled with people, and among them there was a young man—a Doctor, he told us—who made them lift poor Will on the bed, and proceeded to examine his wound. It was not fatal.'

She stopped, for Kate had uttered a cry and grasped her arm.

'Not fatal!' she gasped. 'Oh, Agnes! Agnes! Tell me he did not die!'

'He did not, thank Heaven. He lived, and lives still—thanks to the skill and care of Doctor Danton.'

Kate clasped her hands with a fervent prayer of thanksgiving.

'Oh, my poor Harry!' she said, 'immured so long in those dismal rooms, when you were free to walk the world. But perhaps the punishment was merited. Go on, Agnes; tell me all.'

'The wound was not fatal, but his state was very critical. Doctor Danton extracted the bullet, and remained with him all night. I was totally helpless. I don't remember anything about it, or anything that occurred for nearly a fortnight. Then I was in a neighbor's room; and she told me I had been very ill, and, but for the kindness and care of the young Doctor, must have died. She told me William lived, and was slowly getting better; but the good Doctor had hired a nurse to attend him, and came to the house every day. I saw him that very afternoon, and had a long talk with him. He told me his name was Doctor Danton, that he had come from Germany on business, and must return in a very few days now. He said he had friends in Canada, whom he had intended to visit, but this unfortunate affair had prevented him. He had not the heart to leave us in our forlorn and dangerous state. He would not tell his friends of his visit to America at all, so they would have no chance to feel offended. Oh, Miss Danton, I cannot tell you how good, how noble, how generous he was. He left New York the following week; but before he went he forced me to take money enough to keep me six months. I never felt wholly desolate until I saw him go, and then I thought my heart would break. Heaven bless him! He is the noblest man I ever knew.'

Kate's heart thrilled with a sudden response. And this was the man she had slighted, and perhaps despised—this hero, this great, generous, good man!

'You are right,' she said; 'he is noble. And after that, Agnes, what did you do?'

'I dismissed the hired nurse, and took care of poor Will until he fully recovered. Then he resumed his business; and I went back, sick and sorrowful, to my old life. I can never tell you how miserable I was. The husband I loved was lost to me forever. He was gone, believing me guilty of the worst of crimes, and I should never see him again to tell him I was innocent. The thought nearly broke my heart; but I lived and lived, when, I only prayed, wickedly, I know, to die. I came to Canada—I came here; and here I met my best friend once more. I saw Harry, or an apparition, as I took it to be, until Doctor Danton assured me to the contrary. He did not know, but he suspected the truth—he is so clever; and now that he has seen him, and knows for certain, he told me to tell you who I was. Miss Danton, I have told you the simple truth, as Heaven hears me. I have been true and faithful in thought and word to the husband I loved. Don't send me away; don't disbelieve and despise me.'

She lifted her streaming eyes and clasped hands in piteous supplication. There were tears, too, in the blue eyes of Kate as she took the little supplicant in her arms.

'Despise you, my poor Agnes! What a wretch you must take me to be! No, I believe you, I love you, you poor little broken down child. I shall not send you away. I know Harry loves you yet; he calls for you continually in his delirium. I shall speak to papa; you shall see him to-night. Oh! to think how much unnecessary misery there is in the world.'

She put her arm round her slender waist, and was drawing her towards the house. Before they reached it, a big dog came bounding and barking up the avenue and overtook them.

'Be quiet, Tiger,' said Kate halting. 'Let us wait for Tiger's master, Agnes.'

Tiger's master appeared a moment later. One glance sufficed to show him how matters stood.

He lifted his hat with a quiet smile.

'Good evening, Miss Danton: good evening Mrs. Danton. I see you have come to an understanding at last.'

'My brother—we all owe you a debt we can never repay,' Kate said gravely; 'and Agnes here pronounces you an uncanonized saint.'

'So I am. The world will do justice to my merits by-and-by. You have been very much surprised by Agnes' story, Miss Danton?'

'Very much. We are going in to tell papa. You will come with us, Doctor?'

'If Mrs. Agnes does not make me blush by her laudations. Draw it mild, Agnes, won't you. You have no idea how modest I am.'

He opened the front door and entered the hall as he spoke, followed by the two girls. The drawing-room door was ajar, but Eeny and her teacher were the only occupants of that palatial chamber.

'Try the dining room,' suggested Kate: 'it is near dinner hour; we will find some one there.'

Doctor Frank ran down stairs, three steps at a time, followed more decorously by his companions. Grace seated near the table, reading by the light of a tall lamp, was the only occupant. She lifted her eyes in astonishment at her brother's boisterous entrance.

'Where is papa?' Kate asked.

'Upstairs in the sick room.'

'Then wait here, Doctor; wait here, Agnes! I will go for him.'

She ran lightly upstairs, and entered the sick man's bed room. The shaded lamp lit it dimly, and showed her her father sitting by the bedside talking to his son. The invalid was better this evening—very, very weak, but no longer delirious.

'You are better, Harry dear, are you not?' his sister asked, stooping to kiss him; 'and you can spare papa for half an hour? Can't you, Harry?'

A faint smile was his answer. He was too feeble to speak. Miss Danton summoned Ogden from one of the outer rooms, left him in charge, and bore her father off.

'What has happened, my dear?' the Captain asked, 'There is a whole volume of news in your face.'

Kate clasped her hands around his arm, and looked up in his face with great earnest eyes.

'The most wonderful thing, papa! Just like a play or a novel! Who do you think is here?'

'Who? Not Rose come back, surely?'

'Rose? Oh, no!' Kate answered, with wonderful quietness. 'You never could guess. Harry's wife!'

'What!'

'Papa! Poor Harry was dreadfully mistaken. She was innocent all the time. Doctor Frank knows all about it, and saved the life of the man Harry shot. It is Agnes Darling, papa. Isn't it the strangest thing you ever heard of?'

They were at the dining room door by this time—Captain Danton in a state of the densest bewilderment, looking alternately at one and another of the group before him.

'What in the name of all that's incomprehensible, does this mean? Kate, in Heaven's name, what have you been talking about?'

Miss Danton actually laughed at her father's mystified face.

'Sit down, papa, and I'll tell you all about it. Here!'

She wheeled up his chair and made him be seated, then leaning over the back, in her clear, sweet voice, she lucidly repeated the tale Agnes Darling had told her. The Captain and his wife sat utterly astounded; and Agnes, with her face hidden, was sobbing in her chair.

'Heaven bless me!' ejaculated the astonished master of Danton Hall. 'Can I believe my ears? Agnes Darling, Harry's wife!'

RACKED BY INNUMERABLE PANGS, restless by day, sleepless at night, rising unrefreshed in the morning, without appetite and pestered by varying and perplexing symptoms, the dyspeptic takes indeed a gloomy view of human existence. For him the zest of life seems gone. Heartburn, oppression at the pit of the stomach, and the attendant annoyances of of constipation and biliousness, combine to render him utterly wretched. But there is, if he will but take advantage of it, a reliable source of reliable relief from all misery. NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY and DYSPEPTIC CURE is, as its name imports, a botanic preparation, free from mineral poison, and an all-sufficient remedy for indigestion in its most obstinate form. It not only enriches the blood by enabling the digestive organs to convert the food received into nutriment, but depurates it by increasing the action of the bowels and kidneys, the natural outlets for its impurities. But while it relaxes the bowels, it never does so violently and with pain, like a drastic cathartic. It aids, but never forces, Nature, invigorating as well as purifying and regulating the system. It thoroughly removes those diseased humors which tend to vitiate the blood, purifies the urinary secretion, and promotes a flow of healthy bile into the natural channel, besides expelling it from the circulation. Experience has proved that this standard medicine is a thorough remedy for dyspepsia, biliousness, costiveness, kidney complaints, scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, lumbago and all impurities of the blood. Price $1.00. Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac-simile of their signature. Sold by all medicine dealers

FOR THE

KIDNEYS, LIVER AND URINARY ORGANS.

THE BEST BLOOD PURIFIER.

There is only one way by which any disease can be cured, and that is by removing the cause—whatever it may be. The great medical authorities of the day declare that nearly every disease is caused by deranged kidneys or liver. To restore these, therefore, is the only way by which health can be secured. Here is where WARNER'S SAFE CURE has achieved its great reputation. It acts directly upon the kidneys and liver and by placing them in a healthy condition drives disease and pain from the system. For all Kidney, Liver and Urinary troubles; for the distressing disorders of women; for Malaria, and physical troubles generally, this great remedy has no equal. Beware of impostors, imitations and concoctions said to be just as good.

Plain Truths!

The blood is the foundation of life, it circulates through every part of the body and unless it is pure and rich, good health is impossible, if disease has entered the system the only sure and quick way to drive it out is to purify and enrich the blood.

These simple facts are well known and the highest medical authorities agree that nothing but iron will restore the blood to its natural condition; and also that all the Iron preparations hitherto made blacken the teeth, cause headache, and are otherwise injurious.

SULPHUR AND IRON BITTERS will thoroughly and quickly assimulate with the blood, purifying and strengthening it and thus drive disease from any part of the system, and it will not blacken the teeth, cause headache or constipation and is positively not injurious.

St. Johnsbury, Vermont Oct. 21st 1882.

For six years I have been a great sufferer from blood disease, dyspepsia and constipation, and became so debilitated that I could not retain anything on my stomach, in fact life had almost become a burden, and when hope had almost left me, I was induced to give SULPHUR AND IRON BITTERS a trial. I am now taking the third bottle and have not felt so well in six years as I do at present.

MRS. S. L. MOORE.

SULPHUR AND IRON BITTERS effectually cures dyspepsia, indigestion and weakness, and renders the greatest relief and benefit to persons suffering from such diseases as kidney and liver complaints, dyspepsia, indigestion, etc.

Cathartic Pills

Combine the choicest cathartic principles in medicine, in proportions accurately adjusted to secure activity, certainty, and uniformity of effect. They are the result of years of careful study and practical experiment, and are the most effectual remedy yet discovered for diseases caused by derangement of the stomach, liver, and bowels, which require prompt and effectual treatment. AYER'S PILLS are specially applicable to this class of diseases. They act directly on the digestive and assimilative processes, and restore regular healthy action. Their extensive use by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, is one of the many proofs of their value as a safe, sure, and perfectly reliable purgative medicine. Being compounded of the concentrated virtues of purely vegetable substances, they are positively free from calomel or any injurious properties, and can be administered to children with perfect safety.

AYER'S PILLS are an effectual cure for Constipation or Costiveness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Foul Stomach and Breath, Dizziness, Headache, Loss of Memory, Numbness, Biliousness, Jaundice, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Dropsy, Tumors, Worms, Neuralgia, Colic, Gripes, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Gout, Piles, Disorders of the Liver, and all other diseases resulting from a disordered state of the digestive apparatus.

As a Dinner Pill they have no equal.

While gentle in their action, these PILLS are the most thorough and searching cathartic that can be employed, and never give pain unless the bowels are inflamed, and then their influence is healing. They stimulate the appetite and digestive organs; they operate to purify and enrich the blood, and impart renewed health and vigor to the whole system.

SONGS IN THE NIGHT.

The singers of God are many,
And glad are the songs they raise;
And the world is full of music,
Of sweet and passionate praise.
It is borne on the winds of Winter,
It rises with scent of flowers;
It never is wholly silent
In brightest or darkest hours.

But songs that are full of feeling
Not always are gay or glad;
The voices falter a little
When the hearts of the singers are sad.
And yet there are tender solos,
That rise when there is no light;
And the sweetest songs of some singers
Are those which are sung at night.

The listeners hear but the sobbings
Of those who are full of pain;
Perhaps God, hearing the under-tones
Of a trustful and loving strain,
Speaks back to the souls of these singers
What others may never hear;
And the songs may sound better in heaven,
That seem full of discords here.

Oh! the songs in the night have meanings
No stranger can comprehend;
There is hid in the words a message
Such as friend may send to friend,
And the panting breath of the singer
And the anguished, throbbing heart,
In the universal chorus
May be taking the grandest part.

"Hope thou in God forever,
And I? I shall yet praise him,"
Strong and brave is that singer,
Though his eyes with tears be dim.
"Though he slay me, yet will I trust him,"
"I walk and there is no light,"
"God is our strength and refuge,"
Such are the songs of night.

O singers of God, sing ever!
And the silent, fearful throng,
Catching the words of courage,
May join sometimes in the song,
Sing on, there are strains of sweetness,
In the saddest songs you raise,
And the gracious Listener, hearing,
Shall be pleased with your loyal praise.

TABERNACLE SERMONS.

Discourse by Rev. T. De Witt Talmage.

LIVE CHURCHES.

"And unto the angel of the church in Smyrna, write these things."—Revelation ii., 8.

Smyrna was a great ancient city. It was bounded on three sides by mountains. It was the great centre of the Levantine trade. In that brilliant and prosperous city, a Christian church was established. After a while it was rocked down by an earthquake. Then it was rebuilt. Then it was destroyed by a conflagration which swept down the entire city. Church again rebuilt. The fact was that church had in it a living, active, Christian people. Without that, all the splendor of architecture and all the beauty of surrounding would have been only the ornaments of death, the garlands on a coffin and the plumes of a hearse.

On this, the fourteenth anniversary of my pastorage in this place, and looking into the friendly faces of this great audience, I propose to set forth what I consider to be the characteristics of a live church. And in the first place, I remark that a live church is prompt in all its financial engagements. Every religious institution has monetary relations. The Bank of England ought to be no more faithful in the discharge of its obligations than ought the church of Jesus Christ. If a church standing in any community fails to pay its debts, it becomes an injury to the place where it stands instead of a blessing. All religious institutions ought to be an example to the world for faithfulness in the discharge of monetary obligations. There are a thousand things that prayer will not do. Prayer will not paint a church, prayer will not purchase a winter's coal, prayer will not pay an insurance, prayer will not support the institutions of religion. A prayer never goes heaven high unless it goes pocket deep. All our supplication in behalf of religious institutions amounts to nothing unless we are willing, so far as God has prospered us, to contribute for their support. I had in my Western church a man in favorable worldly circumstances who used in prolonged prayer to pray for his pastor until the prolonged prayer almost became a nuisance to the prayer meeting; for it was a prayer without ceasing and a prayer in which he asked that the pastor might be blessed in his basket and in his store, while he, the petitioner, never gave a cent of salary. All such supplication as that amounts to nothing. Members of a congregation meeting their obligations inside, then the church of Christ is able to meet its obligations outside. I speak with no embarrassment this morning, because this church of God, although it has come, in other years, through darkness and storm, is standing to-day in a large place and our temporal prosperities go right beside our spiritual prosperities. Thanks first to God, and second to the generosity and promptness of the people. I might at this point say that there are many churches of Jesus Christ in our land that are utterly failing in this direction. There are a great many of the ministers of religion half starved to death. "Thank you," said a minister from the far West when some friends from the East sent him a few extra dollars; "thank you, sir. Until that money came we had no meat in our house for three months, and our children this winter have worn their summer clothes." There is no more ghastly suffering in the United States to-day than is to be found in some of the parsonages of this country. You have with great munificence provided for all my wants, and so I can speak without any embarrassment on the subject while I denounce the niggardliness of many of the churches of Jesus Christ, keeping some men who are very apostles for piety and consecration in circumstances where they are always apologetic and have not that courage which they would have, could they stand in the presence of people whom they knew were faithful in the discharge of their financial duties to the Christian Church. Alas! for those men of whom the world is not worthy. Do you know the simple fact that in the United States to-day the salary of ministers averages less than $600, and when you consider that some of the salaries are very large, you, as business men, will immediately see to what great straits many of God's noblest servants are this day reduced. A live church will look after all its financial interests and be as prompt in the meeting of those obligations as any bank in all the cities.

A live church will also be punctual in its attendance. If in such a church the services begin at half past ten o'clock in the morning, the people will not come at a quarter of eleven. If in such a church the services begin at half-past seven in the evening, the people will not come at a quarter of eight. In many churches there is great tardiness. The fact is, some people are always late. They were born too late, and I suppose they will die too late. It is poor inspiration to a Christian minister when in preliminary exercises half the people seated in their pews are looking around to see the other half come in. It is very confusing to a minister of religion when during the opening exercises there is the rustling of dresses through the aisles and the slamming of doors at the entrance. I am glad to say that this congregation are punctual and prompt in their attendance. There ought to be no opening, preliminary exercises. There is a grand delusion in the churches of Jesus Christ on this subject. There must be no preliminary exercises. The very first word of the invocation is as important as anything that may come after. Scripture lesson is the voice of God to man, while a sermon may be only the voice of man to man, and happy is that church where all the worshippers are present at the beginning of the services. I know there is a difference in time-pieces, but a live church goes by railroad time, and everybody in every community knows what that is. No man goes to take the limited express train to Washington at five minutes past ten o'clock if the train started at ten. In many of the households of Christendom every Sabbath morning the family might well sing that old hymn—

Early, my God, without delay,
I haste to seek Thy face.

I go further, and tell you that in every live church all the people take part in the exercises. A stranger can tell by the way the first hymn starts whether it is a live church. It is a sad thing when the music comes down in a cold drizzle from the organ loft and freezes on the heads of the silent people beneath. It is an awful thing for a hymn to start and then find itself lonely and unbefriended, wandering around about, after a while lost amid the arches. That is not melody to the Lord. In heaven they all sing, although some sing not half as well as others. The Methodist Church has sung its way around the earth. A man on fire with the gospel as John Wesley preached It has taken his place in the far west, and on Sabbath morning has come out in front of his log cabin and sung,

A charge to keep I have,
A God to glorify.

And they heard it on the other side the forest and they gathered around the doorstep and after a while a church grew up and they had a great revival, and all the wilderness heard the voice of God. A church that can sing can do anything that ought to be done. In this great battle for God let us take the Bible in one hand and the hymn book in the other. I am glad that this church has made mighty advancement in that direction, a prominent minister of religion writing me yesterday, saying, "I would walk five miles to hear your congregation sing

Jesus, lover of my soul,

as I heard them sing it the other Sunday." While we have four voices to chant the especial music, when the regular hymn is given out there are five thousand people who feel they belong to the choir and whose voices are like "the voice of many waters and the voice of mighty thunderings."

Let those refuse to sing
Who never knew our God;
But children of the Heavenly King
Should speak their joys abroad.

On the way to triumphs without end and to pleasures that never die. Sing!

I remark again, that a live church will have a flourishing Sabbath school. It is too late in the history of the church to argue the benefit of Sabbath schools. A Sabbath school is not a supplement to the church; it is its right arm. "O!" you say, there are stupid churches that have Sabbath schools." Yes, and the Sabbath Schools are stupid too. It is a dead mother holding a dead child. But where, Sabbath and Sabbath, superintendent and teachers and children come, their faces aglow with enthusiasm, entering with great heart into the services, and then retiring as home feeling that they have been on a mount of transfiguration—that church will be a live church. But while we have the children of the refined and the educated and the churches, I deplore the fact that there are such vast multitudes who get none of the benediction. What will become of the 70,000 destitute children in New York? It is a tremendous question. What will become of the thousands of destitute children in Brooklyn? If we do not act upon them they will act upon us. If we do not Christianize them they will heathenize. It is a question not more for every Christian than for every patriot and every philanthropist and every statesman. O! if we could gather them all together, what a scene of hunger and wretchedness and despair and death. If you could see those little feet on the broad road to death, which through Christian charity ought to be pressing the narrow path of life; if you could hear those voices in blasphemy, which ought to be singing the praises of God; if you could see those hearts, which at that age ought not to be soiled with one impure thought, already become the sowers of iniquity; if you could see those little ones sacrificed on the altar of every iniquitous passion and baptized with fire from the lava of the pit, your soul would recoil, crying, "Avaunt, thou dream of hell!" They are coming up. They will not always be boys and girls. They are coming up to be the men and women of this country. That spark of iniquity that might be put out now with one drop of the water of life will become a conflagration destroying every green thing that God ever planted in the soul. That which ought to be the temple of the Holy Ghost will become a scarred and blasted ruin, every light quenched and every altar in the dust. That petty thief who yesterday slipped into your store and took a piece of cloth from the counter will become the highwayman of the forest, or the burglar at midnight picking the lock of your money safe and blowing up your store to hide the villainy. A great army, they come on with staggering step and blood-shot eye and drunken hoot to take the ballot-box and hurrah at the elections. The rough handed ruffianism of the country, if we do not look out, will, after a while, have more power than the tender hand of sobriety. Men bloated and with the signature of sin burned in from the top of their foreheads to the bottom of their chins, will look honest men out of countenance. Moral corpses that ought to be buried a hundred feet deep to keep them from poisoning the air, will rot in the face of the sun at noonday. Industry in her plain frock will be despised and thousands of men unwilling to work will wander about with their hands on their hips, saying, "The world owes me a living," when it owes them the penitentiary. O! what a power there is in iniquity when unrestrained and unblanched, it goes on concerting and deepening and widening, rolling ahead with a very triumph of desolation, drowning like surges, scorching like flames, crushing like rocks. What are you going to do with this vast multitude of children marching up to take possession of this land? "O!" you say, it's only a child, it's only a child." Ah that child has covered up in the sheaf of its body a spark of immortality which will blaze on with untold splendor long after yonder sun has died of old age, and all the countless worlds that glitter at night shall have been swept off by the Almighty's breath as the small dust of a threshing floor. Yet you say it is only a child. O! that God would come down upon the Sabbath School of this church, and upon all the friends of children, and that instead of having 1,800 in the Sabbath school, we should have three thousand, four thousand, five thousand, six thousand every Sabbath afternoon shouting hosanna in the temple.

I remark again, that a live church will have commodious and appropriate architecture. A log church may do in a place where people live in log cabins, but in cities where people have commodious and beautiful apartments, a church that is not commodious and is not beautiful is a moral nuisance; it is an insult to God and an insult to man. So we said years ago, "We shall have a large church and have it amphitheatrical in shape; the seats shall rise above each other, and when the minister of the gospel stands up to preach the truth he will be able to look every man full in the face; and the acoustics shall be perfect." God granted our prayer. The first tabernacle was built, and the Holy Ghost came down with great power, and the place became the gate of heaven to a multitude. Then this building was erected and God came here and blessed us. But when we persisted in this style of architecture, O! the scorn and the caricature. Some of you remember it. They said it would be a "hippodrome." They said it would be a "holy circus." They called it "Talmage's theatre." But the building once completed, I never saw a man that did not like it. Perfect in acoustics, perfect in all its arrangements; a great family circle, as every church ought to be—the pulpit only the fire place, all the family gathered around the fire place. An angular church makes an angular theology. The most uninteresting part of a man is the back of his head. Arranged in an audience like this, you either see the full face or you see the side face, and hence the great circle of sympathy. Sympathy in the song, sympathy in the salutation, sympathy in all the service. "How amiable are thy tabernacles, O Lord of Hosts!" a live church must have commodious and appropriate architecture.

I remark again that a live church must be a soul saving church. The Gospel of Jesus Christ must be preached in it. A church may be built around one man who shall read an essay, the church may be built around one man who shall preach something else than the Gospel, and there may be a large congregation, but after a while the man dies and the church dies. That church has a very poor foundation that is built on two human shoulders. I can tell you of a church in the city of Boston that was more largely attended some thirty years ago than any other church in that city. Where is it to-day? Utterly gone out of existence. A man stood there who preached everything but the Gospel of Jesus Christ. He died and the church died. We want a church built on the Rock of Ages, Jesus Christ, the Lord. That is the church that will go on decade after decade, century after century—a church standing like Rowland Hill's old church, meaning the Gospel all the way through. I was at the celebration of, I think, the ninetieth year of that church. The man who founded it had long ago gone into the skies. "O!" say some, "the Gospel of Jesus Christ allows such small opportunity for man's intellect," Does it? A man of that kind came to Rowland Hill, of whom I have just spoken, and said: "Mr. Hill, I am not willing to quit the ministry, because I am not willing to hide my talents." Mr. Hill said: "I have known you a long while, my friend, and I think the sooner you hide your talents the better." O! there is no such field for a man's intellect and a man's heart as the Gospel ministry. Have you powers of analysis? Exhaust them here. Have you irresistible logic? Grapple with St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans. Have you powers of pathos? Exhibit the love of Jesus Christ. Have you great imagination? Dwell upon the Psalms of David, or John's apocalyptic vision. Are you disposed to bold thinking? Follow Ezekiel's wheel full of eyes, and hear through his chapters the rush of the wings of the seraphim. O! come and preach this Gospel; if not in pulpits, in the store, in the factory, in the shop, in the street, in the banking house—everywhere. Each of you called to preach this Gospel somewhere, a voice from the throne saying this day: "Woe unto you if you preach not this Gospel." I am glad to know it has been the ambition of this church, so far as I can understand it, that this shall be a soul-saving church. Pardon for all sin. Comfort for all trouble. Eternal life for all the dead. And we have never thrown out the net and brought it back empty—at one communion season gathering in a hundred, at another gathering in a hundred and eighty, at another gathering in three hundred, at another gathering in four hundred, at other seasons gathering in five or six hundred, and the work only just begun; for some day, perhaps after my lips are closed in death—but I hope it is not to be postponed until after that—some day some man will stand here and preach this glorious Gospel and 3,000 souls will press into the kingdom. I could tell you how God has made this a soul-saving church; how at the foot of the pulpit one Sabbath night a gentleman passed on, his face bronzed with the sea. I saw he was just from shipboard. He said, "I am an Englishman." He passed into the inquiry room. The Holy Ghost wrought upon him mightily and brought him out into the light of the Gospel, and he addressed those who stood around him and told how he had found the Lord. Then I said, "When did you arrive?" He replied, "At 11 o'clock this morning the steamer got in." I asked: "How long are you going to remain in the city and in the country?" "Tomorrow morning," he said, "I go to Toronto and so on to Halifax, where I have business, and then will go back home to England." I said: "I guess you came in here to have your soul saved." He said: "I really believe that is the reason I came." So one Sabbath night there were three persons who looked so glad, so happy, I accosted them. I said to the gentleman: "Are you a Christian?" He said, "Yes." I said, "When did you become a Christian?" He said, "To-night." I said, "Is this your wife?" "Yes." "When did you become a Christian?" I asked her. She said, "To-night." I said, "Is this your daughter, "Are you a Christian?" "Yes." I said, "When did you become a Christian?" She said, "To-night." I said, "How long will you tarry in the city?" The gentleman said, "We go to-morrow; we came yesterday; we live in Charleston, South Carolina." I have since heard of him as useful in the church of Jesus Christ where he lives. O! how many have been brought to Christ. It is my ambition to-day, as I close one chapter of my pastorate and open another—it is my ambition that this be a soul-saving church.

There is a sadness that comes over me this morning, as I remember that fourteen years of my pastorate have gone by, and so many opportunities when I might have struck a stouter blow for Christ have gone by. I do not suppose there are a dozen persons hearing this fourteenth anniversary sermon who heard my opening sermon. Some of them have entered upon the saints' Everlasting rest. I stood by their deathbeds and got the testimony as to what God does for a dying Christian. Your fathers, your mothers, your companions, your sons, your daughters, where are they?

Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep,

Of the nineteen persons who gathered together—it was all that could be mustered at that time—of the nineteen persons who were gathered together to give me a unanimous call, nearly all are gone. Some in other fields are serving Christ; in other cities, in other lands, are lifting up the standard, and I hope to meet them in that day when we shall celebrate the great harvest home. I thank God that I ever came to Brooklyn. I thank God that I ever knew you. I declare to you this morning, in looking over the fourteen years of my ministry in this place, I cannot think of one complaint to make. I have had all too easy. There is no one, as other ministers, been visited by committees asking me to do this differently and do that differently. I have never had any thorn in my side, but the heartiest co-operation all the way through. When sickness came to my house there has been no lack of watchers, and when death came I remember how tenderly you lifted the silent form and carried it out to slumber in God's acre. I thank your for all you kindness during these fourteen years, for the way in which you have borne with all my infirmities, for the manner in which you have upheld me with your prayers. Now we close the chapter and open another. I wish that this anniversary day might be celebrated by the coming of a great multitude to God. I this morning asked the clerk of the session to give me the additions to the church during my pastorage of fourteen years, and he says that 3,303 persons have connected themselves with the church, 2,617 on profession of faith. We thank God for the sheaves that have been gathered. But it is only an intimation, I believe, of what God is going to do for us as a church. O! step into the kingdom of Christ to-day. The years speed on. Fourteen years! How short a time, and yet the audience entirely changed. The conductor of a rail train was telling me how he stood on the side of the track by his crowded train; the train had been switched off on a side track to let the express go by unhindered. He said as he stood there in the night by his crowded train on the side track, he heard the express train thundering on in the distance. In a few moments he saw the flash of the headlight of the locomotive, and as the train came near by he saw that the switch had not been attended to. The switchman, either through intoxication or indifference, had failed in his duty, and that train in a minute more would rush on the side track and crash his train and massacre the passengers, if something were not instantly done. He shouted, "Set up that switch!" and instantly the switch went to its place and the train thundered on. The conductor told me that the excitement of the moment was so great, the nervous strain so great as the train went by, he was too weak to put his foot upon the step of his car. Such an awful escape! O! men and women immortal, speeding on toward a great eternity swift as the years, swift as the months, swift as the days, swift as the hours, swift as the minutes, swift as the seconds—on what track are you? Has sin switched you off this side? or has Satan switched you off the other side? Are you sure you are on the track? Toward light, or toward darkness? Toward victory or toward defeat? Toward heaven or toward hell? Are you on the right track? "Now is the day of salvation."

BELLEVILLE, SATURDAY, APRIL 14.

The Beginning of the End.

The result of the election on February 27th of members to serve in the Ontario Legislature was at once acknowledged by the Globe to be a severe disappointment to the friends of the Government, who had expected that the majority which had obeyed Mr. Mowat's beck and call in the fourth Legislature would be but slightly, if at all, decreased in consequence of the appeal to the people. The organ thereupon, no doubt animated by the hope of regaining a few of the lost seats, counselled its friends to enter protests wherever a chance of success seemed to exist, and the result was the filing of a large number of petitions —by the Conservatives, however. By dint of persistent coaxing, the supporters of the Government have been induced to put up the necessary $1,000 in a few cases in order to offset the action of their opponents, but still the galling fact remains that the petitions filed against the Grit members elect considerably outnumber those entered against Conservatives. The Globe is far sighted enough to perceive that, in all human probability, this is but the beginning of the end. It knows that all the usual devices of its party were freely resorted to in the late contest—that bribery, intimidation and all the arts of the experienced corruptionists who swarm within the Grit party were exerted in vain—and that the result was that a majority of the people voted against the Government. It recognizes the fact that an administration which has been condemned by the people and has but a slender majority in the Legislature, which majority may be wiped out as a result of the trial of the protests and the succeeding elections, cannot remain in power after the House meets. Still, the organ has evidently determined that it will fight to the last, as the power and patronage which have accrued to the party from the administration of the affairs of Ontario are of too much importance to be meekly yielded to the conqueror. Ontario, it has declared, is the citadel of the Grit party, and every art must be used to defend it.

The organ formally opened its defence of the citadel in its issue of the 11th with an article which is intended to influence coming elections by discrediting the opponents of the Government, elevating the character of the supporters of Mr. Mowat, and encouraging the latter by inducing them to enter more protests.

This bulletin of the commander of the "Corkscrew Brigade" is, however, but a half-hearted, silly, untruthful affair after all, the flatulent rhetoric of which will hardly inspire the disheartened and disorganized crowd to make any further serious effort to avert the inevitable, namely the surrender of the citadel which they have held by dishonesty and tyranny for upwards of eleven years, to those who have fairly beaten them in the field and have gained possession of all their outworks, with great slaughter amongst the defenders thereof.

The first paragraph of this famous bulletin reads as follows:

> The Conservative party has not loyally accepted the decision of the people of this Province as expressed at the polls on the 27th of last February. This decision was in favor of the present Liberal Administration. Beaten at the polls, the Conservatives are appealing to the courts. It is the policy of despair. There is no pretence of even a desire to uphold the principle of electoral purity on the side of the party which has opposed all legislation in its favor and systematically violated such legislation whenever and wherever it was deemed advisable and practicable. The distinctly avowed intention is to open if possible a few seats on the slender chance of carrying them. On that chance they have staked their all.

The statement that the Conservatives have not loyally accepted the verdict of the people is one of the coolest pieces of impudence we have ever seen, viewed in the light of the fact that the Grit organ was the first journal on either side of politics to express dissatisfaction with the result, and to advise its friends to endeavor to secure an alteration of that verdict. It seemingly forgot that its advice could cut both ways, and now that such a result has been brought about, the organ whines.

The decision of the people was not for, but against the Government, as a majority of the people voted against their candidates. Yet, by a shameless gerrymander, Mr. Mowat was enabled to secure a small majority of the members elected. Even that majority was the result of all the corrupt practices known to the law. So, in order to unmask that corruption and to allow the people an opportunity of pronouncing an unbiassed verdict—for the threats and promises of a moribund administration (which that of Mr. Mowat is now) cannot have the same effect as those of a Government supposed by many to be unbeatable (which that of Mr. Mowat was believed to be before the election)—the Conservative party have appealed to the Courts in the interest of electoral purity.

The next allegation is that the hope of the Conservatives is "both vain and delusive," "for," says the organ, "in the first "place the present election was on our "side as pure as it is possible for an elec- "tion to be." If so, why the denunciation of the Conservatives for appealing to the courts, as the Grit party will, in such case, successfully resist the attacks of their opponents and march out of court with flying colors and their character for purity—which suffered no overwhelming a shock from the exposures in the election courts from 1874 onwards that not until lately have their organs ever dared to lay claim to purity in elections—rehabilitated. Such an opportunity ought to be eagerly seized. The fact that it is not, and that those who propose to test the recently renewed Pharisaical protestations of the "party of purity" are abused in good set terms for doing so, is strongly suggestive of the idea that the Grits know their reformation has yet to be brought about. Confirmation of this notion is found in the very next paragraph, in which the significant admission is made that "here "and there in the time of excitement some "of our friends may have been guilty of "questionable acts, but these were few and "far between." "Only a little one," of course. The sins of the Grit corruptionists are always very small, according to their organs. For our part, we shall prefer the opinion of the courts to that of the organ.

Next, the apologist of the Grits tell us that

> The party as a whole kept within the strictest letter of the law, and everywhere discountenanced any attempt at violation. On the other hand the Conservative party notoriously depended for their success on its violation.

The record which the Grit party have made for themselves as the champions of the doctrine of purity in elections is not such as to inspire confidence in the foregoing statements. The record shows that, of the members elected to the Dominion Parliament and the Ontario Legislature since the election courts were constituted, 47 Grits were unseated, of whom seven were disqualified, and in addition, one of their candidates, who protested the election of his successful opponent, was himself disqualified. Of the Conservatives elected to the same bodies within the same period, but 31 were unseated, of whom only two were disqualified, and the disqualification of these gentlemen was not because of their corruption, but because each drank a glass of beer in a tavern on polling day. These facts are sufficient to show who the corruptionists are.

"The duty of our friends," the organ continues, "in every contested constituency "is abundantly evident. They have already "responded nobly by filing petitions wher- "ever illegal measures have been employed "by our opponents. This action must be "extended and made persistent until the "trials." To which we reply: "Lay on Macduff!" The Conservatives are not to be frightened by any such prospect. If the contest is to be fought over again in one half of the constituencies, well and good. Our friends are eager for the fray and prepared to make short work of the panic-stricken crew who have had the defence of the last stronghold of Gettism entrusted to them. West Hastings will do her part, and others of the constituencies which were won by the Grits through corrupt means will repudiate Mowatism just so soon as the opportunity is given to them.

Honest and Liberal.

When the Hops in each bottle of Hop Bitters (at the present price, $1.25 per lb.) cost more than a bottle is sold for, besides the other costly medicines, and the quality and price are kept the same, we think it is honest and liberal in the proprietors, and no one should complain, or buy or use worthless stuff, or cheating bogus imitations because the price is less.

TWO BUSY BURGLARS

Break Open the Axe Factory Office Safe

AND GET NOTHING.

DETECTED, CHASED AND CAPTURED IN A CHURCH SPIRE.

Those of the lieges who went for an airing before breakfast this morning, and those whom circumstances brought on the streets before the business places on the several thoroughfares were opened, or clerks had begun their labors, were somewhat surprised to find that those whom they met were in an excited frame of mind and anxious for conversation. A burglary had been reported to have occurred in the office of the Axe Factory, and as time passed on it became evident that the assertion was correct, for its truth had been ascertained by observation of what some midnight marauders had accomplished. Groups of excited people collected at several points on Front Street, and volubly talked over what had been done, whilst in the hotel offices and dining rooms the same topic was the sole subject of conversation. Of course, the full particulars of the affair had not reached them, but the news some had obtained made the subject particularly interesting, especially as this was the first case of burglary and safe cracking that has occurred here in a number of years.

THE FIRST VERSION OF THE AFFAIR

was as follows: The workmen employed in the Axe Factory go to work at a very early hour. Some of them were on hand at four o'clock this morning and were preparing for the labors of the day, when they were startled by the noise of an explosion which bore indications of having occurred in the business office of the establishment. The men rushed to the sidewalk, when they saw two men scampering off down Mill street. Pursuit was at once instituted, the number of pursuers being added to as the chase proceeded. The safe crackers were found to number but two, and they were fast runners, as those who were after them soon learned. The chase resolved itself into a go-as-you-please. The workmen were burdened with their dinner pails, but those they cast aside. Over the upper bridge the chase was continued, and the flight of the fugitives was pursued up North Front street and over the Jamieson Road, which is a continuation of that street. When the burglars reached Bleecker's woods, on the west side of the road, they made for the shelter they fancied could be secured there, and though they were a good distance in advance, their pursuers were still in the race, and as determined as ever. By the aid of the snow in the woods the tracks of the burglars were followed, and as they kept on together the trail was readily followed. Over logs and fallen trees and through the swampy places of that section the chase was kept up, and eventually the burglars headed for the city, with those who were following them in close pursuit. Finally they reached the Holloway street Methodist church, and deeming that sacred edifice a secure retreat, they broke open one of the basement windows and entered the building. They then ascended into the church proper, and after entering the gallery ascended the tower, going as high as they possibly could, and, as they probably thought, beyond the reach of those following them. The pursuers surrounded the church, determined that the men should not escape, and then, at six o'clock, an officer was sent for. Policeman Newton was alone on duty at the Station, and he at once responded. Outside the church, the gathering of people increased, and when the news was brought down town that the burglars had been "treed" in the church tower, people began to flock there from all directions. Newton ascended the steeple, but it was so dark within that for a time he was unable to see the parties he was in search of. At length he descried them on the topmost part, his first sight of any part of them being their boots. He spoke to them, but no reply was given, neither could they be induced to descend from their lofty perches. Serg't McCrudden was sent for, and came upon the scene shortly after half-past seven. Again was the demand made that the men should come down, and at length one of them responded, and was immediately taken charge of. On being questioned about his partner, he stated that he was not "up there," pointing towards the top of the steeple, but Newton investigated and soon induced his man to come down. Both parties were then handcuffed and brought to the police station, where they were thoroughly searched, but nothing of moment was found on their persons. After being placed in the cells they gave their names as Frank Johnson and Thomas White, but these names are probably fictitious. The men are entire strangers to this city.

HOW THEY WENT TO WORK.

Baker's blacksmith shop, a short distance north of the Axe Factory, was first visited by the burglars, who gained entrance through a window, and took therefrom a sledge hammer, screw driver and punch. They then went to the office, and by lifting up the north window, were enabled to get inside. They next attacked the combination on the safe with the screw driver and sledge, using the former as a chisel. The knob was soon broken off and the inner portion was driven through with the rung of a chair. Powder was then poured into the opening and a fuse attached, after which the match was applied. The explosion caused the bolts to draw back and the door was readily opened. Inside the iron door was one of wood, which was broken into numberless pieces. The safe contained the books of the establishment, some papers and a silver watch, the property of Aid. Starling, but no money. The time piece was blackened and the front case broken off. It will serve as a token of the visit of these midnight marauders.

ANOTHER VERSION.

It appears that the first seen of the burglars was after the explosion took place. The burglars had gone out on the sidewalk to observe if the noise had attracted the notice of any one, and as they were re-entering through the window, they were seen by John Vannorman, a workman in the factory, who was going to work. He proceeded to the office and on inquiring what they were doing there, they immediately came out and ran off. The chase then began and resulted as above described.

It is said that when the burglars were leaving the office, they fired several shots at their pursuers. Mr. Wills states that two suspicious characters visited his residence on Thursday and asked for food, but as his servant disliked their appearance, she refused to admit them, though she gave them some food. It is thought they are the same parties who were arrested this morning.

IN COURT.

The Police Court was densely thronged when the prisoners were brought before the Police Magistrate and the eagerness of the public to hear the trial resulted in many waiting in the corridor to hear the result. The prisoners were ordered to stand up, and the Magistrate asked if their names were Frank Johnson and Thomas White, to which they replied in the affirmative, Johnson gave his age as 20. He is a lithe looking fellow of good appearance, smooth faced, dark complexion, brown eyes and brown hair. He was dressed in dark clothing and was without a collar. White gave his age as 24, and is fair, rather good looking, with blue eyes, and was not dressed as well as his companion. He was the possessor of a moustache and was also collarless. Neither had on an overcoat, they having thrown them off during the chase.

They were first charged with feloniously entering the premises of William Baker and stealing therefrom a sledge and a screw driver.

In reply to the Magistrate, they elected to be tried by him on that charge.

They were also charged with entering the warehouse of J. W. Campion and others, and committing a felony therein.

To this, they answered that they would prefer to be tried by a jury.

After some remarks from the Magistrate, they asked to be tried by a jury on both charges, and as the prosecution was not ready to go on, the prisoners were remanded for a week. They appeared to take their situation quite mechanically and assumed an air of indifference to their surroundings which would indicate that they were posted in the business which resulted in their detection. While said he was a sailor and the other stated that he was a laborer. Both asserted they were born in this country, the first named in Cornwall. The address; 26 West Randolph street, Chicago, was found in one of White's pockets. Both are now in gaol.

NOTES.

It was at one time thought that the thieves had not entered the church, but Constable Newton soon dispelled the doubt.

The burglars were "game," as they refused to come down when Newton threatened them with a revolver in each hand. They thus beat the record of Crockett's coon.

The tension of the nerves was too great for one of the twain, however, as he fainted after coming down stairs, but was speedily revived by a liberal application of water.

In conversation with Mr. Britton, the Crown prosecutor, a reporter of the INTELLIGENCER learned that evidence against the burglars Johnson and White, would be heard by the Grand Jury this afternoon and that the prisoners would, probably, be brought to trial on Monday.

A way who took a characteristically humorous view of the capture in the tower, suggested that the burglars are not likely to be nearer heaven than they were this morning, unless they either repent and become converted, climb a higher steeple, or scale a mountain.

A photograph of Johnson and White, the burglars, was taken this afternoon at Ford's.

Beware of Imitations.

Since Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has become celebrated, a number of unprincipled persons have been endeavoring to palm off Electron and Electric Oil for the genuine DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. Beware of these similar named articles. If their originators had any faith in the healing properties of their own medicines they would, like honest men, give them a name of their own, and not try to sell them the reputation of another; but as they know their preparations have no merit, they resort to the most unprincipled means of selling them by getting a name as near as possible to Eclectric. We therefore ask the public when purchasing to see that the name Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is on the front of the wrapper, and the signature of NORTHROP & LYMAN, the proprietors for Canada on the back.

Let there be no mistake about this, that the Myrtle Navy tobacco is manufactured from the very finest Virginia leaf. No higher quality of leaf can be purchased for any tobacco made. It is selected with the very greatest care, and treated by the most approved processes for preserving the flavor of the tobacco.

BELLEVILLE, SATURDAY, APRIL 14

City and Vicinity.

THE City Council will meet on Monday evening.

ICE continues to float down the river in detached pieces.

THE attendance of buyers and sellers at the market to-day was large.

THREE cars of Corby's Rye were shipped to Halifax to-day and eleven more are to follow.

TWENTY one carters have taken out the necessary license—only one of that number uses a double team.

THREE piers at Corby's mill, were struck by the ice above yesterday and portions of them carried away.

TRADE was lively to day and many merchants who enjoyed the consequences were pleased thereat.

THE annual meeting of the Oka Lacrosse Club is to be held on Tuesday evening at the Mechanics' Institute.

REV. MR. MITCHELL is gradually improving and the pain and consequent soreness are gradually leaving him.

COMPLAINT is made that rubbish is being dumped into the lane between the Public Buildings and Pitceathly & Kelso's.

JOHN VANMEER, the sailor, well known in this city, is not the party who figured in the recent stabbing affray in Tyendinaga.

THE fall wheat in this section is reported to be looking splendid, its appearance being equally as promising as that of any preceding season.

THE hardest looking locomotive that ever survived a collision, was brought here to-day. It figured in a pitch in near Newcastle and will be repaired here.

JOHN HOSKINS, who was injured by the falling of the floor of the building during nomination for East Hastings, is in a critical situation and cannot survive.

TRAPPING has not been briskly carried on this winter, as those who formerly engaged in it preferred to work in the shanties, as they could earn renumerative wages and have constant employment.

THE remains of the late Henry Hicks, who died from the effects of the injuries he received by falling off a G. T. R. train yesterday morning, were taken to Colborne last evening. The funeral will occur to-morrow.

IN the Police Court to-day "Bristol Bill" was charged a dollar for sleeping on the first floor of the police station last night and Peter Gordanier was allowed until Tuesday to pay some rent he owed Jonathan Spry.

THE ice shove has moved O'Brien's Bridge a couple of feet. Two piers of the covered bridge at Frankford have shifted four feet. Mr. Francis is doing what he can to save the Frankford Bridge, but should the ice break up suddenly at "the landing" the Bridge would be doomed. The Tweed Bridge was only saved by blowing up the ice with dynamite.

THE market hunters have slaughtered a large number of ducks within the past few days. One of them had forty pairs and another had eight pairs of ducks—chiefly blue bills and whistle wings—on the market this morning.

"WILL a God of Love Punish any of His Creatures Forever?" will be the subject of the addresses by Messrs. Marshall and Irving to-morrow, Sunday evening, at the Methodist Hall, to commence promptly at 8:15. The meetings during the week held by them at the Bethel Hall have been largely attended.

THE Telgmann Family Concert Company, who are very highly spoken of by the press, are to give one of their musical entertainments in the Metropolitan Hall on Tuesday evening. The company consists of thirteen performers, of whom seven are members of the Telgmann family. Ten of the performers are instrumentalists and three vocalists.

AN Irishman named Corbett was being examined in a case in Court this afternoon and talked so rapidly and in such an accent that the official stenographer could not take down his words. His Lordship remarked to the witness—after stopping him—that Mr. Monaghan could not understand him. As the persons named are thorough Irishmen His Lordship's remark carries its significance.

WE had a visit to-day from Mr. Shakespeare, M. P., for Victoria, British Columbia, who is visiting the city to see the Deaf and Dumb Institute. With Mr. Mathison, the Superintendent, he looked through the Institute, which could not fail to please him. He also inquired into the working of our volunteer fire department. Like all residents of British Columbia, Mr. Shakespeare thinks it is the Mecca to which the feet of emigrants should tend.

THE Board of Education met yesterday afternoon, to take into consideration the course that should be pursued towards the boys who had broken into the Station school building and committed depredations. The boys, to the number of eight, were arraigned in one of the rooms, with all the male scholars of the school present. The Chief of Police was on hand to arrest the boys if it was decided to take them before the Police Magistrate, who was present, and explained what penalty would be imposed if the boys were brought before him. The Board decided to expel the boys until such time as their parents will guarantee that their children will not repeat the offence, at the same time stating that should the offence be repeated, the severest penalty would be inflicted on the culprits.

WEATHER PROBABILITIES—Toronto, April 14.—Lakes, strong winds and moderate gales, east veering to south and south west, generally fair weather to-day, local rain to-night and Sunday, higher temperature.

SAD ACCIDENT.—A couple of days since a son of Mr. Wm. Osterhout, of Murray, started for Manitoba with a full farming outfit, he having spent last year in the Northwest, and having determined to make his future home there. Yesterday a telegram was received by his father, stating that his son had had both of his legs taken off by the cars, and a later telegram stating that the young man was dead, and his friends had started to bring his body back to the now saddened home which he had left so lately in health and hope.

Committee Business.

HARBOR AND FERRY.

The Harbor and Ferry Committee met last night.

The Harbor Master asked for a safe to keep the records of his office secure. His communication was laid over for consideration.

After an explanation by the Harbor Master, it was decided to allow the lumbermen to swing the boom at the mouth of the river.

Applications for the position of Tally Clerk at the boom were read from John Wilson, David Brennan and B. D. Foster. As others had intimated that they were desirous of applying for that berth, it was deemed advisable to allow the Council to make the selection.

The question: "What can be done to assist in the establishment of smelting works here?" was answered by the Committee asserting their willingness to aid any industry of that character that would be established here.

PUBLIC WORKS.

The Board of Public Works convened and passed the Street Surveyor's pay list, amounting to $39.04, and an account of Rathbun for 40 cents for salt. It was ordered that the Street Surveyor take the necessary steps to prevent the trees on the hill from being injured by the sidewalks. The complaints of several who wanted sidewalks, (nice ones) were commented on and in time will probably receive due attention.

FIRE.

The Fire Committee recommended the payment of the following accounts: Carman, rent $87.25; R. McCrudden, stoker No. 2 four months, $16.50; Rathbun & Son $20. The Committee also recommended that Robt. McCoy jr., be employed to draw No. 1 steamer to fires at the same price as last year; that Robt. McCoy sr., be employed to draw No. 2, and William Hale be employed to draw the waggon of the Hooks.

BY-LAWS.

The Committee on By-laws approved of a By-law to prevent forestalling. By its provisions hucksters cannot buy before 10 o'clock in the morning, in the summer, and 10:30 in the winter. The matter of establishing a carters' stand was discussed, but no decision was arrived at.

Spring Assizes.

SATURDAY, April 14.

THE GRAND JURY.

Yesterday afternoon Mr. P. R. Daly, foreman of the Grand Jury handed in their presentment in which they expressed their satisfaction at finding so few criminals before them.

They reported that they found the Gaol cleanly and orderly throughout, recommending that every facility be offered the Gaoler in his efforts to classify prisoners and at the same time recommended improvements in the water supply. They expressed the pleasure they had experienced in visiting the Deaf & Dumb Institute and reported that there was no sickness now amongst the children.

His Lordship, after thanking the Grand Jury for their attendance, remarked that their recommendations would be forwarded to the proper quarter, and discharged them.

This morning, in consequence of the arrest of the two men charged with burglary, the Grand Jury were recalled.

QUEEN VS. CARSON.—Larceny—charged with stealing $15 out of Belch's boarding house, at the Station. The evidence in this case was given at the time he was tried before the Police Magistrate. The prisoner was defended by G. D. Dickson, Q. C., and R. C. Clute.

The Judge directed the acquittal of the prisoner, which was accordingly done.

The members of the petit jury were then informed that there would be no further cases to necessitate their presence to-day and they were then allowed to go home.

The Lockerty case will be heard on Monday.

James Peters, the man who stole $5 from the Swede, Johnson, and who concealed that lithographic document in his mouth, was brought up for sentence. In reply to the Judge, the prisoner said he was a stranger here, that he had been working on a railroad in the north, and had come from Toronto. The Judge said he ought to go back there, and sent him to the Central Prison for 18 months.

A number of non-jury cases were heard but not finished.

At the request of His Lordship the Grand Jury were directed to re-assemble at 12:30, which they did.

After a brief session the Grand Jury adjourned till 2:30 to await the return of other members of that body.

O. Bortle, of Manchester, Ontario Co., N.Y., writes:—"I obtained immediate relief from the use of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. I have had Asthma for eleven years. Have been obliged to sit up all night for ten or twelve nights in succession. I can now sleep soundly all night on a feather bed, which I had not been able to do previous to using the Oil."

THE MURDER TRIALS.

Brady Protests His Innocence

DUBLIN, April 14.—When the jury in the Brady trial announced their verdict yesterday a murmur went around the Court-room and Brady, who had been singularly composed, turned ashen pale when asked if he had anything to say. He responded in a loud, clear, firm voice: "I am not guilty of the charge that the informers have sworn I am. Those men would swear away the life of anyone to save their own." After the sentence was pronounced, Brady, who had now recovered composure, with solemn vehemence protested his innocence. Crowds in the street received the announcement of the verdict with disfavor. There was no serious demonstration.

Riches in Hop Farming.

At the present prices, ten acres in Hops will bring more money than five hundred acres in any other farming; and, if there is a consumer or dealer who thinks the price of Hop Bitters high, remember Hops are $1.25 per lb., and the quantity and quality of Hops in Hop Bitters and the price remains the same as formerly. Don't buy or use worthless stuff or imitations because the price is less.

Sir John Macdonald Introduces His Electoral Bill.

ASSIMILATION OF THE FRANCHISE IN EVERY PROVINCE—THE QUALIFICATION LOWERED—FARMERS' AND MECHANICS' SONS AND UNMARRIED LADIES GIVEN VOTES.

OTTAWA, April 13.—After routine to-day in the Commons, Sir John Macdonald introduced an Act respecting the electoral franchise. He explained that the principle of the act was that the same classes should vote in the various provinces. At present one class of voters voted in one province, and another class in another province. Although the change would slightly contract the franchise in a few instances the general effect would be a very material enlargement of the franchise. The bill was to some extent based on the act at present in force in Ontario, but was more liberal in its provisions. In cities, towns and incorporated villages the qualification required was the possession of $300 in real property, or a rental of $20; while the Ontario Act required a qualification of $400 or a rental of $30. In rural districts the qualification was $200, or a rental of $20 per annum. The Act also provided for an income qualification. The franchise was extended to farmers' sons in the same manner as under the Ontario Act, and not only to the sons of farmers, but to the sons of mechanics and others who resided with their parents, and whose parents were possessed of sufficient property, or paid sufficient rental to entitle not only themselves but their sons to a vote. The Bill also provided for female suffrage. (Applause.) Unmarried women would have a right to vote if possessed of the requisite qualification. With reference to the administration of the law, there would be a revising officer for each county, or for more than one county, who would probably be the county judge, but the county judge would not be compelled to serve if he objected to do so. This officer would prepare the voters' list and hold courts from time to time for their revision, his duties being similar to those of the revising officer under the English Act. The bill would be printed and distributed in a few days and ample time would be given for full discussion.

OTTAWA, April 14, 1.30 a. m.—The house has just adjourned after a six hours' debate on the Finance Minister's motion to go into Committee Ways and Means. The debate was confined to the operation of the N. P. Mr. Mackenzie attacked it on the ground that it had failed to benefit the farmer. Sir Leonard Tilley replied and Messrs. Davis, Campbell (Victoria, N. S.), Foster, Brecken, Hackett, McMullen (North Wellington), Farrow and Watson presented their views on the question according to their politics.

The Bad and Worthless

are never imitated or counterfeited. This is especially true of a family medicine, and it is positive proof that the remedy imitated is of the highest value. As soon as it had been tested and proved by the whole world that Hop Bitters was the purest, best and most valuable family medicine on earth, many imitations sprung up and began to steal the notices in which the press and people of the country had expressed the merits of H. B., and in every way trying to induce suffering invalids to use their stuff instead, expecting to make money on the credit and good name of H. B. Many others started nostrums put up in similar style to H. B., with variously invented names in which the word "Hop" or "Hops" were used in a way to induce people to believe they were the same as Hop Bitters. All such pretended remedies or cures, no matter what their style or name, are utterly especially those with the word "Hop" or "Hops" in their name or in any way connected with them or their name, are imitations or counterfeits. Beware of them. Touch none of them. Use nothing but genuine Hop Bitters, with a bunch or cluster of green Hops on the white label. Trust nothing else. Druggists and dealers are warned against dealing in imitations or counterfeits.

A WELCOME.

Far in the sunny South she lingers,
Yet slowly comes along;
With fairy garlands in her fingers,
With smiles of sweet song.
Her eyes with promises are beaming,
Her smiles will rapture bring,
The sunlight from her hair is streaming,—
Thrice welcome, lovely Spring!

She brings us gifts, the royal maiden,
Fair flowers to deck the hills;
With primroses her arms are laden,
Illushed and dappled rills.
Pale crocuses have come before her,
Wild birds her welcome sing;
Ten thousand longing hearts adore her,—
The grey world's darling Spring.

AN APRIL GIRL.

A girl that is born on an April day
Has a right to be merry, lighsome, gay;
And that is the reason I dance and play
And frisk like a mote in a sunny ray—
Wouldn't you
Do it, too,
If you had been born on an April day?

The girl that is born on ah April day
Has also the right to cry they say;
And so I sometimes do give way
When things go crooked or all astray—
Wouldn't you
Do it, too,
If you had been born on an April day?

Heighe! and hurrah! for an April day
Its cloud, its sparkle, its slip and play!
I mean to be happy wherever I may,
And cry when I must; for that's my way,
Wouldn't you
Do it, too,
If you had been born on an April day?

ECHO SONG.

I call across the roling plain,
"O mountains, from your sleep awake,
O stupid rocks, your slumber break,
Hear and give back my words again!"
And hark! the Echo doth rebound
In accents made the soul of sound,
Replying to my rolling voice,
"Rejoice!"

There loiterath by a flock of sheep,
Above whose clamorous bleating swells
The tinkling of their hundred bells.
In sympathy with me, the steep
Takes up the wild pell-mell of sound,
Makes jargon human its rebound,
Compels uproar to flow along
In song.

Where curves the lake's green crescent coast,
The fishers flock with net and boat;
With song and shout ashore, afloat,
Yet all the babble of their host
Melts into music in rebound,
Confusion but enhances cheer
One heart of overflowing cheer
I hear.

Behind me is the murmurous sigh
And rustling of the forest trees
While hunt or low as flows the breeze
Comes song of birds afar and nigh,
And echo lures into the rebound,
One note on Echo's lip is found
As if from one poetic brain,
The strain.

And thus from all the race ascends
Earth's mighty hymn of song and prayer
Of hope, of anguish, praise, despair;
But gathered into one descends
Divine—not echo but rebound—
On answer from the blue above,
'Tis love.

Catarrh of the Bladder.

The Lime-kiln Club.

'Gem'len, I have a painful bit o' news to spread befo' de meetin',' began the old man as he motioned to Elder Toots to put down the alley window. 'Nicodemus Pomroke Scotts, a local member of dis lodge, has crossed into Canady an' will not reappear among us. For de las' three months I have bin expectin' some sich climax, an' dis mawnin', when a messenger informed me dat he had disappeared, after failin' in an attempt to shoot hisself wid an ole hoss pistol, I war not a bit surprised. He leaves a wife an' two chilren an' about fifty creditors.

'What sent him off? De same reasons dat am daily workin' to bring about another panic—de same reasons dat explain de hundreds ob biggest failures—de same reasons dat am crippin' de efforts of thousands of hard workin' men to secure homes of deir own—fam'ly extravagance. No, you can't call it extravagance; foolery am a better name for it. Up to a'yar ago Brudder Scott was jobbin' aroun' an' makin' a dollar a day. Don he got a situashun by which he sirned fo'teen dollars per week. He was poo' off in de house an' had debts haugin' ober him, but hesh was do chance to get shen. How was it improved? In less dan one month his wife was rigged out wid a twenty dollar dress, twelve shillin' kids, a five dollar hat an' an opera fan. He had no peace ob min' onless he obeyed her. In six weeks she became too high toned to wash an' iron fur odder folkses. In two months she wanted a better house, wid a red parlor carpet an' cane seat cha'rs an' mah' de room. In three months she had to have a black silk dress, gold bracelets, a tony bonnet, kid shoes an' gold fillin' in her teef.

'Dat foolery has reaped its harvest. De husband found dat he was runnin' behind, his home was being neglected, his wife was bein' gossiped about, an' in despair he has picked up his fan an' slid out. It was the natural result. I tell you, my frens, de tom foolery of the women of dis kentry am straitnin' out de chalk line till the cord can't stan' much mo', an' I am high time dat somebody sots his foot down. De man who airns $20 per week has somehow got de ideah into his herd dat de world expects him to dress his wife an' be airned a banker's profits. Wives of men who can't keep up wid deir house rent am canterin' up an' down wid seal skin sacques an' six dollar shoes. Wives of men who have to dodge de butcher an' grocer an' tailor am now selectin' spring carpets an' orderin' 450 lambrequins. Wives of men who couldn't raise $50 at de bank to save deir necks, am rushin' to balls an' parties, an' havin' deir expensive dresses described for de benefit of de public.

'De so called society of de airgo am composed of false hair, false pretences, debt dodging an' base deceptshun. Our rich people am distinguished by deir plain dress an' quiet manners. De snides an' dudes an' dodos do all de swaggerin', rush on all de colors an' monopolize de biggest sheer of de street. You wait! De man who lives fur another ten y'ars will h'ar sunthin' drap, an' after de drap takes place de thousands of idiots who now feel ashamed to admit dat they doan' keep but two servant gals in de house will go back to deir cook stoves an' wash tubs an' take deir proper places in de procesh'un.'

RACKED BY INNUMERABLE PANGS, restless by day, sleepless at night, rising unrefreshed in the morning, without appetite and pestered by varying and perplexing symptoms, the dyspeptic takes indeed a gloomy view of human existence. For him the zest of life seems gone. Heartburn, oppression at the pit of the stomach, and the attendant annoyances of of constipation and biliousness, combine to render him utterly wretched. But there is, if he will but take advantage of it, a reliable source of reliable relief from all misery. NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY and DYSPEPTIC CURE is, as its name imports, a botanic preparation, free from mineral poison, and an all-efficient remedy for indigestion in its most obstinate form. It not only enriches the blood by enabling the digestive organs to convert the food received into nutriment, but depurates it by increasing the action of the bowels and kidneys, the natural outlets for its impurities. But while it relaxes the bowels, it never does so violently and with pain, like a drastic cathartic. It aids, but never forces, Nature, invigorating as well as purifying and regulating the system. It thoroughly removes those diseased humors which tend to vitiate the blood, purifies the urinary secretion, and promotes a flow of healthy bile into the natural channel, besides expelling it from the circulation. Experience has proved that this standard medicine is a thorough remedy for dyspepsia, biliousness, costiveness, kidney complaints, scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, lumbago and all impurities of the blood. Price $1.00. Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac-simile of their signature. Sold by all medicine dealers

WARNER'S SAFE CURE FOR THE KIDNEYS, LIVER AND URINARY ORGANS. THE BEST BLOOD PURIFIER.

There is only one way by which any disease can be cured, and that is by removing the cause—whatever it may be. The great medical authorities of the day declare that nearly every disease is caused by deranged kidneys or liver. To restore these, therefore, is the only way by which health can be secured. Here is where WARNER'S SAFE CURE has achieved its great reputation. It acts directly upon the kidneys and liver and by placing them in a healthy condition drives disease and pain from the system. For all Kidney, Liver and Urinary troubles; for the distressing disorders of women; for Malaria, and physical troubles generally, this great remedy has no equal. Beware of impostors, imitations and concoctions said to be just as good.

For Diabetes ask for WARNER'S SAFE DIABETES CURE.

For sale by all dealers.

Plain Truths!

The blood is the foundation of life, it circulates through every part of the body and unless it is pure and rich, good health is impossible, if disease has entered the system the only sure and quick way to drive it out is to purify and enrich the blood.

These simple facts are well known and the highest medical authorities agree that nothing but iron will restore the blood to its natural condition; and also that all the Iron preparations hitherto made blacken the teeth, cause headache, and are otherwise injurious.

SULPHUR AND IRON BITTERS will thoroughly and quickly assimulate with the blood, purifying and strengthening it and thus drive disease from any part of the system, and it will not blacken the teeth cause headache or constipation and is positively not injurious.

St. Johnsbury, Vermont Oct. 21st 1882.

For 15 years I have been a great sufferer from blood disease, dyspepsia and general debility, and because so debilitated that I could not retain anything on my stomach, in fact life had almost become a burden, and my hope had almost left me, I was induced to give Sulphur and Iron Bitters a trial and am now taking the third bottle and have not felt so well in six years as I do at present.

MRS. S. L. MOORE.

SULPHUR AND IRON BITTERS effectually cures dyspepsia, indigestion and weakness, and renders the greatest relief and benefit to persons suffering from such diseases as kidney and liver complaints, dyspepsia, indigestion etc.

Cathartic Pills

Combine the choicest cathartic principles in medicine, in proportions accurately adjusted to insure their greatest certainty and uniformity of effect. They are the result of years of careful study and practical experiment, and are the most effectual remedy yet discovered for diseases caused by derangement of the stomach, liver, and bowels, which require prompt and effectual treatment. AYER'S PILLS are especially applicable to this class of diseases. They act directly on the digestive and assimilative processes, and restore a healthy action. Their extensive use by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, is one of the many proofs of their value as a safe, sure, and perfectly reliable purgative medicine. Being compounded of the concentrated virtues of purely vegetable substances, they are positively free from calomel or any injurious properties, and can be administered to children with perfect safety.

AYER'S PILLS are an effectual cure for Constipation or Costiveness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Foul Stomach and Breath, Dizziness, Headache, Loss of Memory, Numbness, Biliousness, Jaundice, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Dropsy, Tumors, Worms, Neuralgia, Colic, Gripes, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Gout, Piles, Disorders of the Liver, and all other diseases resulting from a disordered state of the digestive apparatus.

As a Dinner Pill they have no equal.

While gentle in their action, these PILLS are the most thorough and searching cathartic that can be employed, and never give pain unless the bowels are inflamed, and then their influence is healing. They stimulate the appetite and digestive organs; they operate to purify and enrich the blood, and impart renewed health and vigor to the whole system.

A NOTED BUT UNTITLED WOMAN.

[From the Boston Globe.]

Messrs. Editors:—
The above is a good likeness of Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., who shows all other human beings may be truthfully called the "Proud of Women," as some of her correspondents love to call her. She is regularly devoted to her work, which is the outcome of a lifestudy, and is obliged to keep six ladies assistants, to help her answer the large correspondence which daily pours in upon her, each bearing its special burden of sickness, or joy at release from it. Her Vegetable Compound is a medicine for good and not evil purposes. It is a legitimate specialty and an satisfied of the truth of this.

On account of its proven merits it is recommended and prescribed by the best physicians in the country. One says: "It works like a charm and saves much pain. It will cure entirely the worst form of falling of the uterus, leucorrhœa, irregular and painful Menstruation, all Ovarian Troubles, Inflammation and Ulceration, Floodings, all displacements, and the consequent spinal weakness, and is especially adapted to the Change of Life."

It permeates every portion of the system, and gives new life and vigor. It removes faintness, flatulency, destroys all craving for stimulants, and relieves weakness of the stomach. It cures Bloating, Headaches, Nervous Prostration, General Debility, Sleeplessness, Depression and Indigestion. That feeling of bearing down, causing pain, weight and backache, is always permanently cured by its use. It will at all times, and under all circumstances, act in harmony with the law that governs the female system.

Boosts only $1. per bottle or six for $5., and is sold by druggists. Any advice required as to special cases, and the same will be cheerfully given. Pamphlet for perfect health by the use of the Vegetable Compound, can be obtained by addressing Lydia E. Pinkham & Co., Lynn, Mass.

For Kidney Complaint of either sex this compound is unsurpassed as a blood purifier, and will at all times and under all circumstances, act in harmony with the law that governs the female system.

Education in Ontario.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE MINISTER OF EDUCATION FOR 1882.

The annual report of the Minister of Education for Ontario for the year 1882 is a comprehensive work, including not only the educational statistics for 1881 and Orders in Council and circulars relating to educational affairs issued last year, but also reports on the Kindergarten system, and on the Normal Schools and condition of secondary and elementary education in the United States.

RECEIPTS AND EXPENDITURES.

The receipts for public school purposes in 1881 were $3,209,238; of this amount $258,297 was apportioned from the legislative grants; the municipalities fund, surplus distribution, and minor sources contributed $1,455,747; the county rates $896,808, and home rates $1,455,747. All together these items increase of $4,469 in the receipts over those of 1880. The total expenditure was $2,844,271 or $222,218 more than in the previous year. It is gratifying to note that, while the increasing wealth and refinement of the people, and increasing interest in the possession of better and more comfortable school buildings, have caused the erection of new buildings and repairs and the small but decreasing rent bill of the schools amounted to $734,229, an increase of $40,578 over 1880. Roman Catholic Separate Schools show receipts of $137,073, an increase of $200, and an expenditure of $123,723. High Schools and Collegiate Institutes are credited with receipts of $371,209 and an expenditure of $345,850. The latter is $68,079 and the former $61,059 less than in 1880.

SCHOOLS AND PUPILS.

The school population of the Province between five and sixteen years of age, according to the returns of 1881, was 484,224; the number of pupils between the same ages, 459,826; and of other ages 16,442. The boys in attendance at schools considerably more numerous than the girls, the figures standing respectively, 251,661 and 224,607. Of children within the school ages 29,145, or 1,052 less than the previous year, are reported as not attending any school, though it is not to be inferred that the education of these was being neglected; for to say nothing of private instruction, if a fair estimate for boys and girls under 16 attending College and High Schools be made, the total number of school children receiving a public education is 475,428, leaving only 8,796—out of nearly half a million—without a school education.

The attendance at the Separate Schools was 24,819, and at High Schools was 12,135. The number of Public Schools in the Province was 5,278; Separate Schools, 195; High Schools, 104. Of the 5,278 Public Schools reported, 4,150, or 80 per cent., voluntarily opened and closed with religious exercises. The schools, rural as well as urban, were kept open on the average all but a few days of the time prescribed by law. The desire to save in this respect has evidently made no progress even in the poorest sections of the country.

THE TEACHERS.

The Public School teachers employed number 6,922; of whom 3,362 were males and 3,660 females. The average salaries are yet too low for the merits, attainments, and character of the teaching profession. The average in cities for males was $384, in cities $755, in towns $562; and for females in counties $240, in cities $330, and in towns $221.

Catarrh of the Bladder.

STRONG irritation, inflammation, all Kidney and Urinary Complaints, cured by "Buchupaiba." $1.

AGRICULTURE.

Annual Report of the Dominion Minister.

THE IMMIGRATION LAST YEAR.

OTTAWA, April 12.—The report of the Minister of Agriculture for 1882 was laid before Parliament to-day. The acting Deputy Minister reports a large increase in the number of pure bred cattle and sheep imported, while the cattle export trade shows a decrease as compared with 1881. The total cattle exports were 35,738 as against 45,535 in 1881, 10,145 cattle and 233,602 sheep were exported to the United States compared with 7,558 cattle and 264,910 sheep in 1881. A large increase is reported in the phosphate industry, the exports in 1882 amounting to 17,181 tons, valued at $327,667, as against 15,091 tons, worth $259,493, in the previous year. The patent fees received during the year amounted to $60,811 against $52,856 in 1881. 112,468 immigrants settled in Canada during the past year, while 80,602 passed through to settle in the United States. The origins of the emigrants who arrived in the Dominion are only reported at Quebec, and for the last year there arrived at that port 2,881 English, 8,195 Irish, 4,617 Scotch, 1,024 Germans, 8,279 Scandinavians, 50 French, 1,370 Jews, 270 Russians, and 120 of other origins. Of these 3,226 were farmers, 16,629 laborers, 1,420 mechanics, and 17 clerks. The number of children brought out under the auspices of the charitable societies and individuals in 1882. Assisted passages were granted at the rate of £4 sterling for laborers and mechanics, £2 10s. for domestic servants, and £3 for agricultural servants, without families. The total expenditure for immigration last year was $346,542 and for quarantine, $87,395. In 1881 the expenditure was, $206,180 for immigration and $36,700 for quarantine. Mr. Douglas Brymner furnishes an interesting report on the archives, showing that the work of collecting documents bearing on the early history of Canada is progressing well under his supervision. A large number of volumes of the Haldimand and Boquet collections copied in the British museum, have been received. Mr. Brymner urges the necessity for increased space in the archive rooms. The report of Sir A.T. Galt states that 51,309 immigrants left British ports for Canada during the year 1882.

The Customs arrivals in 1881 were 15,404 The Customs arrivals in 1882 were 30,554. The Minister calls attention to the fact that whilst in 1881 the number of Canadians reported in the Customs returns was 9,321, it last year reached 20,857, or more than double. The very large influx of settlers from the United States, the major part of whom were returned Canadians, is undoubtedly due to the prosperous times which have prevailed, the great stimulus which has been given to manufacturing industries, and the opening up of new lands in the North West. The value of the personal effects of the 30,554 entered at the customs from the settlers, goods amounted in 1882 to $925,612, against $437,420 in 1881.

The value of cash and effects brought in by immigrants during the year is thus reported at the various agencies:—

Halifax	$ 286,220
St. John	49,890
Montreal via U. S. Ports	245,500
Ottawa	24,800
Kingston	110,288
Toronto	3-5,220
Hamilton	1,020,230
London	129,141
Total	$2,245,889

To the above figures should be added the amount of money brought in in 1882 by other arrivals reported at Customs and not going through the agencies, viz:—

Reported at Agencies	$2,245,889 00
Reported at Customs	925,612 59
In all	$3,171,501 59

Besides this very large amount in money and property, a large amount has been obtained, and which it is impossible to approximate, was brought into Manitoba. In addition there were the very considerable values in stock, implements and effects. Judging from the opinions expressed by bank managers and others conversant with exchange, the amount of money taken to Manitoba by intending settlers during 1882 was very considerable. It was stated by a banker that £8,000,000 were on deposit in Winnipeg, which had been taken in for investment before the middle of the year. Taking the lowest calculation, half of the amount specified as brought in from abroad, and adding this to the cash and value of effects actually ascertained in the other provinces, the sum of $7,171,502 would make a moderate estimate as new capital in 1882.

A comparison of the results of operations of the department, in 1881 and 1882 as regards immigration, may thus be summarized:—

	1881.	1882.
Total number of settlers in Canada (including arrivals through the Customs)	47,991	112,458
Total amount of money and effects brought by immigrants during the year, so far as ascertained	$4,188,925 00	$7,171,501 59
Total actual cost of immigration, including all establishments in Canada, the United Kingdom, the Continent of Europe, the United States, and all immigration propagandism	205,180 81	346,442 74
Per capita cost on 51,904 settlers (not including the arrivals reported through the Customs)	6 32	4 23
Per capita cost of 112,458 settlers (including arrivals reported through the Customs)	4 29	3 08

By the same comparison, the per capita cost of settlers, since 1875, is as follows:—

1875	19,243 settlers, $14	00
1876	14,493 do	19 60
1877	18,223 do	12 00
1878	18,372 do	9 63
1879	30,717 do	5 74
1880	37,544 do	6 59
1881	32,587 do	6 32
1882	81,904 do	4 23

Why compel them to take those vile and nauseating medicines, when Puttner's Emulsion is so palatable and nice, and produces better results than any other. Most astonishing reports are daily recorded in favor of its cures, where other preparations of the kind have failed, and then been cast aside in disgust.

FOR DELICATE WOMEN, who are suffering from Anæmia and weakness, caused from over-nursing, Puttner's Emulsion is just what is required to give tone to the system, and will immediately build them up in health and strength.

A Fact.

CUT THIS OUT.

"Frank P. Warner came into our store to purchase a sample bottle of ZOPESSA for a friend, and stated that he (Mr. Warner) was afflicted with Kidney and Liver troubles for five years, and had paid $200 or $300 doctor's bills, and has now been completely cured by the use of two large bottles and one sample bottle of ZOPESSA. He was so bad at one time that he lost 37 pounds of flesh, but after using ZOPESSA claims that he is a sound man, and now weighs 145 pounds. He was loud in its praise, and readily consented to allow us to use his name for reference."

BELLEVILLE, MONDAY, APRIL 16.

A Uniform Franchise for the Dominion.

It is with peculiar gratification that we note the introduction into the House of Commons, by the Premier, of a measure providing for a uniform franchise throughout the Dominion. The most striking feature of this measure is that the franchise is to be conferred on unmarried women who are otherwise qualified, Sir John having said, in introducing the bill, "that with this change in the law unmarried women have votes; they will have the right to vote if they have the qualification such as the son has, that is if the property is sufficient."

This extension of the franchise is a long step in advance, and fully justifies the claim of the Liberal-Conservative party that they are the true party of Reform and Progress in this country; and the INTELLIGENCER is particularly gratified with this action, because it was the first journal in the country to advocate, previous to the assembling of Parliament for the current session, the desirability of a Dominion franchise and of extending to women the right of voting. The reception which these views met with was most cordial, the press of all shades of politics concurring in them; and although we cannot claim to have determined the policy of the Government, we are fain to believe that the opinions which we expressed and the discussion which ensued thereupon have had some influence in bringing about so desirable a result.

The bill has not yet been printed, and therefore the whole of its provisions cannot be discussed, but sufficient is known of its details to make it apparent that it is a most liberal measure and will add very largely to the number of voters, especially in Ontario and Quebec. It reduces the real estate and rental qualifications, and confers the franchise upon the sons of mechanics and others in cities. We shall publish a complete synopsis of the provisions of the bill in a future issue.

The Dublin Assassinations.

The trial of Joseph Brady, the chief instrument in carrying out the decree of the "Invincibles" for the assassination of Mr. Burke, and whose murderous instincts, roused by the sight of his victim's blood, led him to slay Lord Cavendish as well, and then to gash the throats of his victims as they lay bleeding on the ground, was begun on the 10th and completed on the 13th. The result was the conviction of this tiger in human form, and the passing of the sentence of death upon him. Every possible effort was made to save the neck of this noxious villain, several perjurers swearing to statements in support of an alibi, but the jury refused to be swayed by their untruths. The evidence for the prosecution was too overwhelming to be overborne by so stale a dodge, and a verdict of "Guilty" was rendered. No doubt the trials of the other murderers will be proceeded with, and such vengeance as the law metes out to the slayers of their kind administered to them. Ireland possibly has wrongs that can be redressed by England; but murders and dynamite explosions will not forward the attempts which her true friends have been making to remove the grievances complained of. The result can only be disaster to those who resort to violence, and postponement of the desired reforms.

A Pleasant Evening.

At the residence of Mr. John Graham, of Hungerford, the second wedding, within one year, took place, and a very enjoyable evening for all concerned. The groom came all the way from Manitoba in search of a wife, and in less than a fortnight an understanding was arrived at, and in less than a month from his arrival the marriage was consummated. Being old acquaintances, four years of absence was too short a time to obliterate all knowledge of each other, and it required but a little conversation and a definite understanding, and the happy groom returned to his distant home, 260 miles beyond Winnipeg, in company with a youthful bride, a young lady highly esteemed in these parts. Around the ample board the entertainment was enlivened by addresses and good wishes for the adventurous lady and the partner of her choice. With music and social converse the evening glided swiftly away. The happy pair were Mr. John C. Robinson, of Manitoba, and Miss Isabella Latimer, of Hungerford.

Honest and Liberal.

When the Hops in each bottle of Hop Bitters (at the present price, $1.25 per lb.) cost more than a bottle is sold for, besides the other costly medicines, and the quality and price are kept the same, we think it is honest and liberal in the proprietors, and no one should complain, or buy or use worthless stuff, or cheating bogus imitations because the price is low.

—The trial of Daniel Curly, charged with the Phœnix park murders, begins at Dublin to day. It is believed that he, as well as the others accused of the crime, will plead guilty. Few witnesses are to be produced at the trial, who will testify that they saw the accused in the park on the day of the murders.

Beware of Imitations.

Since Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has become celebrated, a number of unprincipled persons have been endeavoring to palm off Electrea and Electric Oil for the genuine DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. Beware of these similar named articles. If these originators had any faith in the healing properties of their own medicines they would, like honest men, give them name of their own, and not try to sell them the reputation of another; but as they know their preparations have no merit, they resort to the most unprincipled means of selling them by getting a name as near as possible to Eclectric. We therefore ask the public when purchasing to see that the name Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is on the front of the wrapper, and the signature of NORTHROP & LYMAN, the proprietors for Canada on the back.

LIVY, THE GREAT CORNET PLAYER, KILLED.

MAHONY CITY, Pa., April 16.—The brake of a hand car on which Prof. Levy, Musician, accompanied by twenty men and women, were returning here from Delano Station, broke here yesterday morning coming down a heavy grade. The car rushed along with terrific speed. When near here many jumped off and were more or less bruised. The car ran a quarter of a mile beyond the station and collided with a horse car, hurling the occupants in all directions. All escaped serious injury except Levy, who was thrown under the wheels and crushed to death. The body was mangled almost beyond recognition.

DESCENT OF A MONSTER METEOR

Human Beings and Cattle Killed.

A METEOR COVERING AN ACRE AND 175 FEET HIGH.

Terrible Effects of its Descent.

FORT WORTH, TEXAS, April 16 —A despatch from Williams Ranch says: At two o'clock yesterday morning a meteor fell at the outskirts of the town, killing several cattle and destroying the dwelling of Mattiaz Garcia, who, with his wife and five children, were buried beneath the ruins. The meteor resembled a massive ball of fire, and the shock of its fall was similar to that of an earthquake. The meteor is still hot and steaming. It is embedded in the earth probably one hundred feet, and towers above the surface seventy five feet and will cover about one acre. The concussion was terrific. Nearly every window in the town was shattered. People were hurled violently from their beds, and goods in storehouses were thrown from the shelves. No lives were lost as far as known, except the Garcia family, although several buildings fell. The cattle fled in every direction. The air was filled with sulphurous gas. The wildest confusion prevailed. This is the largest meteor that has ever fallen, and has already been visited by many people. It occasioned great excitement all over the surrounding country

Spring Assizes.

MONDAY, April 16.

THE ARSON CASE.

When the Court resumed at 1.30 this afternoon, the attendance was large and gradually increased. The interest centered in the trial of Frank Lockerby, against whom the Grand Jury had returned two true bills. The prisoner was brought into court and took a seat in the dock. He was neatly dressed but looked thin and pale.

Owing to the absence of his counsel, his case was put over and the next criminal case called on, the prisoner in the meantime being sent back to the gaol.

BURGLARY.

Thomas White and Frank Johnston were then put in the prisoner's box and a jury sworn. The indictment was then read, charging them with having, on the 14th of April, about 3 a. m., entered the shop of J. W. Campion, feloniously and burglariously.

B. M. Britton, Q. C., appeared for the Crown. The prisoners were undefended.

Mr. Britton, on behalf of the Crown, defined the crime of burglary, which meant the breaking into a place between the hours of 9 at night, and 6 in the morning. He then recited the facts of the case as already detailed in the INTELLIGENCER. The principal point was: "were they the persons who committed the crime?" and that the jury would be able to determine from the evidence. He then called Joseph W. Campion.

The prisoner White said they had no counsel, and he asked that they be allowed a lawyer or to look after their case himself.

His Lordship intimated that they would be allowed to ask any questions that might be proper, and Mr. Britton stated that they could address the jury.

Mr. Campion swore that he was awakened on Saturday morning about 4:30, and on going to his office found that his safe had been blown open. The safe contained the books, papers, and a silver watch, and the combination was alone known to himself and his clerk.

The prisoners declined to ask any questions.

White here asked that the witnesses for the Crown be excluded from the room, which request was granted.

John Vannorman testified that he went to go to work on Saturday morning at about four o'clock at the axe factory; he saw a man enter the office window; he asked who was there and no reply was made; he tried the door but could not get in; two persons undid the catch on the inside of the door, jumped out and ran off down Mill Street. As they were running they passed Mr. Young, who was coming north; witness called to Young to catch them; Fisher came out of the forging shop and joined him and the chase was kept up till the bridge was reached; witness heard a shot and saw the smoke, and thought the one who fired the shot was the smaller of the two; the two persons were followed as far as Dorland's terrace and trace of them was then lost. A return was made to the shop and Fisher and Pettier returned to the chase." One of the persons wore a light coat and the other a dark one.

White asked the witness if he could recognize them as the parties who came out of the office, and the witness said that judging from their height, he would think they were the same persons.

The tools used on the safe—the sledge, screw driver and chair rung—were identified by the witness; also the broken parts of the lock.

In answer to Johnston, witness said he was not prepared to swear positively that they were the two men whom he saw coming out of the office.

BROWN V. "GLOBE" PRINTING CO.—The case of Brown v. the Globe Printing Company, in which Mr. Geordon Brown, ex-manager of the Globe Printing Company, sues that company for $5,000 as damages for illegal dismissal, is not now likely to come before the courts, as the parties have arranged an amicable settlement. The full details have not been decided upon as yet, but they will be made known by the 20th.

VERMILYEA'S SELF-FITTING CORSET.

TO THE LADIES OF BELLEVILLE AND VICINITY.

IN order to correct an erroneous impression abroad relative to the suit pending between ourselves and S. and Elizabeth Guthrie, of St. Catharines, relative to a corset patent, we wish to say that the suit by us against the Guthries does not in any way affect "Vermilyea's self fitting Corset." The question in dispute was whether we had the exclusive right to manufacture the fifth section "Guthrie's Champion Corset" and its improvements. We contended we had the exclusive right. The defendants claimed we had only a right equal with themselves to sell in this section. The Court held that we had not the exclusive right, and as at once took the necessary proceedings for appeal to the full court.

We still have the right, and it is not disputed, to manufacture "Guthrie's Champion Corset" and the improvements thereon in this section. "Vermilyea's Self-Fitting Corset" is not in question, for it is a patent of our own invention, and needs no recommendation as it is so well known to our lady customers all over Ontario. We are now sending our Corsets into New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, and they are also being manufactured in Winnipeg.

We have on hand a full stock of Ladies' Underclothing, all our own manufacture.

Thanking the ladies for patronage in the past we still hope for a continuance of the same.

SUICIDE.

An Unhappy Woman Kills Herself with a Revolver.

Laura Anne Allen, eldest daughter of George Brintnell, about 35 years of age, who was married some years ago to a man named Allen and resided with her father on the west side of the river in the village of Canifton, committed suicide this morning at about 6.30, by shooting herself in the head with a revolver.

The woman and her father arose early this morning for the purpose of coming to the city, and after preparing breakfast and doing the ordinary work about the house, she dressed herself for the journey. Mr. Brintnell had gone to the barn to harness the horse, and during his absence the woman entered the woodhouse in rear of the kitchen, and possessing herself of a revolver which she had probably secreted there, shot herself in the left ear. Three reports from the revolver were heard. She was discovered by her mother lying on her back and left side and was still breathing. The only apparent wound was inflicted in her left ear, and as she lay upon the floor blood oozed from her right auricle. She was insensible when found, and died in about fifteen minutes.

Deceased had been married about 16 years. The marriage was not a happy one, and a separation soon took place, since which time she had resided with her parents. She was spoken of as an industrious woman and was generally well liked. She leaves two children—a boy and a girl—the former of whom lives with her husband in the United States, while the latter remained with her. The woman was in a depressed frame of mind yesterday and was greatly agitated from some cause yet unrevealed.

Dr. Farley, coroner, visited the home of the suicide, but did not deem it necessary to hold an inquest. He says that after the two first shots were fired she was spoken to, and those who addressed her were warned to go away. She was then standing on the cellar steps, and after ascending them fired a third time. She, at one time, had aimed at her heart but had fired too low, though she eventually succeeded in accomplishing what she desired by shooting herself in the head.

A Distinguished Visitor.

Com'r Cheyne, the great Arctic explorer, intends paying a visit to Belleville, and will give two of his grand Arctic and Egyptian onkel-Salamenis here on Wednesday and Thursday, 18th and 19th. In connection with this approaching appearance of Com'r Cheyne, a short account of his life may be interesting. Born in 1826, he passed his early years in the interior of New Brunswick. But inland life was dull and monotonous to the restless boy, and at an early age he ran away to sea. After a few voyages the young "salt" obtained a commission in the navy, and through his good conduct and gallantry in the service, rapidly rose in the estimation of his superiors, finally being promoted to the rank of Commander in 1870, in recognition of his long and faithful service.

But the most eventful portion of the Commander's life has been that passed in the Arctic Regions. The five and a half years which he spent in that "great lone land" were years of careful observation to him. The Polar world had great attractions for the adventurous sailor, and the fruits of his keen observation have been shown, as well by his famous Arctic lectures, as by more especially the celebrated scheme with which his name is inseparably connected, for reaching the North Pole by means of balloons.

Not only are Com'r Cheyne's lectures instructive as giving people correct ideas in reference to comparatively unknown portions of our globe, but they are also highly interesting, and, in some parts, quite exciting. Indeed, the personal adventures and hair-breadth escapes which he graphically recounts might well be deemed sensational, and can only be explained on the principle that "truth is stranger than fiction."

At each entertainment 60 magnificent views are shown. These views (by the best English artists) are thrown on canvas by a very fine oxyhydrogen lime-light lantern, manufactured especially for Com'r Cheyne.

The second Lecture to be delivered here, on "Egypt and the Late War," with views of Egyptian life and scenery, has become even more popular than that on "Sir John Franklin." Both Lectures have been enthusiastically received in many of the cities and towns of Canada, and will no doubt be largely patronized here.

O. Bortle, of Manchester, Ontario Co., N. Y., writes:—"I obtained immediate relief from the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. I have used Asthma for eleven years. Have been obliged to sit up all night for ten or twelve nights in succession. I can now sleep soundly all night on a feather bed, which I had not been able to do previous to using the Oil."

BRADSTREET'S WEEKLY REPORT

NEW YORK, April 13.—Telegraphic despatches to Bradstreet's this week from the leading trade centres, indicate that there has been but little change in the general state of trade. There are signs of improvement, and the general outlook is favorable, but there is some uneasiness owing to the various disturbances and prospective troubles in industrial lines, notably the iron mills of the west. There is no improvement in the iron market. Petroleum is lower, owing to the announcement of a 40 barrel well; the situation generally, however, is bullish. Ocean freights on oil are higher, on grain and provisions nominal. There were 153 failures in the United States reported to Bradstreet's during the week, 37 less than last week, and 42 more than in the like week in 1882. Canada and the Provinces had 25, one more than last weeks.

NEW YORK RIVERS, HARBORS AND CANALS.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—Up to 30th June last, the Government has expended nearly $9,500,000 for the improvement of rivers and harbors in the State of New York. From 1817 to 1866 the State itself expended nearly $95,000,000 on its canals of Government money. Nearly $5,500,000 was required to furnish the harbors for the inter-State and international commerce which feeds the canal system of the State, $1,000,000 to improve the Hudson River, and $3,000,000 to improve New York harbor.

Riches in Hop Farming.

At the present prices, ten acres in Hops will bring more money than five hundred acres in any other farming; and, if there is a consumer or dealer who thinks the price of Hop Bitters high, remember Hops are $1.25 per lb., and the quantity and quality of Hops in Hop Bitters and the price remains the same as formerly. Don't buy or use worthless stuff or imitations because the price is less.

The Bad and Worthless

are never imitated or counterfeited. This is especially true of a family medicine, and it is a positive proof that the remedy imitated is of the highest value. As soon as it had been tested and proved by the whole world that Hop Bitters was the purest, best and most valuable family medicine on earth, many imitations sprung up and began to steal the notices in which the press and people of the country had expressed the merits of H. B., and in every way trying to induce suffering invalids to use their stuff instead, expecting to make money on the credit and good name of H. B. Many others started nostrums put up in similar style to H. B., with variously devised names in which the word "Hop" or "Hops" was used in a way to induce people to believe they were the same as Hop Bitters. All such pretended remedies or cures, no matter what their style or name is, and especially those with the word "Hop" or "Hops" in their name, or in any way connected with them or their name, are imitations or counterfeits. Beware of them. Touch none of them. Use nothing but genuine Hop Bitters, with a bunch or cluster of green Hops on the white label. Trust nothing else. Druggists and dealers are warned against dealing in imitations or counterfeits.

One of Earth's Angels.

"Yes, Captain, Doctor Frank said, 'she is your son's wife—his innocent and deeply injured wife. The man Crosby, in what he believed to be his dying hour, solemnly testified, in the presence of a clergyman, to her unimpeachable purity and fidelity. It was the evil work of that villain Furniss, from first to last. I have the written letter of Crosby in my pocket at this moment. He is alive and well, and married to the lady of whom he was speaking when your son shot him. I earnestly hope you will receive this poor child, and unite her to her husband, for I am as firmly convinced of her innocence as I am of my own existence at this moment.

"Receive her!" Captain Danton cried, with the water in his eyes. "That I will, with all my heart. Poor, little girl—poor child," he said, going over and taking the weeping wife into his arms. "What a trial you have undergone! But it is over now, I trust. Thank Heaven my son is no murderer, and under Heaven, thanks to you, Doctor Danton. Don't cry, Agnes—don't cry; I can hardly rejoiced to find I have another daughter."

"Oh, take me to Harry!" Agnes pleaded. "Let me tell him I am innocent! Let me hear him say he forgives me!"

"Upon my word, I think the forgiveness should come from the other side," said the Captain. "He was always a hot-headed, foolish boy, but he has received a lesson, I think, he will never forget. How say you, Doctor, may this foolish little girl go to that foolish boy?"

"I think not yet," the Doctor replied. "In his present weak state the shock would be too much for him. He must be prepared first. How is he this evening?"

"Much better, not at all delirious."

"I will go and have a look at him," said Doctor Frank, rising. "Don't look so imploringly, Agnes—you shall see him before long. Miss Danton, have the goodness to accompany me. If we find him much better, I will let you break the news to him and then fetch Agnes. But mind, madame, rising a warning finger to the sobbing little woman, 'no hysterics! I can't have my patient agitated. You promise to be very quiet, don't you?"

"Oh, yes! I'll try."

"Very good. Now, Miss Danton."

He ran up the stairs, followed by Kate. The sick man, lay as he had left him, quietly looking at the shaded lamp, very feeble—very, very feeble and wasted. The Doctor sat down beside him, felt his pulse, and asked him a few questions, to which the faint replies were lucid and intelligible.

"No fever to-night. No delirium. You're fifty per cent. better. We will have you all right now in no time. Kate has brought an infallible remedy.

"The sick man looked at his sister wonderingly.

"Can you bear the shock of some very good news, Harry darling?" Kate said, stooping over him.

"Good news!" he repeated feebly, and with an incredulous look. "Good news for me!"

"Yes, indeed, thou man of little faith! The best news you ever heard. You won't estate yourself, will you, if I tell you?"

Doctor Frank arose before he could reply.

"I leave you to tell him by yourself. I hear the dinner bell; so adieu."

He descended to the dining room and took his place at the table. Captain Danton's new found daughter he compelled to take Frank Rose's vacant place; but Agnes did not even make a pretence of eating anything. She sat with her hands clasped tightly in her lap, her eyes fixed steadily on the door, trying with all her might to be calm and wait.

The appetite of the whole family was considerably impaired by the revelation just made, and all waited anxiously the return of Kate. In half an hour the dining-room door opened, and that young lady appeared, very pale, and with traces of tears on her face, but smiling withal.

Agnes sprang up breathlessly.

"Come, Kate said, holding out her hand; 'he is waiting for you!'

With a cry of joy Agnes hurried out of the room and upstairs.

At the green baize door Kate restrained her a moment.

"You must be very quiet, Agnes—very calm, and not excite or agitate him."

"Oh, yes! yes! Oh, let me go!"

Miss Danton opened the door and let her. In a moment she was kneeling by the bedside, her arms around his weak head, showering kisses and tears on his pale, thin face.

"Forgive me!" she said. "Forgive me, my own, my lost husband. Oh, never think I was false. I never was, in thought or act, for one moment. Say you forgive me, my darling, and love me still."

Of course, Kate did not longer. When she again entered the dining-room, she found one of those she had left, gone.

"Where is Doctor Frank?" she asked.

"Gone, Grace said. "A messenger came for him—some one sick in the village. Do take your dinner. I am sure you must want it."

"How good he is," Kate thought. "How energetic and self-sacrificing. If I were a man, I should like to be such a man as he."

After this night of good news, Harry Danton's recovery was almost miraculously rapid. The fever left him, and he awakened every energy, every hope, was gone. He was a new man; he had something to live for; a place in the world, and a lost character to retrieve. A week after that eventful night, he was able to sit up; a fortnight and he was rapidly gaining vigor and strength, and health for his new life.

Agnes, that most devoted little wife, had hardly left those three mysterious rooms since she had first entered them. She was the best, the most untiring, the most tender of nurses, and won her way to the hearts of all. She was so gentle, so patient, so humble, it was impossible not to love her; and Captain Danton sometimes wondered if he had ever loved his lost, frivolous Rose as he loved his new daughter.

It had been agreed upon that, to avoid gossip and inquiry, Harry was not to show himself in the house, to the servants, but as soon as he fully recovered, to leave for Quebec, with his wife, and take command of a vessel there.

His father had written to the ship-owners could friends of his—and had cheerfully received their promise.

The vessel was to sail for Plymouth early in March and it was now late in February.

Of course, Agnes was to go with him. Nothing could have separated these reunited married lovers now.

The days went by, the preparations for the journey progressed, the eve of departure came. The Danton family, with the Doctor and Father Frank, were assembled in the drawing room, spending that last evening together. It was the first time, since his return to the Hall, Harry had been there. How little any of them dreamed it was to be the last!

They were not very merry, as they sat listening to Kate's music. Down in that dim recess where the piano stood, she sat, singing for the first time the old songs that Reginald Stanford had loved. She was almost surprised at herself to find how easily she could sing them, how little emotion the memories they brought awoke. Was the old love forever dead, then? And this new content at her heart—what did it mean? She hardly cared to ask. She could not have answered; she only knew she was happy, and that the past had lost power to give her pain.

DR. E. U West's Nerve and Brain Treat ment is a specific for Hysteria, Dizziness Neuralgia, Nervous Headache, Overworked

RACKED BY INNUMERABLE PANGS, restless by day, sleepless at night, rising unrefreshed in the morning, without appetite and pestered by varying and perplexing symptoms, the dyspeptic takes indeed a gloomy view of human existence. For him the zest of life seems gone. Heartburn, oppression at the pit of the stomach, and other afflictions and annoyances of constipation and biliousness, combine to render him utterly wretched. But there is, if he will but take advantage of it, a reliable source of reliable relief from all misery. NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY and DYSPEPTIC CURE is, as its name imports, a botanic preparation, free from mineral, poison, and an all-sufficient remedy for indigestion in its most obstinate form. It not only purifies the blood by enabling the digestive organs to convert the food received into nutriment, but depurates it by increasing the healthy secretions of the bowels and kidneys, the natural outlets for its impurities. But while it relaxes the bowels, it never does so violently and with pain, like a drastic cathartic. It aids, but never forces. Nature, invigorating as well as purifying and regulating the system. It thoroughly removes those diseased humors which lead to vitiate the blood, purifies the urinary secretion, and promotes a flow of healthy bile into the natural channel, besides expelling it from the circulation. Experience has proved that this standard medicine is a thorough remedy for dyspepsia, biliousness, jaundice, kidney complaints, scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, lumbago and all impurities of the blood. Price $1.00. Sample bottle 10 cents. Ask for NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac-simile of their signature. Sold by all medicine dealers

A NOTED BUT UNTITLED WOMAN.

[From the Boston Globe.]

Messrs. Editors—

Above is a good likeness of Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., who although the human beings may be truthfully called the "Great Friend of Woman," as one of her correspondents has well said, she is zealously devoted to her work, which is the outcome of a lifetime, and is obliged to keep six lady assistants, to help her answer the large correspondence which daily pours in upon her, each bearing its special burden of suffering, for Advice and Relief from Her Vegetable Compound as a medicine for good and not evil purposes. I have personally investigated it and am satisfied of its truth and merit.

On account of its proven merits, it is recommended and prescribed by the best physicians in the country. One says: "It works like a charm and saves much pain. It will cure entirely the worst form of falling of the uterus, leucorrhœa, in its worst and painful stage, all Ovarian Troubles, Inflammation and Ulceration, Floodings, all displacements and the consequent spinal weakness, and is especially adapted to the Change of Life."

It permeates every portion of the system, and gives new life and vigor. It removes faintness, flatulency, destroys all craving for stimulants and relieves weakness of the stomach. It cures Bloating, Headaches, Nervous Prostration, General Debility, Sleeplessness, Depression and Indigestion. That feeling of bearing down, causing pain, weight and backache is always permanently cured by its use. It will at all times, and under all circumstances, act in harmony with the law that governs the female system.

It costs only $1. Or, six bottles for $5., and is sold by druggists. Any advice required as to special cases, and the names of many who have been restored to perfect health by the use of the Vegetable Compound, can be obtained by addressing Mrs. E. Pinkham as above. Please say you saw this in this paper.

For Kidney Complaints of either sex this compound is unsurpassed as also for that Backache. It is the "Pink of Perfection" for Nervous Prostration, General Debility, Sleeplessness, Depression and Indigestion. That feeling of bearing down, causing pain, weight and backache is always permanently cured by its use. It will at all times, and under all circumstances, act in harmony with the law that governs the female system.

All send remedies are an Aqueous Extract whose sole ambition is to degrade to others.

Daily Intelligencer.

Winter in Manitoba.

To the Editor of the Intelligencer.

MR. EDITOR.—Now that the elections are past and the excitement over, perhaps a few words from the North West may be acceptable to your many readers. Old winter still holds his sway in these parts and the sleighing is magnificent; but a good many would like to see the snow taking its departure. But after all, the days of spring is not an unmixed evil, as there is much teaming to be done and every one is taking advantage of the situation to the utmost. In addition to that, immigrants are now pouring into this country and the fine sleighing is much better to travel over the prairie than even water or mud. Yet the snow is gone from Turtle Mountain and parties often go from this way double rigged, viz., a pair of bob-sleighs first, on that a waggon box, in that the load, and across the box the axeltrees and wheels of the waggon, so when they come to bare ground they just take down the wheels, put up the box, and away they go as happy as you please. Yet if reports in the papers are even half true we have not a monopoly of bad weather in this country. Often we get letters wondering how we live up here at all, as the weather is almost too cold to live in, and I think our weather is not so much worse than there, nay indeed, many believe it is much better. Yet, the thermometer occasionally registers 40 degrees below zero; but, all reports to the contrary, the spirit thermometer has only touched 40 once this winter in this place, and that only for a few hours. But in spite of cold, building has steadily progressed during the winter. I have known men working out doors at carpenter work when the thermometer indicated 25 below zero. Could that be done in Ontario?

Many of our people had fallen into the habit of grumbling at the country (a habit by the way one of the worst and most disagreeable any man could fall into) and say that it was too cold for a white man to live in; so this winter a good many went and spent a portion of the season in Ontario, but they have all, or almost mostly thoroughly satisfied. Some who had hardly a good word for Manitoba before, have nothing but words of praise now. Every such is the effect of visiting Ontario during the winter after two or three years of residence here, that I should like to see every grumbler take the trip. This is perhaps rough on Ontario, and for one I would not say one ill word of it; it was my native place, and I do not think I can have any one else running it down, but there is something about this country which makes people, after experience, feel that it is really one of the best countries in the world. It may be cold, sometimes very cold, but it is better to have a steady dry cold than sharp cold followed by moist, damp cold which suddenly turns to catch cold and again threaten to freeze your very marrow bones. This last mentioned kind of cold I felt once this winter, and for the first time in an experience of six years, if my memory serves me right.

But people manage to exist and enjoy life here, through all the cold. There has been a literary society formed at Crystal City this winter, which was turned into a mock Parliament, in which all kinds of bogus as a bogus affair altogether. These Bills were warmly and fully discussed in a full house, and in the presence of a large number of the citizens. Apart from the astonishing debating talent developed, there was a wonderful unanimity of sentiment in favor of the Bills, which were carried almost unanimously amid great enthusiasm. If the debate and the way it was received are any indication of the real sentiment of the community, such a law would receive an overwhelming majority in its favor here. There is a good deal of liquor sold in this country, and if report says sooth it is by no means of a good quality; in fact I have been told by some parties who have had enough of experience to know at least whereof they affirm, that it is the most villainous stuff they ever tasted; and from my own observation I am disposed to believe any statement of the kind. I know this, when any man undertakes to consume a quantity of Manitoba liquor or whatever kind sold by the glass, and sticks steadily to business, a very few days makes him fit for the hospital or his allowance of sod, six feet by two.

Some people say Manitoba water is bad, and in truth some of it is not good, but for six years I have never seen a healthy death part as much evil effects from Manitoba water as Manitoba whiskey. I never can understand, how any one can possibly think he is going to improve his health by abandoning water and taking to whiskey, or even mixing his water with whiskey. Experience, science and immorality are all against both the theory and the practice.

Money is not nearly so plentiful here this year as last. The land boom is past and farmers have not a market near enough or valuable enough to make money plentiful. However, when we get a railway through here, things will be better.

Some of the old settled parts here seem to be unsettled now, as many have sold out and got their patents, sold out and gone west for a second homestead entry.

There is also a very fine parsonage at Crystal City for the Methodist Church. It is balloon frame, doubled wall, papered, lath and plastered, and when painted and all together it will be one of the most comfortable houses in Manitoba; cost, about $800.

Our County Council is making some fine permanent improvements. A very fine pile bridge is being built over the creek here at a cost of $1,600, another, a pile bridge, over the Cypress, at Oscar Weber, a pier bridge over the Pembina at the Mary Jane pass, and improving the bridge over the Pembina at the crossing.

Immigrants now have a better time than the first who came in.

But but I weary your readers I will close and tell you more another time.

The Apiary in April and May.

From the losses last winter, many will wish to buy bees, and transfer them into their empty hives. First turn the old hive bottom up, after smoking the bees sufficient to quiet them. This work should be done at noon on a warm day when the bees are active. Place above the hive a box, and so wrap the line of junction with a sheet that no bee can escape. Rap on the hive with a hammer and wait fifteen minutes. The bees in this time will fill with honey and cluster in the box above the hive. Set the new hive filled either with frames of comb, or wired "foundation" on the old stand, where the box-hive stood, and shake the bees in front of it. They will quickly enter and take possession. The box-hive is set aside for three or four weeks, when all the brood will have hatched out. The bees may now be drummed out as before and added to the others. Unless the bees can gather food, the bees in the new hive must be given combs containing honey or fed, until there is opportunity for them to gather sufficient stores for their needs. If it should turn cold the old box-hive must be put into a warm room, else the brood will become chilled, and fail to hatch. If it is warm, and there are no flowers from which the bees can gather, the old box-hive must be closed, or robbers may enter and carry off honey.

After all the bees are removed the second time from the old hive, it is knocked to pieces, the combs cut out, melted into wax, and sold or worked up into "foundation."

In case a queen has been reared in the box hive, where the brood has been hatching, by the young bees, she may be killed, if seen, or left to the old queen, who will destroy her.

How Best to Preserve Eggs.

Farmers who have large numbers of eggs to preserve, store keepers, who take eggs "in trade," and all others who handle large quantities of eggs, depend upon lime water as a preservative. Casks of various kinds are used to hold the eggs, and some country store keepers have so many that they require large brick cisterns placed in the cellar, that are cemented, and filled to the brim with the solution.

While some immerse the eggs in simple lime water, others hold that the addition of a small quantity of salt increases its preservative qualities. Those who have had an extended experience, advise slaking a bushel of stone lime and adding water to make 60 to 65 gallons, and four quarts of salt. This mixture is stirred a few times at intervals and allowed to settle. The perfectly clear liquid is dipped off and poured in a cask to the depth of 18 inches; then eggs to about a foot in depth are placed in the liquid, and some of the pickle that is a little milky added. More eggs are placed in the cask, and some slightly milky pickle is added for each foot in depth. When the eggs are within about four inches of the top of the cask, they are covered with a piece of cotton cloth and upon the cloth is spread two or three inches of the lime that settled after the slacking. It is important that there be always sufficient pickle to cover the lime on the cloth. The object of placing more eggs in the lime that has settled, is to keep the water constantly saturated with it. Should some of the dissolved lime be changed into carbonate, more is at hand to be dissolved.—American Agriculturist for May.

CUT THIS OUT.

"Frank P. Warner came into our store to purchase a sample bottle of ZOPESSA for a friend, and stated that he (Mr. Warner) was afflicted with Kidney and Liver troubles for five years, and had paid $200 or $300 doctor's bills, and has now been completely cured by the use of two large bottles and one sample bottle of ZOPESSA. He was so bad at one time that he lost 37 pounds of flesh, but after using ZOPESSA claims that he has gained that flesh, and now weighs 145 pounds. He was bed in its praise, and readily consented to allow us to use his name for reference."

Daily Intelligencer.

BELLEVILLE, TUESDAY, APRIL 17.

Strange Logic from the Globe.

The following forms part of the Globe's editorial comments on the Dominion Franchise bill:

It will be noticed that the conferring of the franchise upon unmarried women is the only Liberal feature in the bill. As to that feature it is, we are pleased to say, a truly Liberal measure, but we shall be very much surprised if the majority of the present House do not take the first opportunity of eliminating a proposition which seems sadly out of place amid its surroundings.

The organ's logic seems to us to be very lame. If the conferring of the franchise upon unmarried women be a good thing, and the only good feature in the measure at that, why throw it out? The organ's counsel to that effect is understandable only on the ground that it fears the great majority of the ladies favor the Conservatives. We can well believe that such is the case, as the Globe has alleged that the women are more intelligent than the men.

This attempt of the Grit organ to prevent the enfranchisement of the most intelligent and most moral class in the community, will not tend towards making Grit doctrines more acceptable to the women of Canada than they have been hitherto. The hypocrisy of the Grit organ in the premises is disgusting, but characteristic.

Editorial Brevities.

The Mowat Government continue to make places for their friends. W. H. Higgins, formerly of the Whitby Chronicle —a man who has turned his political coat several times—became financially involved and had to sell his paper; but as he had of late been on the Grit side, he has been provided for with an emigration agency. Next on the list is the notorious D.D. Hay, (General-in-Chief of the Corkscrew Brigade) who, having been defeated in North Perth, "goes] shortly to England," the Globe informs us "as a special emigration commissioner representing the interests of Ontario at the great agricultural exhibitions of Great Britain, and otherwise. A special effort will be made during his visit to encourage the emigration of tenant farmers to Ontario." These appointments are scandalously bad. Emigration agents ought to be men of standing—but Higgins and Hay!

"A set o' dull conceited hashes
Confuse their brains in College classes,
They gang in stirks and come out asses,
Plain truth to speak,
And syne they think to climb Parnassus
By dint o' Greek."

Burns must have foreseen the advent of the Trenton Courier man when he penned the above lines. To fully appreciate their prophetic truth it is only necessary to read the lecture on grammar in the Courier of the 12th inst. What may be the extent of the classical and other intellectual attainments of the editor of that sheet we have no means of judging; but it is clear that the English language still remains a "sealed book" to him.

The fellow in question, who mistakes verbal dynamite for argument, alleges that the INTELLIGENCER has been discourteous to him. It would be the height of nonsense to waste courteousy on one who is as polite as the old male in "Tristram Shandy," and as truthful as Titus Oates or Tom Pepper.

The Mail is proud, and justly so, of its Saturday's issue, which was made up of sixteen pages of seven columns each, and contained 1,247 separate and distinct advertisements, which filled 55¼ columns of the paper. No Canadian newspaper had ever before published so many advertisements in a single issue. The Mail has earned this success. It is in all respects the best newspaper in Canada, and its circulation and influence are constantly increasing.

Says the London Advertiser:

Our esteemed contemporary the Ottawa Citizen has at last mustered up sufficient courage to refer to the Tupper-Macdonnell correspondence. It pronounces it stolen and forged. With all respect, we submit that the denial is too numerous. If the letters were stolen they were not forged; if they were forged they were not stolen.

Why could not the Tiser speak the truth in this instance? What the Citizen said was that one of the letters was forged, namely that which, although unsigned, was attributed to Sir Charles Tupper, and that the others were stolen. The degradation which some Grit journalists willingly submit to, in order to create even a temporary impression against an opponent, is revolting to every man possessed of an atom of honor. The humiliation of those men who defend thieves and forgers and misrepresent those who set forth the truth is not yet, however, complete, but the hour of their discomfiture is near at hand.

Belleville is not a good place for robbers and humbugs. The scoundrel Slade, after practicing his tricks successfully in every other place except London, England, was shown up in Belleville and driven ignominously out of town, and the two safe robbers who tried their skill in the office of the axe factory came to Belleville, after having successfully operated elsewhere, only to find themselves overtaken by justice here. Their conviction and sentencing within thirty seven hours of the commission of their offence (Sunday omitted as a dies non) is a powerful warning to others of the same trade to give Belleville a wide berth, and is very satisfactory to the residents of the city.

Answer This.

Can you find a case of Bright's Disease of the Kidneys, Diabetes, Urinary or Liver Complaints that is curable, that Hop Bitters has not or cannot cure? Ask your neighbors if they can.

Spring Assizes

Robert Fisher, after being sworn, corroborated a portion of the preceding witness' testimony in which reference was made to him, and thought the prisoners were the men who came out of the office; Peltier, Carscallen and witness continued the pursuit along the Madoc road, and when on the College Hill the two men were discerned about a half mile ahead. When they saw they were pursued they ran into Bleecker's woods, through which they were tracked. Witness got as near them as 25 feet, and as it was daylight then he could identify them. The after part of the chase was then described and their subsequent capture in the church. Witness said these were the persons he saw come out of the factory.

In answer to Johnston, witness said that it was breaking day when he saw two persons come out of the office; he saw the faces of the prisoners as they came out and could recognize them. Witness was quite sure the shorter man was one of the persons and his companion was the other.

Johnston—"You're swearing to a lie. Your Worship"—addressing the Judge—"we have no counsel."

His Lordship reminded him that the witnesses could be cross-examined.

Witness added that the smallest of the two men had on a lighter coat than the one now worn.

Johnston asked the witness some further questions and concluded by remarking, "I think you're exaggerating, young man."

Charles De Young identified the taller prisoner Johnston, as the first one who ran past him as he was going to work, and as the one who fired the shot as the other passed him.

William Carscallon also described the pursuit and capture of the accused, whom he recognized as the parties that he had chased.

James Pelkey gave similar testimony.

John A. M. Gilbert identified the prisoners as two men whom he saw passing his place on the morning of Saturday, running, with three in pursuit.

Officer Newton described the capture of the prisoners in the church steeple.

Prof. Chalaupka testified to the finding of a coat on his premises on Saturday morning, and in the pockets were a fuse and some other things. The coat which was produced he gave to the police.

Richard Potter described the condition of the office and safe after the burglary.

William J. Baker identified the sledge and screw driver used by the burglars and deposed that his shop had been broken into in order to get them.

William Curtis illustrated to the jury how the burglars accomplished their work.

Johnston called the Chief of Police as a witness. He testified that Johnston had asked on what charge he was held and he answered "rape." Johnston had said that he was running away from the men who followed, as he and his companion had slept in a barn the night before.

Johnston addressed the jury. He then gave a statement to the effect that he and his partner had slept in a barn on Friday night and the next morning they were chased by two men and eventually went to the church. He asserted that the coat produced was not as big as those they had on. (White here fitted on the coat, which was too small when put over his inside coat). They had no counsel and he hoped the jury would not be the means of punishing them for a crime of which they were innocent.

In answer to a juryman, Johnston said the barn in which they had stayed on Friday night was near where they were chased.

His Lordship then addressed the jury, after which they retired, and in ten minutes returned with a verdict of guilty.

"Gentlemen," said Johnston, "you are sending two innocent men to prison."

Mr. Britton moved that the sentence of the Court be pronounced on the prisoners.

His Lordship asked what they had to say?

Johnston again protested his innocence, while White remained silent.

His Lordship remarked that the jury had brought in a verdict which was in accordance with the evidence. Addressing the prisoner Johnston, he said that he appeared to be a man of intelligence, and had he applied himself in a proper way and shown otherwise the skill he had exercised in the commission of this offence, he might have been able to secure a competency instead of preying upon his neighbors. Between this and the time you are both at liberty (the Judge continued), you may be able to wipe off the disgrace that now hangs over you. Punishment is for the purpose of preventing crime and is a protection to society; and he hoped, in conclusion, that these would have a salutary effect. He then sentenced each to confinement in the Penitentiary at Kingston for seven years.

TUESDAY, April 17.

The Court opened promptly at nine o'clock. The prisoners Thomas White and Frank Johnston, convicted yesterday of burglarizing Campion's office, and Frank Lockerty, were placed in the dock.

White and Johnston were arraigned charged with burglariously entering the shop of William J. Baker. They withdrew their former pleas of Not Guilty and pleaded guilty.

The Judge gave them the same sentence as in the former case, the sentences to run concurrently.

THE ARSON CASE.

The case of Frank Lockerty was then proceeded with.

Mr. Dickson, counsel for the accused, offered to put in a demurrer to the second count of the indictments charging the prisoner with a separate and distinct offence. The Court ruled this could not be done, as the accused had pleaded to the indictment.

A jury was then called as follows:—Cornelius Badgley, Stewart Casey, Peter D. Aikon, Hiram Ashley, John Flemming, William Bates, Thomas Coulter, Henry E. Faulkner, Lewis Grills, John Chrisdett, James Cronk and James V. Brintnell.

At the instance of the Crown seven of the panel (all residents of the city) stood aside and four were challenged by the defence.

B. M. Britton, Q. C., acted in behalf of the Crown, and G. D. Dickson, Q. C. and W. N. Ponton represented the prisoner.

The indictment was then read, charging the prisoner with setting fire to the premises of Louis and Edward Shultz on the 10th of January last, with intent to injure.

The Crown Counsel opened the case by explaining the law regarding the alleged offence and then recited the facts in connection with the case. The premises of E. & L. Shultz were set on fire on the evening of the above named day. Edward Shultz and his brother William were lying in bed in a rear room of their shop, which is on the west side of Front Street, and adjoining that of the prisoner's father, when the former's attention was directed to a light in the rear door of the building, a match having been applied to some batting and rags which were used to fill some openings between some boards that had been nailed over a pane of glass. Edward Shultz gave the alarm and soon after heard the prisoner's sister use such expressions as induced him to be believe that the accused had commit ed the act. The fire was put out without doing any damage. Subsequently, the prisoner was arrested for the offence, and was ultimately committed for trial by the Police Magistrate, since which time he has been in prison.

The first witness called was Edward Shultz, whose evidence was similar to that given at the Police Court, as was also that of William Shultz, his brother, Chief McKinnon, Richard Bradford and officer Downs.

John Marsh sworn—I am the turnkey of the gaol; know the prisoner, who has been in gaol since the 16th of January; he has not had communication with people outside; he receives food from home, it is brought in a pail and closed; I examine the dishes as they come in; in nearly every case a note goes out to his people regarding his health; on two occasions I intercepted notes written by the prisoner. (Two notes were shown the witness which he recognized.) I would know the prisoner's handwriting, I think the writing on these notes is his; (in one note he asked Chinney Brown to buy him some fine saws and throw them over the fence around the gaol and he could get them. He thought he could thus easily get out.) When the note was first given me the paper appeared plain without writing. I held the paper on the stove and the writing then appeared. The writing was done with milk. (The other note was to Chinney Brown asking to let him (the prisoner) know how things were outside. He expressed anxiety about the saws and also asked that a rope ladder be thrown over the gaol wall about six o'clock.) Other notes passed but I considered them unimportant and tore some of them up.

Cross examined.—I never saw Lockerty's writing; the notes usually sent by him were written in ink; I found the notes in the bar loaf as it went back; a prisoner told me about milk writing, about the time Frank came to the gaol; there was another party named Smith in gaol while Frank was in; Smith was liberated after being in about a month; I don't know if there is a record of when he went out; Smith was in when those notes were sent out. (The notes were dated March 24th and 26th.)

The Crown here rested their case, and the defence called James W. Cronkrite, who testified as follows: I am a night watchman, and am paid by private subscription; I was employed from Dec'r 4th to March 3rd; I went to Shultz's with my subscription paper; he said "Go around and see who you can get, and when you come back we'll put our name to it." I got 36 names; I again went to Shultz's, and was going to see the old gentleman Shultz, when I was stopped by the young man, who said "I won't give a cent"; he said "I'm insured, and am going to do my own watching." He said "if it burns, let it burn; I'll get my pay; I'll tell you," he said, "I don't want you to come around my back door, for the first man I catch there I'll shoot." He further said "I'll tell you in time to keep away, you'll get shot." I never told Shultz that I suspected Frank Lockerty of the Retallack fire; I was coming over where Coyle's stable is now, and I saw a person in his shirt sleeves who ran up the gangway; the person was running towards Shultz's place more than Lockerty's. After the fire I went into Shultz's store, and was shown the sash which was said to have been set on fire; it was then merely brown.

Cross examined—I think the burned mark on the sash produced has been put on since I saw it first.

Wm. J. Baker, sworn.—I heard of the fire spoken of on the night it occurred; I examined the place from the outside on the next day; I could not see any signs of fire there; if the batting was fired it would discolor white paint.

The cross examination did not reveal anything.

Miles E. Rankins gave evidence somewhat similar to that of Baker.

Solomon Vermilyea had examined the outside of Shultz's premises for indications of the fire having been set on the outside, but could not find any; his opinion at that time was that the fire had not been set from the outside; Lockerty's house was well furnished, and Shultz's place could not be burned unless Lockerty's was; the boy's reputation is good.

Susannah Tiernay sworn—I remember the night of the fire; I was in the front part of the house that night in the parlor; Mrs. Lockerty was in that room and Annie was setting the table down stairs; Mary was in bed; Frank had been attending Commercial College that night; he came home about half past nine that night; Annie let him in; he came in by the front entrance; Frank came into the parlor, sat down and read; Annie went to the kitchen; Frank went to the sideboard in the hall to get a drink of water; this was in the hall off the kitchen near Shultz's; I saw Frank getting the drink; Frank went out for a moment through the back door and Annie told him to come in and bolt the door; he came in and went upstairs to bed; Frank passed me going to his room; Annie said she had heard loud talking in Schultz's; she came up about 15 minutes after Frank; had there been any loud talk between Frank and Annie I would have heard it; she said after she came to her room she heard some one cry "fire;" she went to her brother's room and told him and he went down stairs and out on the street; in conversation with William Shultz he stated that he did not care for fires, as he was well insured; Annie thinks the world of Frank and he is very kind to his mother.

C. F. Smith gave the prisoner a good character.

Annie Lockerty sworn—I am a sister of Frank's and do a good deal of the housework; I remember the night of the fire, the 10th of January, Frank was arrested on the following Monday; on the night of the fire Frank came in at 9.15; I left Frank in that night; he went in the front room and I went to the kitchen; Frank came down stairs and got a drink and went outside a moment and I asked Frank to come in; he did and bolted the door and went right on upstairs; it was not unusual for Frank to go out of the back door before retiring; I went upstairs and as I was doing so I heard the cry of "fire" once in Shultz's; I do not remember having any conversation but that alluded to with Frank; I did not say anything of the kind imputed to me by Shultz; when I went upstairs I went to my room and told my aunt and Frank that I had heard a noise like fire; Frank went down stairs; he was not out more than five or ten minutes when I let him in again.

Cross examined—Frank did not go towards Shultz's when he went out that night; I wrote to Frank in the gaol.

L. W. Yeomans sworn—I have known Mr. Lockerty and his family well; Frank bears a very good reputation indeed.

Thomas Lockerty sworn—The handwriting in the letters shown is not Frank's; my impression is that the fire was not set from the outside; I had a very heavy stock at the time of the fire.

George Wickett gave evidence to the effect that he went home from the Commercial College as far as the entrance to the footbridge with the prisoner on the night of the fire, and left him about 9:15.

This concluded the evidence, and Mr. Dickson was addressing the jury for the defendant when our report closed.

Beware of Imitations.

Since Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has become celebrated, a number of unprincipled persons have been endeavoring to palm off Electron and Electric Oil for the genuine DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. Beware of these similar named articles. If their originators had any faith in the healing properties of their own medicines they would, like honest men, give them name of their own, and not try to sell them the reputation of another; but as they know their preparations have no merit, they resort to the most unprincipled means of selling them by getting a name as near as possible to Eclectric. We therefore ask the public when purchasing to see that the name DR. THOMAS' Eclectric Oil is on the front of the wrapper, and the signature of NORTHROP & LYMAN, the proprietors for Canada on the back.

VERMILYEA'S

SELF-FITTING CORSET.

PATENTED 1ST MARCH, 1881. IMPROVED 9TH JUNE, 1882.

TO THE LADIES OF BELLEVILLE AND VICINITY:

IN order to correct an erroneous impression abroad relative to the suit pending between ourselves and J. S. and Elizabeth Guthrie, of St. Catharines, relative to a corset patent, we wish to say that the suit by us against the Guthries does not in any way affect "Vermilyea's self fitting Corset." The question in dispute was whether we had the EXCLUSIVE right to manufacture in this section "Guthrie's Champion Corset" and its improvements. We contended we had the exclusive right. The defendants claimed we had only a right equal with themselves to sell in this section. The Court held that we had not the exclusive right, and we at once took the necessary proceedings for appeal to the full court.

We still have the right, and it is not disputed, to manufacture "Guthrie's Champion Corset" and the improvements thereon in this section. "Vermilyea's Self-Fitting Corset" is not in question, for it is a patent of our own invention, and needs no recommendation as it is so well known to our lady customers all over Ontario. We are now sending our Corsets into New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, and they are also being manufactured in Winnipeg.

We have on hand a full stock of Ladies' Underclothing, all our own manufacture.

Thanking the ladies for past patronage in the past we still hope for a continuance of the same.

AS an instance of the rapid transit of justice, it may be said that White and Johnson were arrested on Saturday morning, tried yesterday afternoon and were sent to Kingston at noon to day.

WE were glad to notice the arrival of the Rev. G. Gardner, after a visit to New York, the Rev. gentleman is looking better for his trip, and is heartily welcomed by his parishioners. He preached an extemporary sermon on Sunday evening, giving a description of some of the scenes and churches of New York.

THE task of driving on the tributaries of the Trent River was begun yesterday morning by a force of men in the employ of Alex Carscallen, of Marmora, work was begun on Beaver Creek. The rivers in that section have opened well, and the prospect of getting the logs down early is at present quite promising.

MR. SHAKESPEARE, M.P., paid a visit to the Ontario Business College on Saturday afternoon, and was not only delighted with the thoroughness of the course of instruction, but astonished at the magnitude of the attendance and the distances from which students come to avail themselves of its advantages. Victoria, he says, is ahead of Belleville in streets and sidewalks, but our public institutions, (especially the Deaf and Dumb Institute, the Commercial College, and Albert College) and public buildings, are far ahead of those of the capital of the Pacific Province.

SHORTLY after two o'clock this morning, fire was discovered in the shop of Dr. Deane, in Trenton. The alarm was soon given and the flames were quickly subdued, but not before the adjoining store—a milliner's shop—was injured. The principal damage was caused by water. The fire began in a partition and its origin is not known.

THE lecture delivered by Commander Cheyne in Peterborough on Friday evening is noticed by the Review in the following commendatory terms :—"Very clear and carefully prepared maps enabled the audience to follow intelligently the various explorations, and beautiful views, portraits and other illustrations brought vividly before the eyes the thrilling tale of brave adventures and hair breadth escapes, as graphically narrated by an eye witness. He was enthusiastically applauded when he expressed the hope that he would, by means of his projected use of balloons, yet plant the British flag at the North Pole."

WHAT came very nearly being adisastrous fire occurred in the office of Messrs. Bell & Biggar at about 1.30 this afternoon. Mr. W. H. Biggar on entering the room of Mr. Donald—Mr. Bell's private secretary—found that some of the loose papers on the desk were in flames and that the fire had communicated to a set of pigeon-holes, whence the flames were rising to the ceiling. The alarm was at once given, and the employees of the firm succeeded, by means of stamping and crushing out the flames and by the use of water, in extinguishing the fire. Messrs. W. H. and J. L. Biggar burned their hands slightly in handling the flaming papers. The services of the firemen, who attended promptly, were not required. The origin of the fire is unknown.

WEATHER PROBABILITIES—Toronto, April 17.—Lakes and Upper St. Lawrence moderate to fresh winds, mostly southeast and south west, generally fair, warm weather, with a few local showers.

They are a blessing to all mankind, and can be had for only fifty cents a bottle of H. Templeton.

Local Legislation.

All the City Fathers who were in the city and not indisposed, or late, or prevented by important business engagements, or ennui, from presenting themselves at last night's session were on hand at eight o'clock when the reporters sharpened their pencils and awaited the announcement of the opening of the proceedings.

"Come to order," said the Mayor.

Ald. Starling had his hat on at this time and His Worship reminded him of the fact.

The worthy Alderman arose and quoted from the new procedure By-law that he was entitled to have his capillary covering on, but the Mayor sat on the Alderman's interpretation of the rules.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

COMMUNICATIONS, &c.

G. S. Johnston & Co., complained that a quantity of broken stones impeded traffic on Pinnacle street; that the Midland cars obstructed that thoroughfare, and they also desired a crossing on that street, and in case the city would not put one down they asked to be allowed to do so.

John Slavin petitioned for the abatement of the fine and costs imposed on him for not complying with the Snow By-law enactment.

J. L. Biggar and others asked that a bonus for tree planting be given and that a By-law be passed for that purpose.

R. E. Foster, John Wilson, W. H. Scholes, O. C. Taylor, and H. D. Brennan, solicited the position of Tally Clerk at the boom.

The estimates of the R. C. Separate School Board were read. Their proposed expenditure for the year was $2,045 which would be lessened by the Government grant and the amounts received from Thurlow and Sidney, and the City would be asked to provide $1,700.

The applications in re Tally Clerk, were laid on the table, as was also the communication of Johnston & Co.

REPORTS.

The reports of the several Committees were read, as already stated. In addition the Executive Committee requested that statistics and information relative to the iron deposits in the north be obtained and the advantages that this locality offered for iron manufacturing establishments set forth with a view of having smelting works established here.

The Market Committee asked the employment of a competent person to examine the city clock; also the appointment of a Special Committee of the Council to confer with Ironmen, to ascertain what inducement could be held out to lead them to locate iron industries here.

Ald. Diamond said the Prince Edward had commenced running to-day, although the Bushy Island route was still closed.

Several members asserted that teams were yet crossing above that point.

Council went into Committee of the Whole on Reports—Ald. Macoun in the chair.

With regard to the clock item in the Market Committee's report, Ald. Starling said the present contractor should keep the clock in order. The weather during the winter, he claimed, had been against that person, and anyway, the place the clock was in was an improper one for the purpose.

Ald. Diamond said the contractor had not cleaned the clock, and it was advisable to learn if he would not live up to the terms of his contract.

Ald. Petrie said it was with a desire to see if the contractor had done his work properly, that he wanted a person to examine the clock.

Ald. Taylor thought the Solicitor should write the contractor on that subject.

Ald. Dickson said a valuable piece of machinery like the city clock should be properly protected.

Ald. Starling said he had frequently complained of the clock but was satisfied that the contractor had done the best he could.

Ald. Diamond claimed that as the hands were not alike on the different dials that state of things could not be because the clock was unprotected.

Ald. Petrie said if the clock clause did not suit the "community" they could vote it down.

The clause was obliterated.

Ald. Diamond in re the iron question, favored the ideas promulgated in the Market Committee's report. We should not offer any greater inducements for persons to locate here than we had previously done, in view of the fact that the Government now proposed to aid the establishment of iron industries in this country.

Ald. Dickson said if the Council was desirous of doing nothing the best way to do it was by adopting the Market Committee's report. It was not asking too much of the organs of public opinion and prominent men to give such practical suggestions as the Council could act on.

Ald. Dunnet said such a committee should have extended powers.

Ald. Macoun said they always took enough.

The clause was carried and that on the same subject in the Executive Committee's report was rejected.

The appointment of tally clerk at the boom was then voted on.

The ballots were counted on the first return and as there were 22—and Ald. Pope absent, thus making the number present but 20, it was deemed best not to follow the example set by the Louisiana Returning Board and a new ballot was ordered. The result was :—Scholes, 10; D. Brennan, 3; Foster, 5; Taylor, 1; Wilson, 1. A second ballot showed : Scholes, 12; Foster, 3; Taylor, 2; Brennan, 2; Wilson, 1. Scholes was declared appointed and the remuneration fixed at the same figure as that given last year.

Ald. Diamond wanted Johnson's request sent to the Works Committee.

Ald. Starling said $175 had been expended on that part of Pinnacle street in Foster Ward last year, and as the frost wasn't yet out of the ground and no appropriations made, he asked that the Committee be given a rest.

Ald. Petrie said that promises made years ago for improvements in that ward had not been fulfilled, and he therefore asked that Mr. Johnston be allowed to build a crossing, as he would do it at his own expense.

Ald. Frost didn't want the Council put in a humiliating position by allowing Mr. Johnston to build a crossing at his own expense.

Ald. Dickson wanted Mr. Johnston's offer accepted, but he should do the work under the supervision of the Street Surveyor.

Ald. Petrie asked that Mr. Johnston's request be allowed.

The letter was referred to the Board of Works.

Committee rose and reported—Adopted.

INQUIRIES.

Ald. Dickson asked if the Chairman of Ferry had provided booms for the timber brought down and put in the harbor south and east of the harbor. He had been told the lumbermen would pay timber dues if they had booming facilities.

Ald. Smith said this matter should have been attended to before, for it was rather late now to think of building piers.

Ald. Diamond said his Committee would consider the ideas brought out by Ald. Dickson. There were several questions in this connection that would require consideration and they would receive attention.

Ald. Hanley wanted to know when the drain on Catharine Street was to be completed. He also remarked that the island had not been advertised for sale.

Ald. Starling said that no appropriation had been made for that drain, and besides a property owner in that section had threatened the Council with the terrors of the law in case the drain were built.

Ald. Smith wanted to know when the Water and Gas Committee were going to give Foster Ward a supply of water.

Ald. McIntech retorted by asking when that tank on Octavia Street was to be filled.

Council went into Committee of the Whole on By laws—Ald. Diamond in the chair.

The By-law to prevent forestalling was passed.

Committee rose and reported.—Adopted.

The By-law was passed through its remaining stages.

Ald. Pope's By-law was allowed to stand.

Ald. Starling moved, seconded by Ald. Ellis, that a reward of $50 be paid the men employed by Mr. Campion who were the cause of arresting the burglars who were sentenced in the Assize Court.

Ald. Frost said a private subscription was being passed around, and he thought that would be a public recognition for the services rendered.

Ald. Petrie said if the burglars had not been arrested, the Council would have offered a reward of $200. He, however, would only favor the granting of $25.

On the question of suspending the rules, the yeas and nays were demanded.

Yeas 9. Nays 7.

The motion was therefore lost, as it required a two thirds vote to pass it.

The Auditors' Abstract was ordered to be published in each of the City papers.

A motion to place a lamp on Henry Street, near Severn's brewery, was referred to the Committee on Water and Gas.

Ald. Dickson asked the Chairmen of Committees to hand in the amounts they desired for next year's expenditure, so he could place them in the estimates.

Adjourned at 10:20.

The Bad and Worthless

are never imitated or counterfeited. This is especially true of a family medicine, and it is especially proof that the remedy imitated is of the highest value. As soon as it had been tested and proved by the whole world that Hop Bitters was the purest, best and most valuable family medicine on earth, many imitations sprung up and began to steal the notices in which the press and people of the country had expressed the merits of H. B., and in every way trying to induce suffering invalids to use their stuff instead, expecting to make money on the credit and good name of H. B. Many others started nostrums put up in similar style to H. B., with variously worded names in which the word "Hop" or "Hops" were used in a way to induce people to believe they were the same as Hop Bitters. All such pretended remedies or cures, no matter what their style or name is, and especially those with the word "Hop" or "Hops" in their name or in any way connected with them or their name, are imitations, or counterfeits, base and worthless. There is no other but genuine Hop Bitters, with a bunch or cluster of green Hops on the white label. Trust nothing else, and Druggists and dealers are warned against dealing in imitations or counterfeits.

Daily Intelligencer.

One of Earth's Angels.

It was late when they separated. Goodbyes were said, and tender-hearted little Agnes cried as she said good-bye to Doctor Frank. The priest and the physician walked to the little village together, through the cold darkness of the starless winter night.

At the presbytery gate they parted, Father Francis going in, Doctor Danton continuing his walk to the distant cottage of a poor sick patient. The man was dying. The young doctor lingered by his bedside until all was over, and morning was gray in the eastern sky when he left the house of death.

But what other light was that red in the sky, beside the light of morning? A crimson, lurid light that was spreading rapidly over the face of the cloudy heavens, and lighting even the village roofs there were earthly glare? Fire! and in the direction of Danton Hall, growing brighter and brighter, and redder with every passing second. Others had seen it, too, and doors were flying open, and men and women flocking out:

'Fire! Fire!' a voice cried. 'Danton Hall is on fire!'

And the cry was taken up and echoed and reechoed, and every one was rushing pell-mell in the direction of the Hall.

Doctor Frank was one of the first to arrive. The whole front of the old mansion seemed a sheet of fire and the red flames rushed up into the black sky with an awful roar. The family were only just aroused, and, with the servants, were flocking out, half-dressed. Doctor Frank's anxious eyes counted them; there were the Captain and Grace, Harry and Agnes, and last of all, Kate.

The servants were all there, but there was one missing still. Doctor Frank was by Grace's side in a moment.

'Where is Eony?'

'Eony! Is she not here?'

'No. Good Heavens, Grace! Is she in the house?'

Grace looked around wildly.

'Yes, yes! She must be! O, Frank—' But Frank was gone, even while she spoke, into the burning house. There was still time. The lower hall and stairway were still free from fire, only filled with smoke.

He rushed through, and upstairs; in the second hall the smoke was suffocating, and the burning brands were falling from the blazing roof. Up the second flight of stairs he flew blinded, choked, singed. He knew Eony's room; the door was unlocked, and he rushed in. The smoke or fire had not penetrated here yet, and on the bed the girl lay fast asleep, undisturbed by all the uproar around her.

To muffle her from head to foot in a blanket, snatch her up and fly out of the room, was but the work of a few seconds. The rushing smoke blinded and suffocated him, but he darted down the staircases as if his feet were winged. Huge cinders and burning flakes were falling in a fiery shower around him, but still he rushed blindly on. The lower hall was gained, a breeze of the blessed cold air blew on his face.

They were soon, they were saved, and a wild cheer arose from the breathless multitude. Just at that instant, with his foot on the threshold, an avalanche of fire seemed to fall on his head from the burning roof. Another cry, this time in by no means terror arose from the crowd; he reeled, staggered like a drunken man; some one caught Eony out of his arms as he fell to the ground.

CHAPTER XXIII.

The glare of a brilliant April sunset shone in a rainbow-hued western sky, and on the fresh green earth, all arrayed in the budding promise of spring.

Grace Danton stood by the window of a long low room, looking thoughtfully out at the orange and crimson dyes of the far off sky.

The room in which she stood was not at all like the vast old-fashioned rooms of Danton Hall. It was long and narrow, and low ceilinged, and very plainly furnished. There was the bed in the one end, a cot, curtainless bed, and on it, pale, thin, and shadowy, lay Grace's brother, as he had lain for many weary weeks. He was asleep now, deeply, heavily, nearly, no longer in the wild delirium of brain fever, as he had tossed for so many interminable days and nights.

Grace dropped the curtain, and went back to her post by the bedside. As she did so, the door softly opened, and Kate, in a dark, unrustling dress and slippers of silence, came in. She had changed in those weeks; she looked paler and thinner, and the violet eyes had a more tender light, a sadder beauty than of old.

'Still asleep,' she said, softly, looking at the bed. 'Grace, I think your prayers have been heard.'

'I trust so, dear. Is your father in?'

'No; he has ridden over to see how the builders get on. You must wait tea, Grace. Go, I will take your place.'

Grace arose and left the room, and Kate seated herself in the low chair, with eyes full of tender compassion. What a shadow he was of his former self—so pale, so thin, so wasted! The hand lying on the counterpane was almost transparent, and the forehead, streaked with damp brown hair, was like marble.

'Poor fellow!' Kate thought, pushing these stray locks softly back, and forgetting how dangerously skin pity is to love—'poor fellow!'

Yes, it has come to this. Sick—dying, perhaps—Kate Danton found how dear this once obnoxious young Doctor had grown to her heart. How blessings brighten as they take their flight! Now that she was on the verge of losing him forever, she discovered his worth—discovered that her admiration was very like love. How could she help it? Women admire heroes so much! And was not this brave young Doctor a real hero? From first to last, had not his life in St. Croix been one list of good and generous deeds?

The very first time she had ever seen him, he had been her champion, to save her from the insults and violence of two drunken soldiers. He had been a sort of guardian angel to poor Agnes in her great trouble. He had saved her brother's life and honor. He had fortified his own life to save that of her sister. The poor of St. Croix spoke of him only to praise and bless him. Was not this house besieged every day with scores of inquirers? He was so good, so great, so noble, so self sacrificing, so generous—oh! how could she help loving him! Not with the love that had once been Reginald's Stanford's, whose only basis was a fanciful girl's liking for a handsome face, but a love far deeper and truer and stronger. She looked back now at the first infatuation and wondered at herself. The scales had fallen from her eyes, and she saw her sister's husband in his true light—false, shallow, selfish, dishonorable.

'Oh,' she thought, with untold thanksgiving in her heart, 'what would have become of me if I had married him!'

There was another sore subject in her heart, too—that short lived betrothal to Sir Ronald Keith. How low she must have fallen when she could do that! How sore despised herself now for ever entertaining the thought of that base marriage. She could thank Father Francis at last by the sick bed of Doctor Frank she had learned a lesson that would last her a life time.

The radiance of the sunset was failing out of the sky, and the gray twilight was filling the room. She rose up, drew back the green curtains, and looked for a moment at the peaceful village street. When she returned to the bedside, the sleeper was awake, his eyes calm and clear for the first time. She restrained the exclamation of joy that which arose to her lips, and tried to catch the one faint word he uttered:

'Water!'

She gently raised his head, her cheeks flushing, and held a glass of lemonade to his lips. A faint smile thanked her; and then his eyes closed, and he was asleep again. Kate sank down on her knees by the bedside, grateful tears falling from her eyes, to thank God for the life that would be spared.

From that evening the young man rallied fast.

The Doctor, who came from Montreal every day to see him, said it was all owing to his superb constitution and wondrous vitality. But he was very, very weak. If he was dead and days before he was strong enough to think, or speak, or move. He slept, by fits and starts, nearly all day long, recognizing his sister, and Kate and Eony, and the Captain, by his bedside, without wondering how they came to be there, or what had ailed him.

DR. E. C. WEST'S NERVE and BRAIN TREATMENT is a specific for falling cure for Nervous Neuralgia, Nervous Headache, Overworked

BACKED BY INNUMERABLE FANGS, restless by day, sleepless at night, rising unrefreshed in the morning, without appetite and pestered by varying and perplexing symptoms, the dyspeptic takes in fact a gloomy view of human existence. For him the zest of life seems gone. Heartburn, oppression at the pit of the stomach, and the attendant annoyances of constipation and biliousness, combine to render him utterly wretched. But there is, we will not take advantage of it, a reliable, certainless bed, and on it, pale, thin, and shadowy, lay Grace's brother, as he had lain for many weary weeks. He was asleep now, deeply, heavily, nearly, no longer in the wild delirium of brain fever, as he had tossed for so many interminable days and nights.

A NOTED BUT UNTITLED WOMAN.

[From the Boston Globe.]

Messrs. Editors—

The above is a good likeness of Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., and although unknown to fame may be truthfully called the "Queen Bee of Woman," as some of her correspondents love to call her. She is zealously devoted to her work, which is the outcome of a life-study, and is obliged to keep six busy assistants to help her answer the large correspondence which daily pours in upon her, each bearing its special burden of suffering, or joy at relief from it. Her Vegetable Compound has a medicine for good and not evil purposes. I have personally investigated it and am satisfied of the truth of this.

On account of its proven merits, it is recommended and prescribed by the best physicians in the country. One says: "It works like a charm and cures much pain. It will cure entirely the worst form of failing of the uterus, Leucorrhœa, Irregular and painful Menstruation, all Ovarian Troubles, Inflammation and Ulceration, Floodings, all Displacements and the consequent spinal weakness, and is especially adapted to the Change of Life."

It permeates every portion of the system, and gives new life and vigor. It removes faintness, flatulency, destroys all craving for stimulants, and relieves weakness of the stomach. It cures Bloating, Headaches, Nervous Prostration, General Debility, Sleeplessness, Depression and Indigestion. That feeling of bearing down, causing pain, weight and backache, is always permanently cured by its use. It will at all times, and under all circumstances act in harmony with the law that governs the female system.

It costs only $1, per bottle or six for $5, and is sold by druggists. And, as a last resort, read as to special cures, and the names of many who have been restored to perfect health by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound, can be obtained by addressing Mrs. Pinkham, at her home in Lynn, Mass.

For Kidney Complaints of either sex this Compound is unsurpassed as abundant testimonials show.

"Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills, 25 cents, are the best in the world for the cure of Constipation, Biliousness and Torpidity of the Liver. Sold by all Druggists. Further she wonders if he special line and hair fair to equal the Compound in its peculiarity.

All do not respect her as an Angel of Mercy whose sole ambition is to do good to others.

The Orange Bill Again Discussed.

THE MEASURE REJECTED.

MONDAY, April 15.

Mr. White (Hastings), on rising to move the second reading of the bill for the incorporation of the Loyal Orange Association of British North America, said:—When I introduced this bill into this House, I perhaps spoke a little too hastily in replying to the member for Montreal East (Mr. Courtenay). He, however, had left the impression upon my mind previously that he was not going to move the six month's hoist to the bill. When I found that he did not move it, I said he was acting the coward. If I was wrong in the impression I formed, I am sorry for the remark I made, for it is not my desire to injure the feelings of any body in this House on this or any other question. I may say that, so far as this bill is concerned, it was not my wish that I should be the introducer. When I was asked to take charge of it, I advised my friends to give it into the hands of a member better able to carry it through the House than myself. I asked them to put this into the hands of the hon. gentleman from Simcoe (Mr. McCarthy), the hon. gentleman from North Victoria (Mr. Cameron), or the hon. gentleman from Lincoln (Mr. Rykert), any one of whom, by reason of his force of character, industry, and moderation, could better have promoted the interests of the bill than I can; but I have been requested to take charge of it, and I have done so, hoping to see it placed shortly on the statute book of my country. Now, so far as this measure is concerned, I may say we had a bill of this kind before the Local Legislature of Ontario. It passed the House, but the Lieutenant Governor's assent to it was reserved. A bill of this kind has passed in New Brunswick, and is law to-day. It has also passed in Nova Scotia. It has been passed, too, in Prince Edward Island. But it has not become law there, since the Governor's assent not having been received. During the last year a bill something similar to this passed the Local House of Manitoba. When that bill was brought before the House, other Catholic members asked the advice of those holding prominent positions in the Church as to the course they should adopt regarding it, and they were advised to oppose it. It was a grand, kind, and sympathetic act on the part of Archbishop Tache to give such advice, but the Governor, on the advice of the present First Minister of that Province, did not affix his signature to the bill, and it has not become law. Now, Mr. Speaker, some years ago a bill something similar to the present measure was before the old Parliament of Upper and Lower Canada at that time. I see on the division list the names of Sir George Cartier, Sir John Macdonald, and Hon. George Brown as voting for the bill. Mr. Brown—and we all regret that he was cut off by the assassin's bullet—knew what was the right thing to do, and wished the country to be governed wisely and well. Then let me say of the hon. leader of the present Government, that a great deal of his success in life is due to his anxious desire to see all parties contented and all societies enjoying equal rights,—and I must not forget Sir George E. Cartier, who voted twice for the bill on the same day. (Hear, hear.) I have yet to learn that he was not a true-hearted Frenchman, that he was not devoted to the Church of which he was member, and to the people whose language he spoke. (Hear, hear.) At all events he voted for the bill, which I fear some gentlemen from his province, having faith in the same Church, are not going to do now that the second reading of the measure has been moved. It has been stated that I hold an office in this society; let me say that that statement is not correct. I am one of its humblest members, and have held no office in connection with it for the last five years. I do not think that it will be some time before I hold any office in the Association, not that I shrink from the responsibility, but I have not the time to attend to it. But what do we ask for? What do we require from this hon. House? Simply, as I have said before, the right to buy a piece of land and to erect a building thereon, in which to hold our meetings, and the right to dispose of that property when we have done with it. I am confident that the proceeds of such sales will be placed in a fund for the support of the orphans and widows of the Association. Why should we be refused this privilege? I ask any hon. gentleman—I care not to what province or creed or political party he belongs—I ask why do we, as men of honesty and common sense, should any party of men who have all loyal to the Crown, who are ready at all times and under all circumstances to go forth in defence of the homes and firesides of the country, and who pay taxes in support of the Government, be deprived of the right to hold a piece of property for their own use? There must be some secret reason for this refusal, and I would like to know it. I have been told that in discussing this question I must speak conditionally, and must not use expressions that would give offence to anyone. One of the principles of our institution is to be slow to take offence, and offer none. I do not identify myself as if this bill is defeated or not, to use one word that will offend anyone; but let me just say this, that we are anxious to know who are for us and who are against us. We have a right to ask for this privilege from the Parliament of Canada, and I trust we will do so in a becoming way, and if it is refused, we want to know why it is refused, or what we have done that it should not be granted to us. I hope and trust that a majority of the members of this House will grant what has been asked for in such a way as will cause us to feel that the Parliament of Canada is an independent, outspoken body, and that it is not influenced by four or five party. I will now leave the matter with the House, and I move, seconded by Mr. O'Brien, that the bill be read a second time. (Applause.)

Mr. Curran—I feel heavily the responsibility resting upon me, as a representative and as a citizen of the Dominion, in rising to oppose the second reading of this bill. Those who have noticed what is going on must be aware that very deep feeling exists in the hearts of a large section of our fellow countrymen with reference to this measure. Previous to the opening of our deliberations to-day we called down upon them the blessing of heaven; we asked for light, and for the true patriotic inspiration; and I, for one, trust, in the few observations I have to make, that my mind may be inspired with a desire only for my country's good, and that no word shall pass my lips which will give offence to the most sensitive. I look upon this occasion as one of the most momentous in the history of Canadian politics, for should the Parliament give its sanction to the incorporation of the Orange Order, with its history since 1794—if we plant the Orange flag on the towers of the Dominion—what would be the result upon immigration to this country? We have a vast territory to fill with settlers, and if you put this weapon into the hands of the American immigration agents, where is the Irish Catholic who will come here to find transplanted all the old quarrels which embittered his life at home? Where is the Protestant who will come here, where the old party feuds of 200 years—born in a foreign country—are revived? I have had the advantage of being brought up in the city of Montreal, and there Roman Catholics and Protestants live in harmony together. There Catholic benevolence vies with Protestant benevolence in supporting those institutions of mercy for the care of the aged, the infirm, and the afflicted. Proceeding, he quoted from the 4th speech of Lord John Russell in a similar debate on the Orange Bill in the British House of Commons, marking and emphasizing the difference between Orangemen and Protestants, and declaring that he made a similar distinction. There was no Protestant institution of a benevolent character for which he would not give his hearty vote, but he held that the Orange institution was not a benevolent society. He claimed that from the history of the society it could be shown that the objects were such that to grant it incorporation would be contrary to the deed of capitulation of the Treaty of Paris; that it was beyond the power of this Parliament; that the passage would be an interference with the rights of the Provinces; and that it was against the spirit—and indeed the letter—of the British North America Act. In endeavoring to prove this he showed first from the public records of the society that its objects was Protestant ascendancy. Protestant ascendancy was incompatible with the religious liberty and toleration assured to the Roman Catholics in Quebec by the Treaty of Paris. This Act of incorporation could not be passed, he held, if it were not in the law of one of the Provinces. On this point he referred to the case of Grant v. Beaudry in Montreal, and quoted from the decision of Judge Ramsay that as the law of the Province declared all secret oath-bound societies, except Freemasons, illegal, and that the Orange Society was among those thus interdicted. In 1863 a bill to incorporate the Orange lodge of was passed by the Legislature of Prince Edward Island, with a suspending clause. It was laid at the foot of the Throne, and was, through the Duke of Newcastle, then Secretary of State for the Colonies, refused the royal assent. The despatch containing the information of this refusal was couched in terms strongly condemnatory of the Order. In 1878 the Orange Incorporation Bill was passed by the same Legislature and reserved for the Governor-General's assent. The bill was sent back with an intimation that as the bill was within the jurisdiction of the Province it should have either been assented to or rejected by the Lieutenant Governor. A similar bill was passed by the same Legislature in 1881, but it did not receive the assent of the Lieut.-Governor. Admitting the society to be a merely benevolent association, as it was represented to be by its promoters, this Parliament had no right to deal with it. If the Federal Parliament, he contended, could descend to the incorporation of benevolent societies the Local Legislatures might be abolished altogether, for there was no use for them. He had under his hand a speech of Lord Carnarvon defining the powers of the Provincial and the Federal Legislature which favored his views. Mr. Curran then went on to quote authorities, Canadian and British to show that it was unconstitutional and illegal to give a charter to the Orange Society. Mr. Curran drew a picture of what would be the result if the bill before the House became law. If had been stated in the Toronto Mail that Orangemen had resolved to walk through the streets of Montreal on the 12th of July next. If they should do this the Catholics of every race would be up in arms to resist them, and there would be another "battle of the Boyne." He directed attention to the personnel of the Ministry, and said that all classes and creeds were represented in it, and all were sufficiently protected, concluding with an aspiration that the day might soon come when the orange and the green, the red and the blue, would be mingled together in one celestial harmony.

Mr White (Cardwell) said it was a mistake to suppose that this was a bill for the establishment of the Orange organization in Canada. There were 200,000 Orangemen in the Dominion of Canada, who were formed into lodges, who dispensed charities, who walked in procession, and who were legally enabled to hold their property by legal tenure. There was nothing about Protestant ascendancy in the bill before the House. The great Protestant church in the country was an assertion of Protestant ascendancy, as every Catholic church was an assertion in favor of Catholic ascendancy. The allusions made to the decision of courts were not, Mr. White contended, relevant, as the legality of the Orange Order was not the question to be decided upon. It was not for Parliament to enquire into the principles and methods of societies asking for Acts of incorporation. If they did so the practice would lead to some singular results. Objection had, in former times, been made in the Parliament of Canada to the incorporation of any religious society on the ground that the teachings of such society were opposed to principles of the Protestant religion, and such Acts, when applied for, were refused. Orangemen had not acted in this spirit. They had never refused to give their support to any measure that had for its object the furtherance of the interests of any religious denomination. When the question of Separate Schools was before the Legislature of Ontario they supported it, although in so doing they acted in opposition to the interests of their party. He (Mr. White) considered it a pity that Mr. Curran had confined his remarks to the constitutionality of the bill, but not being a lawyer he would not take upon himself to give an opinion on that aspect of the question. He considered that the rejection of the bill would be the means to advance the cause of Orangeism than by aid its acceptance by the House, for the Order had thrived through the opposition of its enemies. If this House would pass the bill and take away from Orangemen the sense of wrong and injustice, it would do much towards lessening its influence in the country. He regretted that the bill had been allowed to pass through the House in the ordinary course. As to the fears expressed of the consequences of the Orangemen walking in procession through Montreal, they would prove to be groundless if those who disliked the Order would only

BELLEVILLE, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 18.

The Orange Bill.

Mr. John White's motion for the second reading of the Orange Bill came up for decision in the Commons on Monday, and the result was that, after one of the most exciting debates of the session, a motion made by Mr. Curran for the six months hoist was carried by the unexpectedly large majority of 36.

This result, we need scarcely say, we regret very deeply, but as our views on the subject are well known, it is not necessary at the present writing to recapitulate them. The admirable speeches of Messrs. White (Hastings) and White (Cardwell), a summary of which will be found in other columns, forestall anything that could be urged from our point of view for the time being.

Doubtless there will be a hypocritical outcry from the Grits of Ontario, directed against the Premier for not endeavoring to coerce his supporters from the Province of Quebec, but a careful study of the division list will show that the responsibility for the defeat of the measure rests with the Grits, whose treachery was most unblushingly carried out. Of the 106 members who voted against the bill, no less than 53 were Grits, and of these 53 no less than 14 who had previously voted to pass the measure to a second reading, deliberately recorded their votes in favor of the motion for the six months hoist, whilst seven others who had in the first place voted for the bill shirked the vote on Monday. Such execrable conduct as that of these men cannot go unpunished, and in justice to all concerned, we herewith append their names.

Those who changed their opinions so suddenly were :—Messrs. Armstrong, Bain, Blake, Burpee (St. John), Cockburn, Fairbank, Fisher, Forbes, Harley, Keefler, Kirk, Paterson (Brant), Ross (Middlesex), and Somerville (Brant).

Those who shirked the vote were: Messrs. Allen, Burpee (Sunbury), Cook, King, McCraney, Platt and Ross (Ligar).

Of the 70 members who voted for the bill, but 6 were Grits, and only two of these were from Ontario.

These facts need no comment. Every person who reads can appreciate them, and can understand the position of the Grit party on the question of Orange incorporation.

Police Court, Bancroft.

During the winter quarter Mr. Cleak, the Police Magistrate for North Hastings, has had a smaller amount of business at this Court than in the earlier part of the year, partly on account of the fact that people have been well employed in the woods, and partly because the evil-disposed and quarrelsome find law an expensive luxury or have a well-founded dread of its effects to transgressors since the institution of the above named Court. However, the following cases were of a serious nature :

Sweet vs. J. Fitzgibbons, for house-breaking. Defendant admitted the offence, pleading the influence of liquor.

And the same parties on a second charge of assaulting the wife of complainant at the same time. Defendant pleading as above, fined including costs $42.50 or two months in gaol.

Conlin vs. C. Fitzgibbon, housebreaking and Sweet vs. the same for the same offence.

In these cases the prisoner was under remand for further evidence, and during the interval he made his escape from custody, there being unfortunately no secure place for the detention of loose characters at present in this district.

Conlin vs. I. Fitzgibbons, and Sweet vs. the same, both for house breaking. These cases forming the second and third complaint against the prisoner, who was committed for three months, one month in one case and two in the other.

Howell vs. McDonald, for trespass. In this case both parties had been in the wrong, but they eventually agreed to decide the issue by the complainant taking about $12 off his bay and the expenses to be equally divided.

Beware of Imitations

Since DR. THOMAS' Eclectric Oil has become celebrated, a number of unprincipled persons have been endeavoring to palm off Electron and Electric Oil for the genuine DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. Beware of these similar named articles. If their originators had any faith in the healing properties of their own medicines they would, like honest men, give them name of their own, and not try to sell them the reputation of another; but as they know their preparations have no merit, they resort to the most unprincipled plans of selling them by getting a name as near as possible to Eclectric. We therefore ask the public when purchasing to see that the name DR. THOMAS' Eclectric Oil is on the front of the wrapper, and the signature of NORTHROP & LYMAN, the proprietors for Canada on the back.

If you experience bad taste in mouth, sallowness or yellow color of skin, feel stupid and drowsy, appetite unsteady, frequent headache or dizziness, you are "bilious," and nothing will arouse your liver to action and strengthen up your system equal to Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery. Bridgewater Correspondence.

BRIDGEWATER, 16th April, '83.

The ice is all down, but it has not gone without doing considerable damage. On Thursday it began to break up and very shortly after the water began to rise, and on Friday part of Hungerford St., Center St. and Elsevir St. became a complete river, the water entering some of the houses, while all the cellars were inundated. On Saturday the water in the lower part of the village began to go down, men having worked at the ice in the river and cleared a channel, and it was thought all danger was past. But between Saturday night and Sunday morning there was a further giving way of ice up the river and log, booms, and logs came rushing down, knocking out a portion of the reservoir dam, upsetting the protecting piers, damaging the saw mill, carrying away the saw mill slide, and destroying part of the foot bridge. The damage done here is considerable. The asbestos works are now an island and the Flinton road covered with water, and by the old watery it is up to a horse's back. People have been using the railroad track and going from the Flinton road across the river by the railroad bridge to get on to a dry road, but to do this they have to take out the horses and lead them over, then draw the waggon after, as the bridge is not entirely covered. I hear Mr. Burns came near losing his horse in going over the bridge to-day. Booms and stop logs will have to be got out at once to prevent further damage.

On Saturday night a surprise party was got up by the young ladies of Mrs. Jas. Harrison's Sabbath School class, who went to her house, and, assisted by the Rev. H. Thomas, who delivered the address, presented her with a handsomely bound volume of the new Methodist Hymn Book. Mrs. Harrison was taken completely by surprise, but will no doubt appreciate the gift, which she is well worthy of, having assisted in the Sabbath School here ever since it was first started, and there are many now grown to womanhood who, when young, learned from her many valuable truths which they have found a benefit and comfort to them in after years May she long be spared to continue her good work.

Presbyterianism

On Friday, the 6th inst., and 26th anniversary of the Ordination of their pastor, the Rev. David Wishart, the congregation of St Peter's Church, Madoc, held their annual meeting. The Statistical Report shows a roll of 120 communicants of whom 22 have been added during the year. Death and removal have diminished the number by 14, and 14 children have been baptized. The church has seven office bearers, and the Sabbath School 9 teachers. The average attendance at the weekly prayer meetings is 40, at the S. School 176. The library contains 225 volumes and the church has seats for 550 people. The Financial Statement shows that they have paid their minister $1,000 and expended for other congregational purposes, $1,383; that they have contributed $175 to the various schemes of the church, and for all purposes a total of $1,597; an average of $21.64 per communicant. The Report of the Building Committee gives a resume of what has been undertaken and completed in the last two years for the completion of the church. At the beginning of that period St. Peter's had already cost the congregation $14,162 87 but was free of debt and it was resolved to complete it. This involved an outlay of $5,602. Of this have been raised by subscriptions from the congregation, $1,129 by the Ladies' Sewing Society, congregational collections, Soirees and special efforts of various kinds and the debt now stands at $1,848, with a healthy prospect of its entire annihilation within the year. These satisfactory results are mainly attributable to the energy and devotion of the pastor and to his personal example of liberality in giving for church purposes. The effective results of the Ladies' Sewing Society are worthy of special note. Its membership has been small and its proceedings quiet and unobtrusive, yet it has provided from its own resources $1,130 towards the building and completion of the church A special report from officials of the S. S. School, gave a gratifying and encouraging account of progress in that department of church work. It set forth that the school is increasing in numbers, attendance is becoming more regular, the teachers are becoming more interested in the work. Order and system are improving, the working is more harmonious, and increasing numbers from the higher class of the school are being added yearly to the roll of the church. In a financial point of view also the resources of the school have been more than usually satisfactory, enabling it during the year to subscribe for $13 worth of papers, to add over $80 worth of books to the Library, to distribute some $20 in presents and prizes, to give $24 to the schemes of the church and to report a balance on hand of over $40. The number of volumes in the Library is kept smaller than it would otherwise be, by the practice of withdrawing those volumes that have been pretty thoroughly read by the pupils and sending them to the more destitute schools of the north.

In these cases the prisoner was under remand for further evidence, and during the interval he made his escape from custody, there being unfortunately no secure place for the detention of loose characters at present in this district.

Conlin vs. I. Fitzgibbons, and Sweet vs. the same, both for house breaking. These cases forming the second and third complaint against the prisoner, who was committed for three months, one month in one case and two in the other.

Howell vs. McDonald, for trespass. In this case both parties had been in the wrong, but they eventually agreed to decide the issue by the complainant taking about $12 off his bay and the expenses to be equally divided.

Beware of Imitations

Since DR. THOMAS' Eclectric Oil has become celebrated, a number of unprincipled persons have been endeavoring to palm off Electron and Electric Oil for the genuine DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. Beware of these similar named articles. If their originators had any faith in the healing properties of their own medicines they would, like honest men, give them name of their own, and not try to sell them the reputation of another; but as they know their preparations have no merit, they resort to the most unprincipled plans of selling them by getting a name as near as possible to Eclectric. We therefore ask the public when purchasing to see that the name DR. THOMAS' Eclectric Oil is on the front of the wrapper, and the signature of NORTHROP & LYMAN, the proprietors for Canada on the back.

If you experience bad taste in mouth, sallowness or yellow color of skin, feel stupid and drowsy, appetite unsteady, frequent headache or dizziness, you are "bilious," and nothing will arouse your liver to action and strengthen up your system equal to Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery. AN OUTRAGE AT OTTAWA.

A Dominion Policeman Attempted to Shoot a Man While on Duty.

UNSUCCESSFUL ATTEMPT TO ARREST THE ASSAILANT—THE GUARD FURTHER STRENGTHENED AT RIDEAU HALL.

OTTAWA, April 18.—About 1.30 o'clock this (Wednesday) morning considerable excitement was occasioned in the House of Commons by the announcement that news had just been received at the Government House to the effect that some murderous wretch had attacked one of the Dominion Policemen on duty there and fired four shots at him. The officer gave the alarm and dashed as effort to capture his assailant, but was unsuccessful. Fifteen members of the Toronto force were sworn in here to-day as temporarily attached to the Dominion Government force. They will immediately go on duty between Rideau Hall, the residence of the Princess, and about the Parliament buildings.

PATENTED 18T MARCH, 1881. IMPROVED 9TH JUNE, 1882.

TO THE LADIES OF BELLEVILLE AND VICINITY:

IN order to correct an erroneous impression abroad relative to the suit pending between ourselves and J. S. and Elizabeth Guthrie, of St. Catharines, relative to a corset patent, we wish to say that the suit by us against Mr. Guthrie does not in any way affect "Vermilyea's self fitting Corset." The question in dispute was whether we had the EXCLUSIVE right to manufacture in this section "Guthrie's Champion Corset" and its improvements. We contended we had the exclusive right. The defendants claimed we had only a right equal with themselves to sell in this section. The Court held that we had not the exclusive right, and as at once took the necessary proceedings for appeal to the full court.

We still have the right, and it is not disputed, to manufacture "Guthrie's Champion Corset" and the improvements thereon in this section. "Vermilyea's Self-Fitting Corset" is not in question, for it is a patent of our own invention, and needs no recommendation as it is so well known to our lady customers all over Ontario. We are now sending our Corsets into New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, and they are also being manufactured in Winnipeg.

We have on hand a full stock of Ladies' Underclothing, all our own manufacture.

Thanking the ladies for patronage in the past we still hope for a continuance of the same.

ALDERMAN STARLING has collected $50 as a reward to the men who so gallantly captured the safe blowers. The worthy Alderman, who is entitled to great credit for his action in this matter, is of opinion that the Council should have voted the sum, in which case all the ratepayers, instead of a few, would have contributed to so worthy an object.

A HORSE became frightened at a passing cart, in front of Orrell's store, this morning, and in endeavoring to get away from the control of his driver, "dished" a front wheel the opposite way to which that operation is usually accomplished.

"THE great search for Sir John Franklin" will be the subject of the first lecture of Com'r Cheyne, which will be given in the City Hall, to night. The entainment will be illustrated by a series of lime light views, numbering 80. The lecture is deserving of a large attendance.

LAST evening's express from the east was about four hours late. This morning's train from the same quarter was five and one half hours late, the cause being the derailment of four cars of a freight train. The express comprised 13 cars and each passenger coach was filled.

BY some means White and Johnston got possession of a part of a ball of a pail while they were in gaol, and had made a key out of it. As they were closely watched during the night time, they were unable to use it. The Gaoler and Turnkey both feel relieved since they went to Kingston.

CROSSING the ice on the bay is now impossible, as along the shore the ice has disappeared. The Trent River is open for a considerable distance; there is a large open space on either side of Nigger Island; the bay is open from Deseronto to Northport, and the opening on the bay near here is enlarging very fast.

THE frame dwelling of Mrs. Vancott, a widow residing in the 4th con. of the Township of Amelisburg, was destroyed by fire yesterday morning. The fire was first discovered about 9 a. m., and it was then apparently quenched, but the flames, after a time, burst forth again and eventually the building was burned to the ground. The fire originated from a defective chimney. A portion of the contents of the house was saved. Insured.

AT the meeting of the Oka Lacrosse Club, held at the Mechanics' Institute last night, there was a large attendance of members and admirers of the game. The choice of officers resulted as follows: Honorary President, Chief McKinnon; President, C. E. Kenny; Vice President, W. H. Garratt; Secretary, E Halliwell; Treasurer, W. Linklater; Captain, H. E. Burdett. With the above S. Thompson, J. Lawrance and A. Overell form the Managing Committee.

TWO fine specimens of the horned grebe—male and female—were shot a few days ago at Weller's Bay, and the former was added by Mr. James Clarke, druggist, to his collection. The horned grebe (Podiceps cornutus), is rarely seen in this vicinity. It is dark brown, head glossy black; a brownish yellow band over eye and behind; fore-neck and breast brownish red; bill compressed, black, tipped with yellow crests, and ruffs very large; length, 14 in.; wing, 6 in.; bill 1 in."

ON the evening of Monday next, St. George's Day, a grand concert will be given in the City Hall, under the auspices of the Sons of England. An effective programme has been prepared, embracing vocal and instrumental music, and among the contributors are Mesdames Campbell, Corby, Biggar, and Filliter, Misses Hunter, Nunn, Tickell and Greatrix, and Messrs. Wensley, Fetherston, Parks, Riggs, Milburn, Balkwell, Greaves, Richardson and Holden. The programme is well selected and should draw a very large audience.

SHERIFF HOPE and Turnkey Marsh escorted Robert William Barrow and James Peters from the County Gaol to the G.T.R. depot last evening, and delivered them into the custody of the Central Prison Bailiff, who was going west on the express. Peters was the individual who stole a five dollar note from a Swede named Johnson and secreted the bill in his mouth, and was sentenced to 18 months by Mr. Justice Armour. Barrow was convicted of vagrancy by the Police Magistrate, and sent up for 6 months. They were a hard looking pair of customers.

THE Telgmann concert company made their first appearance here last night in the Metropolitan Hall before an audience by no means so numerous as it ought to have been. The members of the company are all clever but—with the exception of Mr. Oscar Telgmann—they are very amateurish. This fault will, however, be eradicated by more frequent appearances before the public. Mr. Telgmann, who is a pupil of Remenyi, is a violinist of rare skill, and little Miss Doretta, who is only 8 years old, wields the bow like a veteran, whilst Master Otto is a fine performer on the 'cello. Miss Maud Davy, soprano, made a good impression, her voice being clear and sweet but she failed to control it well. On the whole the concert was an enjoyable one, but the company will, after a few months campaigning, show a vast improvement.

WEATHER PROBABILITIES—Toronto, April 18.—Lakes, winds shifting to northeast and east, fair to cloudy slightly cooler weather.

THE COLDEST MARCH BUT ONE.—By the monthly weather review for March issued by the Observatory it is learned that the number of predictions issued last month was 620, of which over 80 per cent. were verified fully and 89 per cent. fully or in part. The mean temperature was 21°. 94 or 7°. 25 colder than the average. This is the coldest March recorded except that of 1872. There were only two days in which rain fell, the rainfall being the smallest recorded of any March except in 1856 when no rain fell in that month. Snow fell on thirteen days to the depth of over twenty-three inches. Altogether the March of 1883 was an exceptional one.

FRANK LOCKERTY'S CASE

The Jury Unable to agree and are Discharged.

TUESDAY, April 17th, 1883.

Two and a quarter hours were consumed by the counsel for the prisoner and the Crown and His Lordship in their addresses to the Jury, and at five o'clock, the twelve men, good and true, retired to consider their verdict. In the meantime, the Court was occupied with the hearing of cases on the non-jury list and as the audience took but little interest in them, spectators were anything but numerous. Our citizens generally seemed desirous of learning the result and everyone who came from the direction of the Court House was questioned. At seven o'clock, a rap on the door of the jurymen's room, led those who were in the Court to imagine that a verdict had been reached. The door opened only for an instant and closed again, when the officer who had charge of the jury intimated to the Clerk of the Court, that they were unable to agree. On this being communicated to His Lordship he said: "Let them stay out a while longer." Gradually the number of the anxious increased, but the room during the evening was at no time full. At 7:45 Justice Armour directed that the jury be called in. The twelve filed in and took their seats, when the Judge asked if they could not agree, to which the Foreman replied that they could not. "Is there no prospect of your being able to agree?" the Judge interrogated. "None," was the reply. "Then" said His Lordship, "if there is no prospect of your coming to an agreement, I don't want to keep you here." The Foreman answered: "I don't think there is." "Then," said Judge Armour, "I'll discharge you, gentlemen, from giving a verdict in this case."

Inquiries revealed that eight of the jurymen favored acquittal and four conviction, though two of the latter were willing to side with the majority if the others would do the same. This the latter declined to do, one of them even going so far as to assert that he "would stay out all night before he would consent." The case will therefore go to the next Assizes.

The remainder of the petit jury were discharged and paid off this morning.

An application to admit Frank Lockerty to bail, was made to-day and granted by Judge Lazier. The bail was fixed at $2,000; the prisoner in $1,000 and two sureties of $500 each. It was expected that he would be liberated this afternoon.

Miss Harndon of Brighton, wished to investigate and threw a flask of powder on some live coals. She will be permanently disfigured.

The Warden of this County is to be notified to appoint an arbitrator to act in its behalf in the matter of the separation of Trenton from the County.

J. Maybee, of Trenton, is liable to be bothered with visitors. One came to see him the other day and he gave him an egg, measuring 7½ inches around the smallest circumference.

These are the days of big egg stories. James Purtell, of Hallowell, now comes to the front to assert that he has a goose which laid four eggs in one day. James, is not a relative in anyway of G. W. the immortal.

A bridge, 130 feet long, near Flinton, was out of repair and the Township Council met to consider the advisability of erecting a new structure now the village had only a span of 49 feet long. The people thereabouts disliked the idea of changing the site, and assembling at the Town Hall, coerced the Council, who temporarily abandoned the project by postponing discussion on it to a later day.

The Port Hope Guide has the following:—"Mr. Barnett, the New Mechanical Superintendent of the Midland Railway, in order to reduce expenses, has made arrangements with the G. T. R. at Belleville for the necessary light repairs that will be required to be done at that point of the Grand Junction branch. All the machinery in the shops at Belleville have been removed to Port Hope, and the foreman and his assistants transferred to the shop here."

O. Hortle, of Manchester, Ontario Co., N.Y., writes:—"I obtained immediate relief from the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. I have had Asthma for eleven years. Have been obliged to sit up all night for ten or twelve nights in succession. I can now sleep sound all night on a feather bed, which I had not been able to do previous to using the Oil."

WHO THEY WERE.

The Safe Blowers Identified.

It was believed by many that the men who blew open the safe at the axe factory on Saturday morning, the 14th inst., were old offenders against the law, and that the names which they gave were fictitious. This belief has proved to be correct, as, on being taken to the Penitentiary, they were at once recognized by the officials as former inmates of the institution.

The man who assumed the alias of White, proved to be George Sanderson, who had been sent from Toronto for five years, and who was released no longer ago than the 17th of February last.

"Johnston" turned out to be Fred. Jacobs, who had been sent from Toronto also, and who was liberated in October last.

It is thus evident that these rascals have not been too hardly dealt with, as a few short months sufficed to thoroughly harden the stamp ought to be permanently imprisoned, as they will not seek to earn an honest living.

How They Stand.

A young lady, writing to the Hamilton Times, thus sizes up the young men of the undermentioned cities:

Quebec—The most witty.
Ottawa—The most conceited and polished.
Montreal—The greatest flirts.
Kingston—They are all old maids.
Belleville—The most honest and true-hearted.
Toronto—The best dancers.
Hamilton—The handsomest.
St. Catharines—The worst-tempered.
Brantford—The most stingy.
Guelph—The greatest spoons.
London—The biggest fool.
St. Thomas—The most liberal.

The young lady's autograph is wanted here very much, and if she has any spare photos they cannot be sent to Belleville any too soon. Her estimate of the young men of the City of the Bay is "just too correct for anything" and while we rejoice over the good opinion she entertains of us, we cannot but feel the most profound pity for those whom she slightingly alludes to.

Can't Get It.

Diabetes, Brigh's Disease, Kidney, Urinary or Liver Complaints cannot be contracted by you or your family if Hop Bitters are used, and if you already have any of those diseases Hop Bitters is the only medicine that will positively cure you. Don't forget this, and don't get some puffed up stuff that will only harm you.

ANOTHER ASSASSIN CONVICIED.

Daniel Curley Sentenced to be Hanged.

DUBLIN, April 18.—Adams, for the defence, declared the evidence of Kavanagh did not show that Curley was in Phœnix Park on 6th May. His presence was indicated by James Carey, who said Curley was in command of the assassins, but Carey so swore to save his own neck. It was doubtless himself who was in command.

Porter, Attorney General for Ireland, responded for the Crown. The Judge charged the jury. The latter retired, but soon returned and rendered a verdict of guilty. Curley was sentenced to be hanged on May 18th.

are never imitated or counterfeited. This is especially true of a family medicine, and it is positive proof that the remedy imitated is of the highest value. As soon as it had been tested and proved by the whole world that Hop Bitters was the purest, best and most valuable family medicine on earth, many imitations sprung up and began to steal the notices in which the press and people of the country had expressed the merits of H. B., and in every way trying to induce suffering invalids to use their stuff instead, expecting to make money on the credit and good name of H. B. Many others started nostrums put up in similar style to H. B., with variously devised names in which the word "Hop" or "Hops" were used in a way to induce people to believe they were the same as Hop Bitters. All such pretended remedies or cures, no matter what their style or name is, and especially those with the word "Hop" or "Hops" in their name or in any way connected with them or their name, are imitations or counterfeits. Beware of them. Touch none of them. Use nothing but genuine Hop Bitters, with a bunch or cluster of green Hops on the white label. Trust nothing else. Druggists and dealers are warned against dealing in imitations or counterfeits.

stay in their houses while the Orangemen were walking.

Mr. Coursol, N. Clarke Wallace, Wood of Brockville, and McNeill of North Bruce, spoke up to recess, all in favor of the bill, excepting the member from Montreal East.

After dinner Mr. McNeill continued his remarks and was followed by Messrs. Casgrain, Tyrwhitt, Hawkins, Burns, Sproule, Hackett and Woodworth.

Mr. Beaty, of Toronto West, made a strong speech in support of the bill.

Mr. White closed the debate with the following speech:

Mr. White (Hastings)—Mr. Speaker, I only intend to make a few remarks. There has been a good deal of discussion on this bill, and on the whole I am pleased that it has been so moderate in tone. I think that after the battle is over we will be good friends. I think that some things have been said that perhaps would have been much better unsaid. If the hon member for Montreal Centre had been a little more moderate in his remarks, I believe there would have been nothing said to create the least ill feeling. I would just say that so far as the remarks of the hon. member are concerned, he had no right to make the accusations he made use of against the Orange association, at least so far as Central Ontario is concerned. When I was Grand Master of that Province, during the troubles in the city of Montreal, I prevented, as far as I could, the Ontario Lodges from going to that city, and I succeeded in keeping all but one Lodge from going. I did so because I thought it was unwise and imprudent to engender party feeling by going to Montreal, and if we get this bill of incorporation I will assure the hon. gentlemen that no Orangemen from the province of Ontario will go to Montreal to disturb or injure any of its citizens. We are anxious to promote good feeling in Montreal and we wish to drop these troubles from our minds altogether. I believe if the chief magistrate of that city had done his duty as he should have done it; if he had pursued the same course pursued by the chief magistrate of Toronto and the then Grand Master, the late Hon. John Hilliard Cameron, when the pilgrim procession was held in Toronto, the result would have been different. But, Mr Speaker, I do not wish to bring up these old matters. I will only say that whether I succeed with this bill or not there is one thing for which I will always be thankful, and that is for the liberal support given to the measure by many of the members when I moved its first reading. All we want is the right to hold property for which we pay. If we are denied that right we want to know it. If we are denied it I must say I do not think our institution will suffer much. Why, we ask for nothing that is unreasonable or unjust. We have asked only for what is fair, just, and honest, and I am satisfied that the Protestant heart of the country is with us, and is sympathising with us. Here is another matter about this bill. One gentleman, high in this country, said to me, "White, we will pass this bill, only take out the word Orange." Why does not the Dominion of Canada give up its name? Why does not any corporation give up its name? Sir, we will not give up our name. It is a name that is dear to us. Under it and by it we have prospered in the past, and under it and by it we will prosper in the future, if we never get a bill of incorporation. I am thankful to the hon. gentleman who assisted to secure the second reading of this bill. I shall be grateful too, to every member, no matter what his religious opinions, who votes for this bill, and I will promise that whatever influence I have shall be accorded him, irrespective of what political party he belongs to. I trust that when the vote is over Orangemen will fulfil their duty as becomes men of truth, honesty, and integrity, and endeavor to see where they can remedy this evil. Perhaps we will have to wait a few years before we get this bill of incorporation, but though we wait we will get it, and why? The day is not far distant when the nobler and better sex will have votes—(cheers)—and we will get it through their influence—(applause)—because they know from their heart of hearts that it will be to their benefit. We will establish a fund for the widows and orphans, and they, I am sure, will give support to that.

The division was then taken, and Mr. Curran's motion for the six months' hoist was carried. Yeas, 106; nays, 70.

YEAS.—Messrs. Dr. E. C West's Nerve and Brain Treatment is a never failing cure for Nervous Neuralgia, Nervous Headache, Overworked

RACKED BY INNUMERABLE PANGS, restless by day, sleepless at night, rising unrefreshed in the morning, without appetite and pestered by varying and perplexing symptoms, the dyspeptic takes indeed a gloomy view of human existence. For him the zest of life seems gone. Heartburn, oppression at the pit of the stomach, and the attendent annoyances of of constipation and biliousness, combine to render him utterly wretched. But there is, if he will but take advantage of it, a reliable source of reliable relief from all misery. NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY and DYSPEPTIC CURE is, as its name imports, a botanic preparation, free from mineral poison, and an all-sufficient remedy for indigestion in its most obstinate form. It not only enriches the blood by enabling the digestive organs to convert the food received into nutriment, but depurates it by increasing the action of the bowels and kidneys, the natural outlets for its impurities. But while it relaxes the bowels, it never does so violently and with pain, like a drastic cathartic. It aids, but never forces, Nature, invigorating as well as purifying and regulating the system. It thoroughly removes those diseased humors which tend to vitiate the blood, purifies the urinary secretion, and promotes a flow of healthy bile into the natural channel, besides expelling it from the circulation. Experience has proved that this standard medicine is a thorough remedy for dyspepsia, biliousness, costiveness, kidney complaints, scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, lumbago and all impurities of the blood. Price $1.00. Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac-simile of their signature. Sold by all medicine dealers

FOR THE

KIDNEYS, LIVER AND URINARY ORGANS.

THE BEST BLOOD PURIFIER.

There is only one way by which any disease can be cured, and that is by removing the cause—whatever it may be. The great medical authorities of the day declare that nearly every disease is caused by deranged kidneys or liver. To restore these, therefore, is the only way by which health can be secured. Here is where WARNER'S SAFE CURE has achieved its great reputation. It acts directly upon the kidneys and liver and by placing them in a healthy condition drives disease and pain from the system. For all Kidney, Liver and Urinary troubles; for the distressing disorders of women; for Malaria, and physical troubles generally, this great remedy has no equal. Beware of impostors, imitations and concoctions said to be just as good.

For Diabetes ask for WARNER'S SAFE DIABETES CURE.

A NOTED BUT UNTITLED WOMAN.

[From the Boston Globe.]

Messrs. Editors:—

The above is a good likeness of Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., who above all other human beings may be truthfully called the "Dear Friend of Woman," as some of her correspondents love to call her. She is zealously devoted to her work, which is the outcome of a life-study, and is obliged to keep six lady assistants, to help her answer the large correspondence which daily pours in upon her, each bearing its special burden of suffering, or joy at release from it. Her Vegetable Compound is a medicine for good and not evil purposes. I have personally investigated it and am satisfied of the truth of this.

On account of its proven merits, it is recommended and prescribed by the best physicians in the country. One says: "It works like a charm and saves much pain. It will cure entirely the worst form of falling of the uterus, Leucorrhœa, irregular and painful Menstruation, all Ovarian Troubles, Inflammation and Ulceration, Floodings, all Displacements and the consequent spinal weakness, and is especially adapted to the Change of Life."

It permeates every portion of the system, and gives new life and vigor. It removes faintness, flatulency, destroys all craving for stimulants, and relieves weakness of the stomach. It cures Bloating, Headaches, Nervous Prostration, General Debility, Sleeplessness, Depression and Indigestion. That feeling of bearing down, causing pain, weight and backache, is always permanently cured by its use. It will at all times, and under all circumstances, act in harmony with the law that governs the female system.

It costs only $1. per bottle or six for $5., and is sold by druggists. Any advice required as to special cases, and the names of many who have been restored to perfect health by the use of the Vegetable Compound, can be obtained by addressing Mrs. P., with stamp for reply, at her home in Lynn, Mass.

For Kidney Complaint of either sex this compound is unsurpassed as abundant testimonials show.

"Mrs. Pinkham's Liver Pills," says one writer, "are the best in the world for the cure of Constipation, Biliousness and Torpidity of the liver. Her Blood Purifier works wonders in its special line and bids fair to equal the Compound in its popularity.

All must respect her as an Angel of Mercy whose sole ambition is to do good to others.

FIFTH PARLIAMENT—FIRST SESSION.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

TUESDAY, April 17.

The House has been engaged to-day in the discussion in

COMMITTEE OF WAYS AND MEANS

of the tariff resolutions. The proceedings were as a rule uninteresting, Sir Leonard Tilley briefly explaining each item as it came up, and answering questions by members of the Opposition as to the reasons which induced the Government to make the changes. The following additional amendments or modifications, of the first proposed changes have been made:

Carriages.—Buggies of all kinds, farm waggons, and all other carriages not enumerated, railway freight or farm carts, pleasure carts or gigs, and similar vehicles, 35 per cent. ad valorem. Children's carriages of all kinds, 35 per cent. ad valorem. Parts of carriages or other manufactured articles shall be charged with the same rate of duty on a proportional valuation, as that chargeable upon the unfinished article.

Glove leathers.—Viz., buck, deer, elk, and antelope, tanned or dressed, colored or not colored, 10 per cent. ad valorem.

Dressed or Costume Cloths.—Serges and similar fabrics under twenty-five inches wide, and weighing not over three and a half ounces per lineal yard, either or both twenty per cent. ad valorem. Wincies to remain as they are in the present tariff.

Agricultural Implements,—Mowing machines, self-binding harvesters, harvesters without binders, binding attachments, reapers, sulky and walking ploughs, and parts of the same, harrows, scythes, horse and hand hay rakes, garden rakes of any material, grain, seed drills, spades and shovels, hoes, hay, straw, manure, spading, and mining forks, and all similar articles, and parts thereof, thirty-five per cent. ad valorem. Portable machines, portable steam engines, threshers, and separators, horse powers, portable saw mills, and fanning mills, and parts thereof, thirty-five per cent. ad valorem.

Jellies and Jams.—To be five cents per pound, not four cents.

Vaseline in Bulk.—To be four cents per pound, not five cents.

Files and Rasps.—Thirty-five per cent. instead of thirty per cent.

All Medicinal Preparations.—Whether chemical or otherwise, usually imported with the name of the manufacturer, shall have the true name of the manufacturer and the place where they are prepared permanently and legibly affixed to each parcel by stamp, label, or otherwise, and all medicinal preparations imported without such name so affixed shall be forfeited.

Jeans, Coutilles, Cambrics, Silesias, and Casbans.—The duty is to remain as at present, and not be subject to the duty of 27½ per cent. imposed on printed and dyed cottons after January 1st, 1884.

Kid, Tanned or Dressed.—The proposed change to a duty of 15 per cent. on kid, tanned or dressed, and colored or not colored, is dropped.

Fancy Yarns.—The item is also dropped proposing a duty of 20 per cent. on fancy yarns of wool or worsted in two or more plies, when the same are combined in different colors, and mohair yarns in white or in any color, when the same are imported by woollen manufacturers for their own use, in making fancy tweeds.

Buckram.—The proposed duty of 10 per cent. on buckram is stricken out.

Oilcloths.—The item imposing a duty of 15 per cent. on oilcloths, or cloth enamelled, stamped, painted, printed, or similarly prepared, when imported by trunk or valise manufacturers for use in their factories, is struck out.

Cotton Duck.—The importer of cotton duck used for sails of ships or fishing boats is to be entitled to a drawback equal to the duty paid thereon, less five per cent. of the value of the article.

Ireland.

The mutilated body of a well dressed man, a portion of whose face appeared to have been eaten away, was found on the Galtee Mountains, Ireland, 3,000 feet above the sea, lately. It is surmised that he was a stranger who had lost his way.

Captain Boycott, who, two years ago had to be escorted out of Ireland by the military, returned to his home and determined to make peace with his neighbors. He has been so successful that he is free to go where he pleases, without either constables or soldiers to guard him.

At the Newry Petty Sessions on Monday a man named Philip Crilly was charged with having cursed the Queen on the public streets of Camlough on Sunday last. Sub-constable Kane, who arrested the accused, deposed that Crilly cursed the Queen, gave three cheers for the Invincibles, and told the police that he had a good knife and could cut the b—— heart out of them. The accused was remanded for a week.

A small package was directed to Rev. A. H. De Haza Raditz, parish priest, Ditton Hall, Widnes, and he being away, was put aside till his return. It bore Widne and Liverpool postmarks. On the arrival of Father Raditz the package was opened, when it was seen to contain a wooden box two inches in diameter. On the lid being taken off it was found to contain a black, shining substance of the nature of dynamite, in the centre of which was a small hole, as it a fuse had been inserted. The police are investigating the matter.

The report for the past year of the Society for the preservation of the Irish Language states that at the commencement of the present century probably not more than 400 persons could read or write Irish, whereas this society alone had disposed of over 62,000 elementary Irish books. Their publication continue to be in great demand. The number of persons in Ireland who speak the old language is nearly 950,000 as against nearly 818,000 in 1871, although the population had during that period diminished, in round numbers, by 252,000 persons. This, as pointed out, is nearly equal to the number of Welsh people speaking Welsh. 'Not only,' it is observed, 'has Leinster increased its number of Irish speaking inhabitants, but Dublin has made a considerable advance in this respect, partly fulfilling the old Irish prophecy.'

The debt of Great Britain at the close of 1882 was £763,045,000; that of France £960,110,000.

Mr. J. B. Johnston, who is now acting in London, is believed to be the oldest actor on the English stage. His age is 80.

A large portion of the Shepyy Cliffs at Warden, near Sheerness has fallen into the sea carrying with it over three acres of cultivated land.

The sword of honor presented by the inhabitants of Cairo to Lord Wolseley has been forwarded to him. It is of the most costly and magnificent workmanship.

The sword worn by John Hampden has just been sold at auction in London for fifty-eight guineas. It is a long rapier with cross hilt and scroll guard, and was in the possession of the Hampden family until 1861, when it was sold with other effects of John Hampden, a lineal descendant of its original owner.

The remuneration of the London police has been substantially improved of late years, and instead of getting 17s. a week on joining the force, as he did 20 years ago, the lowest class of constable now receives 24s. a week, a change which has improved the quality of the London police in a remarkable degree. The force consists at present of about 10,000 of all ranks, and the number of inspectors and sergeants must be in proportion to the increase.

HORRIBLE DEATH OF A WOMAN.—A widow named Murphy died in the Northern Hospital, Liverpool, from terrible injuries. She and two children occupied an attic destitute of everything except a straw mattress. The woman went home drunk on Saturday night, and falling asleep, a lighted candle fell from the wall on the mattress, setting fire to it. The shrieks of the children brought help, when the woman was found literally roasted in several places, and almost lifeless, her clothes being burnt off and the mattress consumed.

At Stratford-on-Avon, the Town Council discussed the action of the vicar in imposing a fixed charge of 6d. each upon persons desirous of seeing Shakespeare's grave. The Corporation are the lay rectors of the chancel in which the poet's grave and monument are situated. Many thousands of persons visit the church in the course of the year, and the Town Council resolved that if the charge is to be compulsory the money shall be spent upon the fabric of the church, and not devoted towards the payment of the curates' stipends, an undertaking to this effect having been given by the late vicar.

Scotland.

In the Established Church, North Berwick, on Sunday the 18th March, a hearer got up and remarked thus: "You're a cauld preacher, Dr. Sprott, but excuse me for saying so."

A consignment of quails has recently arrived at Inverary; the birds having been sent over from America by Lord Lorne as a present to the Duke of Argyll, who intends to acclimatize them. It was while in California recently that Lord Lorne was struck with the notion. There he found quail as abundant as the Israelites found them in the wilderness, and accordingly he secured several dozen, a very fair percentage of which arrived safely at their destination. The preserves around Inverary should prove a good breeding ground, and should the essay be successful, London, in years to come, may receive its quails with the periodical regularity which characterizes the arrival of its grouse and pheasants.

Davy & Clark, Druggists, Renfrew, date of June 3rd, write:—"Burdock Blood Bitters, though comparatively a new preparation, has taken the lead in this locality as a blood purifier, our sales of it being equal to that of all other medicines used for the purpose during the last year.'

Would you avoid the Biliary complaints incidental to spring and summer? Cleanse the system with Burdock Blood Bitters. It regulates the Liver, Bowels, Kidneys and Blood, and is the purest tonic in the world. Trial bottles 10 cents.

Our Children.

Why compel them to take those vile and nauseating medicines, when Puttner's Emulsion is so palatable and nice, and produces better results than any other. Most astonishing reports are daily recorded in favor of its cures, where other preparations of the kind have failed, and then been cast aside in disgust.

FOR DELICATE WOMEN, who are suffering from Anœmia and weakness, caused from over-nursing, Puttner's Emulsion is just what is required to give tone to the system, and will immediately build them up in health and strength.

A Fact.

If you suffer from Chronic Diseases, and have little faith in advertised remedies and have sought vainly for a cure, consult your Druggist, or address T. Milburn & Co., Toronto, for proof positive regarding the merits of Burdock Blood Bitters, the Great Regulation Blood purifying Tonic, that acts on the liver, kidneys, stomach, bowels and skin.

Samson lost his strength with his hair. Thousands of men and women lose their beauty with theirs, and very large numbers restore the ravages of time by using the famous Cingalese Hair Restorer. Sold at 50 cents per bottle by all Druggists.

Prepare for Spring.—After a long, severe winter the system needs cleansing of impurities. Nature must be assisted to recuperate, the Liver must be made to act, all surplus bile and impurities carried off. Zopesa acts as a gentle purgative. The results of a few doses are most surprising. Ask your druggist for a 10 cent sample, and try Zopesa, the most powerful remedy for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Constipation, and Biliousness ever introduced in this country.

CUT THIS OUT.

"Frank P. Warner came into our store to purchase a sample bottle of ZOPESA for a friend, and stated that he (Mr. Warner) was afflicted with Kidney and Liver troubles for five years, and had paid $200 or $300 doctor's bills, and has now been completely cured by the use of two large bottles and one sample bottle of ZOPESA. He was so bad at one time that he lost 37 pounds of flesh, but after using ZOPESA claims that he is a sound man, and now weighs 145 pounds. He was loud in its praise, and readily consented to allow us to use his name for reference."

Total vote for the Bill	70

The Bill received a majority of the votes of the members present from the Provinces of Ontario, Nova Scotia, Manitoba and British Columbia. In the Provinces of Quebec, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island there was a majority against the Bill.

Of all the Roman Catholic members of the House, but one—Mr. Hawkins, of Bothwell—voted for the Bill.

Of the Protestant Conservatives from Ontario, only two voted against the Bill, namely Messrs. Macmaster and Patterson (Essex.)

Of the Ontario Grits, but two voted for the Bill, and twenty-seven against it, and in addition one of them paired against it.

With this analysis of the vote to guide them, our readers can have no difficulty in determining where the responsibility for the defeat of the Bill rests.

Can't Get It.

Diabetes, Bright's Disease, Kidney, Urinary or Liver Complaints cannot be contracted by you, or your family if Hop Bitters are used, and if you already have any of these diseases Hop Bitters is the only medicine that will positively cure you. Don't forget this, and don't get some puffed up stuff that will only harm you.

J. S. Wetherell, writing from Winnipeg, says: "I can say more about PHOSPHALINE now than when I saw you last in Toronto. My health is much improved, and I am free from headaches or any other aches, having only used two and a half bottles of your Phosphaline. For sale by all Druggists.

Our Iron Industries.

The importance of the following, which we extract from the Ottawa correspondence of the Mail, will be understood at once by all who take an interest in the future of Belleville:

Mr. J. Scales, of Toronto, accompanied by the City Council deputation and the members for the city, had an interview with the Finance Minister relative to the proposed establishment of an iron foundry in Toronto by American capitalists from Cincinnati. Full particulars respecting it appeared in the Mail some weeks ago. Mr. Scales having detailed the plans, asked Sir Leonard Tilley what bounty the Government would be prepared to give the proposed company. The Minister said a company had been recently started in England which intended to work in Canada. It seemed satisfied with what the Government now proposed, namely that a bounty of $1.50 per ton be paid on all pig iron manufactured in Canada from Canadian ore between July 1st, 1883, and June 30th, 1889. The Government were, therefore, not prepared to make a different offer to the American company.

It is thus evident that the people of Toronto are as usual fully awake to their own interests, and it behooves the residents of this city to imitate the energy of the citizens of the Provincial capital. The natural advantages which Belleville possesses as a site for iron smelting works are very much superior to those of Toronto, but it is necessary that those advantages should be made known to the capitalists who propose to engage in the business. It is very much to be regretted that the recommendation of the Executive Committee was not adopted by the Council on Monday night, but if a Committee composed of men of energy and capacity be appointed, a good deal of information, in addition to that which was gathered by a former Committee some two years ago, can be obtained.

As Alderman Dickson was good enough to intimate that suggestions of a practical character, from the press or from persons interested, would be gladly received by the Council, we would suggest that a meeting of that body be held not later than Friday evening, for the purpose of appointing a special Committee. Such Committee should be given large powers, and directed to open correspondence at once with the Finance Minister, with the object of being placed in communication with the English company of which that gentleman spoke.

Still Another Government Crisis in New Brunswick.

PROBABLE DEFEAT OF THE CABINET—STRANGE RUMORS.

FREDERICTON, N. B., April 17—There is a Ministerial crisis here of an exciting character and the probability is that the Government will be defeated. The Opposition have won back one of the men whose dissension caused the defeat of the Hanington Government and the House stands twenty to twenty now, with the Speaker hostile to the Government. A vote of want of confidence comes up for consideration to-morrow, and the casting vote of the Speaker will be given for it when a division is reached. The leaders on both sides are working like beavers to retain their supporters and gain new ones. At a caucus of the Opposition last night it was determined to make the debate as short as possible by refraining from taking part in it. The Government will, of course, advise a dissolution in case of defeat, but it is not believed that the Governor will grant it. He refused Mr. Hanington, and it is expected that he will refuse Mr. Blair.

Flies and Bugs.

Dominion Parliament.

OTTAWA, April 18.—The rules of the House were twice suspended to-day for the purpose of allowing bills to be referred to the Railway Committee in time to allow a report on them to be received by the House.

Just after the Speaker took the chair Mr. Colby introduced a bill to authorize the Grand Trunk to extend their traffic arrangement with the North Shore railway for fifty years. The bill was read a first and second time and referred to the Railway Committee.

Just before the adjournment Sir Hector Langevin proposed that the rule be suspended to admit of the second reading of the bill to increase the harbor accommodation of the city of Toronto, to extend the Esplanade, and to provide for the control of the use thereof by railway Companies. This was agreed to and the bill will come before the Railway Committee on Tuesday.

Mr. Casgrain called attention to the fact that some remarks of Mr. Tyrwhitt's on the Orange bill, to the effect that if Orange incorporation would prevent Irish immigration to Canada it would only have the effect of keeping away from our shores a class which he would be sorry to see come here, were omitted from Hansard. A long discussion ensued, in the course of which the opinion was pretty freely expressed that Hansard reported what members after mature consideration thought they should have said, and not what they did say.

Mr. McLelan's bill respecting certificates to masters and mates of inland coasting vessels, was after a long discussion read a second time and passed through Committee, after which the House adjourned at 11.45.

Beware of Imitations

Since Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has become celebrated, a number of unprincipled persons have been endeavoring to palm off Electron and Electric Oil for the genuine Dr. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. Beware of those similar named articles. If their originators had any faith in the healing properties of their own medicines they would, like honest men, give them the name of their own, and not try to sell them on the reputation of another; that is as they know their preparations have no merit, they resort to the most unprincipled means of selling them by getting a name as near as possible to Eclectric. We therefore ask the public when purchasing to see that the name Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is on the front of the wrapper, and the signature of NORTHROP & LYMAN, the proprietors for Canada on the back.

Corns! Corns! Corns

Everyone suffering from painful corns will be glad to learn that there is a new and painless remedy discovered by which the very worst class of corns may be removed entirely, in a short time and without pain. PUTNAM'S PAINLESS CORN EXTRACTOR has already been used by thousands, and each person who has given it a trial becomes anxious to recommend it to others. It is the only sure, prompt and painless cure for corns known. Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor is sold everywhere. N. C. POLSON & CO., Kingston, Proprietors.

That Appointment of O'Rorke.

To the Editor of the Intelligencer.

SIR,—Not being a subscriber to the Advocate, I did not see the article of the 5th inst., defending the appointment of Patrick John O'Rorke as License Commissioner in place of W. Shea, resigned. The editor of the Advocate says in defence of the appointment, that "we have taken pains to learn how much truth there is in the above choice stab under the rib, and find that the correspondent was drawing on his own imagination when he stated that the appointment gave pretty general dissatisfaction among our Grit friends." The editor of the Advocate says "the fact is, there was no opposition between Messrs. White and O'Rorke." This is doubtless true, as the name of Mr. O'Rorke, as License Commissioner, was never thought of or submitted to the meeting of the Reformers when they met and agreed upon George White as the person whom they desired appointed, and sent a memorial to the Government asking to have him appointed, and the only answer to that request was the appointment of Patrick John O'Rorke—in opposition to their request. They also say that this appointment was dictated solely by Alderman Ryan. That the appointment was and is extremely unpopular is an incontrovertible fact. The denial published in the Advocate, is no other than the vain and egotistical effusion of Mr. O'Rorke's opinion of himself. That he succeeded in making a "a cat's paw," of the Advocate there can be no doubt and why the editor of the Advocate allowed his paper to become the pliant apologist for Mr. O'Rorke, is for him to explain to his patrons. As the exponent of the Conservative party here, he has had the support and patronage of the party and is, therefore, responsible to them for his acts, in travelling so far from the line of political rectitude and supporting the nominee of the Mowat Government. There is one thing evident and that is, he cannot support Mr. O'Rorke, the Mowat Government and the Conservative party here at the same time. If the editor is under the thumb of O'Rorke, he is certainly not in a position to publish a newspaper in the Conservative interest and it would be far better for him to come out as a full fledged Grit supporter and let us have no more double barrelled editors. I am of the opinion that the Advocate might have safely left this matter in the hands of the Courier to defend, as the editor of that paper is quite capable of doing all the dirty work of the entire party. But this would not have served the purpose of Mr. O'Rorke, who seems determined to make the papers here endorse his appointment. I may be permitted to say to the editor of the Advocate and Patrick O'Rorke, that the Conservative party here are capable of looking after their party interests and can very well afford to dispense with both of those gentlemen.

VERMILYEA'S SELF-FITTING CORSET.

PATENTED 1ST MARCH, 1881.

IMPROVED 9TH JUNE, 1882.

TO THE LADIES OF BELLEVILLE AND VICINITY:

IN order to correct an erroneous impression abroad relative to the suit pending between ourselves and J. S. and Elizabeth Guthrie, of St. Catharines, relative to our corset patent, we wish to say that the suit by us against the Guthries does not in any way affect "Vermilyea's self fitting Corset." The question in dispute was whether we had the EXCLUSIVE right to manufacture in this section "Guthrie's Champion Corset" and its improvements. We contended we had the exclusive right. The defendants claimed we had only a right equal with themselves to sell in this section. The Court held that we had not the exclusive right, and we at once took the necessary proceedings for appeal to the full court.

We still have the right, and it is not disputed, to manufacture "Guthrie's Champion Corset," and the improvements thereon in this section. "Vermilyea's Self-Fitting Corset" is not in question, for it is a patent of our own invention, and needs no recommendation as it is so well known to our lady customers all over Ontario. We are now sending our Corsets into New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, and they are also being manufactured in Winnipeg.

We have on hand a full stock of Ladies' Underclothing, all our own manufacture.

Thanking the ladies for patronage in the past we still hope for a continuances of the same.

BELLEVILLE, THURSDAY, APRIL 19.

City and Vicinity.

THE Assizes closed yesterday afternoon.

THE straw hat season has received another set back.

FRANK LOCKERTY was liberated yesterday afternoon.

RIVETERS are still at work at the G. T. R. bridge.

THE stages were delayed to-day by the bad state of the roads.

THIS morning's rain was disastrous for spring bonnets and silk caps.

GILMOUR & Co's mill at Trenton began operations for the season to-day.

THE usefulness of the umbrella and the rubber overcoat were again demonstrated to-day.

MR. S. Stearn, of Kingston, the largest fur dealer in this section, was in the city this morning.

SEVEN prisoners, principally drunks, and four tramps were taken care of in the police station last night.

THE bay was open from this morning from about a half mile west of Massassaga Point, to a short distance east of the Bayside cheese factory.

OWING to the unfavorable weather, the sale of Mr. W. D. Fuller's household furniture and other effects has been postponed until to-morrow.

RESIDENTS of this city should bestow proper attention on the proclamation of the Board of Health, and if they do a general benefit would result.

IT is expected that the steamer Varuna will be able to reach this city from Trenton before Saturday. The Varuna and Ulica steamed into their dock last night from their winter quarters.

THE steamer Nellie Cuthbert is on the bottom at the Red Mill dock, and lies in about six feet of water. The ice pulled the oakum out of her seams, and she then sank. It is thought she can be raised without much difficulty.

THREE special passenger trains passed here early this morning. The first two were devoted to the use of immigrants, among the number being a party of children for the Marchmont Home. The other was destined for Manitoba.

AT the annual meeting of the Midland Railway Company the annual report showed that the Missing Link between Peterboro' and Omemee would be finished by the first of July and that the company were endeavoring to secure elevator accommodation at Belleville.

MR. A. PONTON, P. L. S., of this city, accompanied by John Haslett, Vaughan Roberts, Geo. D. Curtis and a party of chain bearers, left here last night for Manitoba, where they will survey a large territory by direction of the Indian Department. They will be absent two years. Later on they will be joined by others from this city.

JOB LINGHAM started his drive on the Scout on Tuesday. The water was so high in the "Blind Channel" south of Stoco, that he was obliged to order his men to desist from work, as it was feared that were the drive allowed to proceed further disaster to bridges would result.

IT will be seen by advertisement in this issue that the wants of the ladies are to be more fully provided for by the opening of a new fancy goods store, where stamping and fancy work of all kinds can be procured. They are also agents of the well known British American Dyeing Company.

THE attendance at Com'r. Cheyne's first lecture in the City Hall, last night, was small, probably on account of the weather. The lecture was admirable and the illustrations exceedingly beautiful. To-night the Com'r. will lecture on "Egypt and the Late War," when it is to be hoped there will be a large audience.

A FAMILY of four persons, husband, wife and two children, halted here last evening. The great cable master said they were destined for Whitby. After tarrying a short time here they became influenced and were locked up.

THE members of the Sons of England Benevolent Society will meet at their lodge room on Sunday next, the 22nd inst., at 2 o'clock p. m. and proceed to Christ Church for divine service. The Rev. E. W. Sibbald will preach the annual sermon. The Society invite all Englishmen and their descendants to join the procession at their lodge room, Robertson's Block.

THE seven unfortunates who were not out in the wet last night were brought before the Polic Magistrate this morning and all were discharged. The couple alluded to in another paragraph received a lecture abounding with advice and suggestions, such as Mr. Holden occasionally gives without money and without price, after which he told them to leave town at once.

PERCY boom, near the village of Frankford, broke this morning, and the logs that were in it went down the Trent River at a rapid rate. The water in the stream was very high, and when our informant left the scene the safety of Frankford bridge was threatened. A party of Rathbun's river drivers went to Trenton this morning to take care of the logs when they came to the mouth of the river.

A LARGE drive of logs, owned by a resident of Kingston, are in the Blind Channel south of Stoco. A gang of men went out yesterday to work on that drive. The river there is very high, and if the logs came down now serious damages to the bridges in that locality must result. The Reeve of Hungerford ordered the men to desist from their work, but they would not comply and if the bridges are injured a law suit will follow.

THE American Agriculturist for May is an unusually bright and instructive number of this most valuable Farm, Garden and Household Journal. The suggestions for Farm and Garden work are most timely and valuable. The whole fifty five pages of editorial matter are replete with solid, seasonable information, and made most attractive and instructive with nearly a Hundred Engravings. Orange Judd Co. Publishers, 751 Broadway, N. Y. $1.50 per year; single number 15 cents.

THAT a poet, a real live man of genius, is not properly appreciated in his own country, is shown by the following which is clipped from the Brantford Courier of the 16th:—"Canada's celebrated bard Poet Gay was in the city yesterday making his headquarters at the Kerby House. Soon after his arrival his identity was divulged and despite all efforts the poet was unable to approach within 100 yards of any one person, and accordingly he was not afforded an opportunity to spout. However, he managed late last evening to burst in among a number of gentlemen in the bar room, and before any opposition could be offered he commenced. His poems were frequently d——d, but without effect, for a torrent of words poured fourth from his mouth which it was impossible to check. The regaled ones stood it for some time like stoics, but there is an end to all things—Poet Gay's poems being the one exception to this rule—and in a comparatively short space of time the room was cleared as effectually as if one of Wiggins' storms had struck it.

WEATHER PROBABILITIES—Toronto, April 19.—Lakes, moderate to fresh winds shifting to north and northwest, clearing, slightly cooler weather preceded by local rains in southern portion.

PRAISEWORTHY.—Our friend and former fellow townsman, Mr. Geo. F. Williams, having recently been selected by the donors of the "N. Y. Herald Ohio Flood Fund" (which amounted to $53,000,) to be their Commissioner for distributing over $30,000 of it in such places as in his judgment most needed it, has, as we learn from the Louisville Courier Journal, fulfilled his arduous duties satisfactorily, within three weeks. The revenue cutter Lily was placed at his disposal, and over forty desolated towns, villages, and hamlets visited by him, and relief afforded to a greater or less extent. We congratulate "George" on this mark of his fellow-citizens' confidence, and the successful result.

MURCHISON SOCIETY.—At the adjourned meeting of this Society, held at the Museum Rooms on the 16th inst., Thos. Wills, Esq., in the chair, the question of procuring specimens of the birds and animals of the district was again brought up, and it was finally resolved that Messrs. F. S. Wallbridge, S. A. Gardner, and W. R. Smith be a committee to solicit subscriptions from the public for that object. The opinion was expressed that such a request would be liberally responded to by the citizens of Belleville, as by that means the attractiveness of the Museum would be very much increased, as at present, although there is a very fair collection of fossils and minerals, there is only a small representation of the living fauna of the district. This want is one which the Society hope to supply, and for which they ask the liberal assistance of the public, either in subscriptions or presentation of specimens.

Along the River.

The water is level with the road at Corby's Mill. This is the highest stage it is said to have reached in 13 years. The water there is up to the top of the flume and a large supply of big boulders have been placed on top of the frame to keep it from taking it to the more southern section of the river. There is 8 feet of water in the cellar of the mill, and work in that portion of the establishment has been suspended on account of the too liberal supply of the aqueous element, but the distillery goes on just the same and has more orders than it can attend to. All the elevators in the flour mill have had to be taken out. The boiler room also has too liberal a supply of water, but no serious inconvenience has resulted. The injuries to the piers; the raising of the floor in the basement of the Mill and the stoppage of the machinery will cause Mr. Corby considerable inconvenience, but his energy and business push will carry him through.

The material for the new distillery is partly on the ground. There are 70,000 brick, a large quantity of stone, a small half acre of sand, lime, flooring and other requisite lumber, besides 21 tubs.

All the cattle there, which are owned by Mr. Fred Lingham, are in good shape and have filled out remarkably well. In a short time they will be forwarded to the British market. Messrs. Gibson & Geary have a fine collection of porkers there, which are doing remarkably well.

The few sportsmen who live in the vicinity of the mill, have a good opportunity for displaying their marksmanship, as ducks of the whistlewing variety are quite numerous thereabouts. As there are no boats owned there, the ducks are seldom molested and as a consequence can be readily approached. Gunners occasionally manage to lessen the number of ducks which seek the shelter of the dead water above and those that pass the battery of shot, seek safety below the mill.

Above and below Canifton, the river is almost level with the road in several places.

Alex. Sutherland's mill is in operation. The injury to the dam at that point is a temporary benefit, as the water is enabled to pass away rapidly; otherwise the mill in all probability would not be able to run.

Jordan's mill, formerly known as Stinson's, is also at work, though the water flows promiscuously through the yard.

South of Lazier & Son's mill, the water, which is very high, is broken into rapids, which present an attractive sight.

The Hodgson Case

AN ATTEMPT TO COMPROMISE FALLS THROUGH.

(Montreal Star, April 18.)

Mr. Jonathan Hodgson, of Liverpool, England, (brother of Mr. T. H. Hodgson), who has been in the city for a day or two endeavoring to effect a settlement with the creditors of his brother left for New York to-day, having been unable to come to terms. The offer made was to sell all the real estate of T. H. Hodgson, mortgaged to his brother, and divide the proceeds pro rata, but as the brothers who bought the claim of the Bank of Montreal, for $60,000 would rank for the full amount of the debt, $140,000, it is claimed by one of the largest creditors that the estate would only pay about ten cents, and the offer, as far as the institution he represented was concerned, was therefore indignantly refused.

—The loss caused by the fire at Oakville is estimated at $40,000.

—A dynamite explosion occurred on the 18th in the barracks at Dover.

—It has been decided to formally open the East river bridge, New York, on May 24th.

—The enterprising burglar has shown that he is not above using the resources of civilization, as a gang in Essex, Mass., made use of bicycles to facilitate their business and make a speedy escape.

MORNING DESPATCHES.

EUROPEAN.

CURLEY'S SPEECH.

DUBLIN, April 19.—After the jury had rendered their verdict against Daniel Curley, the prisoner, being asked if he had anything to say why sentence should not be pronounced upon him, replied that he had not expected any mercy from the court; it was very unfortunate that the Irish bench was never without a Keogh. He admitted that he was a member of the Invincibles, but he was not in Phœnix Park when the murders were committed. He loved his country and could suffer for her. He declared that the witnesses for the crown had perjured themselves. He also said that he was a Fenian. As the officers were taking the prisoner from the dock, he shouted, "God save Ireland."

AMERICAN.

COLLIERIES CAVING IN.

ASHLAND, Pa., April 19.—There was a cave in in the Tunnel Colliery yesterday. Several houses on the surface went down into the earth. All the occupants escaped, but lost all their household goods. The occupants were warned some time ago, but took no steps towards moving out until yesterday morning, when they saw other houses in the vicinity in danger, and the inmates moving out. The colliery is the deepest mine in the United States. There was a caving in in the Continental Colliery yesterday. Nobody was injured. Work has been suspended. 350 are out of employment.

FIRES IN COAL MINES.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., April 19.—Mine fires in the coal regions are becoming frequent. Immense sums are spent in vain efforts to conquer them. The Coal and Iron Company's colliery at Lotusdale has been on fire for two years, though every was made to extinguish it.

TAXING THE HUMBUGS.

CINCINNATI, O., April 19.—A bill passed by the Legislature imposes a tax of $300 upon spiritualistic mediums. The spiritualists lay the responsibility upon the Methodist Church for the law. The spiritualists claim the mediums are ministers, of their religion, and also upon the pastors and priests of other denominations could have been included in the act or law with equal propriety. They declare the act is oppressive and unconstitutional. They will oppose it to the last.

AFTERNOON DESPATCHES

ARRAIGNING THE DYNAMITERS—UNEARTHING A YANKEE PLOT.

LONDON, April 19.—Norman, Dalton, Wilson, Dr. Gallagher, Bernard Gallagher, Curtin, Ansburg and Whitehead, were brought into Court this morning. Norman was conveyed, by detectives separately from the prisoners Whitehead protested against the handcuffs being placed on his wrists. He declared that the entrance to the Court room was the gates of hell. The prisoners being arraigned, it was announced that Norman had turned informer. The rest of the prisoners, including Bernard Gallagher and Whitehead, were formally charged with treason and felony. Mr. Poland, Crown Counsel, said he had a quantity of fresh evidence against the prisoners, which would be furnished at the proper time. Norman testified that his real name was William Joseph Lynch, and that he was born of Irish parents in the State of New York.

LONDON, April 19.—Lynch swore he worked in October last at a coach builder's in Brooklyn. He then joined a secret society in New York, the object of which was to free Ireland by force. The members went by numbers. The hall in which he was sworn in was situated on the corner of Second street and the Bowery, occupied by a number of the other associate clubs. The managers of the clubs were known as district members. They were not known to each other by name, The members were selected to go on missions. Such was sent to Dr. Gallagher, who lived at Greenpoint. Gallagher told him to go to London; he would know what for when he got there. Gallagher gave him $50 and told him to go steerage passage by the steamer Spain, under the name of Norman. Gallagher gave him $100 more, and told him as to go to London and enquire at the American Exchange for a letter addressed to him. Lynch did not want to go, as he had relatives to support, but finally went. Gallagher gave him a small box, which he examined on the steamer, and finding that it contained a spring, which worked by pressure, he became alarmed and threw it into the sea.

ANOTHER MURDERER ON TRIAL.

DUBLIN, April 19.—The trial of Timothy Kelly, charged with participating in the murders of Cavendish and Burke, began this morning. Sullivan and Molinery were appointed to conduct the defense, the Judge having released Webb and Adams. The jury was then sworn in. One of the members is a Parnellite and, consequently, it is expected that the jury will disagree.

are never imitated or counterfeited. This is especially true of a family medicine, and it is positive proof that the remedy imitated is of the highest value. As soon as it had been tested and proved by the whole world that Hop Bitters was the purest, best and most valuable family medicine ever come on earth, many imitations sprung up and began to steal the notices in which the press and people of the country had expressed the merits of H. B., and in every way trying to induce suffering invalids to use their stuff instead, expecting to make money on the credit, and good name of H. B. Many others started nostrums put up in similar style to H. B., with variously devised names in which the word "Hop" or "Hops" were used in a way to induce people to believe they were the same as Hop Bitters. All such pretended remedies or cures, no matter what their style or name is, and especially those with the word "Hop" or "Hops" in their name or in any way connected with them or their name, are imitations or counterfeits. Beware of them. Touch none of them. Use nothing but genuine Hop Bitters, with a bunch or cluster of green Hops on the white label. Trust nothing else. Druggists and dealers are warned against dealing in imitations or counterfeits.

Daily Intelligencer.

One of Earth's Angels.

But strength to speak and think was slowly returning; and one evening, in the pale twilight, opening his eyes, he saw Kate sitting beside him, reading. He lay and watched her, strong enough to think how beautiful that perfect face was in the tender light, and to feel a delicious thrill of pleasure, weak as he was, at having her for a nurse.

Presently Kate looked from the book to the bed, and blushed beautifully to find the keenest brown eyes watching her so intently.

'I did not know you were awake,' she said, composedly. 'Shall I go and call Grace?'

'On no account. I don't want Grace. How long have I been sick?'

'Oh, many weeks; but you are getting better rapidly now.'

'I can't recall it,' he said, contracting his brows. 'I know there was a fire, and I was in the house; but it is all confused. How was it?'

'The Hall was burned down, you know —poor old house!—and you rushed in to save Eony, and—'

'Oh, I remember, I remember. A beam or something fell, and after that all is oblivion. I have had a fever, I suppose?'

'Yes, you have been a dreadful nuisance —talking all day and all night about all manner of subjects, and frightening us out of our lives.'

The young man smiled.

'What did I talk about? Anything very foolish?'

'I dare say it was foolish enough, if one could have understood it, but it was nearly all Greek to me. Sometimes you were in Germany, talking in that dreadful manner of outlandish things; sometimes you were in New York, playing Good Samaritan to Agnes Darling.'

'Oh, poor Agnes! Where is she?'

'Taken to the high seas. She and Harry had to go, much against their inclinations, while you were so ill.'

'And Eony—did Eony suffer any harm that night?'

'No; Doctor Frank was the only sufferer. The poor old house was burned to the ground. I was so sorry.'

'And everything was lost?'

'No, a great many things were saved. And they are building a new and much more handsome Danton Hall; but I shall never love it as I did the old place.'

'Where are we now?'

'In the village. We have taken this cottage until the new house is finished. Now don't ask any more questions. Too much talking isn't good for you.'

'How very peremptory you are!' said the invalid, smiling; 'and you have taken care of me all this weary time. What a trouble I must have been!'

'Didn't I say so?' A shocking trouble. And now that you are able to converse rationally, you are more trouble than ever, asking so many questions. Go to sleep.'

'Won't you let me thank you first?'

'No, thanks never would repay me for all the annoyance you have been. Show your gratitude by obedience, sir—stop talking and go to sleep.'

Perhaps Doctor Frank found it very pleasant to be ordered, for he obeyed with a smile on his face.

Of course, with such a nurse as Miss Danton, the man would be obstinate, indeed, who would not rally. Doctor Frank was the reverse of obdurate, and rallied with astonishing rapidity. His sister, Eony, and Kate were the most devoted, the most attentive of nurses; but the hours that Captain Danton's eldest daughter sat by his bedside flew like so many minutes. It was very pleasant to lie there, propped up with pillows, with the April sunshine lying in yellow squares on the faded old carpet, and watch that beautiful face, bending over some piece of elaborate embroidery, or the humble dress of a village child. Sing-song for him, too, charming romances, and poetry as sweet as the ripple of a sunlit brook, in that enchanting voice of hers; and Doctor Frank began to think convalescence the most delightful state of being that was ever heard of, and to wish it could last forever.

But, like all the pleasant things of this checkered life, it came to an end all too soon. The day arrived when he sat up in his easy chair by the open window, with the scented breezes blowing in his face, and watched dreamily the cows grazing in the fields, and the dark-eyed French girls tripping up and down the dusty road. Then, a little later, and he could walk about in the tiny garden before the cottage, and sit up the whole day long. He was getting better fast; and Miss Danton, concluding her occupation was gone, became very much like the Miss Danton of old. Not imperious and proud—she never would be that again—but reserved and distant, and altogether changed; the delightful readings were no more, the pleasant *tete a tete*s were among the things of the past, the long hours spent by his side, with some womanly work in her fingers, were over and gone. She was very kind and gentle still, and the smile that always greeted him was very bright and sweet, but that heavenly past was gone forever. Doctor Frank, about as clear-sighted as his sex generally are, of course never guessed within a mile of the truth.

'What a fool I was!' he thought, bitterly, 'flattering myself with such insane dreams. Because she was grateful to me for saving her sister's life, and pitied me when she thought I was at death's door. Why, she nursed every sick pauper in St. Croix as tenderly and as well. She is right to put me back in my place before I have made an idiot of myself!'

So the convalescent gentleman became moody, and silent, and generally disagreeable; and Grace was the only one who guessed at his feelings and was sorry for him. But he grew well in spite of hidden trouble, and began to think of what he was to do in the future.

'I'll go back to Montreal next week, I think,' he said to his sister; 'now that the fever is gone, it won't pay to stay here. If I don't get on in Montreal, I'll try New York.'

Mail proposes, etc. That evening's mail brought him a letter that materially altered all his plans. He sat so long, silent and thoughtful after reading it, that Grace looked at him in surprise.

'You look as grave as an owl, Frank. Whom is your letter from?'

Doctor Frank started out of his reverie to find Kate's eyes fixed inquiringly upon him too.

'From Messrs. Grayson & Hambert, my uncle's solicitors. He is dead.'

Grace uttered a little cry.

'Dead! Frank! And you are his heir!'

'Yes.'

'How much has he left?' Mrs. Danton asked, breathlessly.

'Twenty thousand pounds.'

Grace clasped her hands.

'Twenty thousand pounds!' My dear Frank! You have no need to go slaving at your profession now.'

Her brother looked at her in quiet surprise.

'I shall slave at my profession all the same. This wind-fall will, however, alter my plans a good deal. I must start for Montreal to-morrow morning.'

He rose and left the room. Grace turned to her step daughter.

'I am afraid you must think us heartless, Kate; but we have known very little of this uncle, and that little was not favorable. He was a miser—a stern and hard man—living always alone and with few friends. I am so thankful he left his money to Frank.'

Doctor Frank left St. Croix next morning for the city, and his absence made a strange blank in the family. The spring days wore on slowly. April was gone, and it was May. Captain Danton was absent the best part of every day, superintending the erection of the new house, and the three women were left alone. Miss Danton grew listless and languid. She spent her days in purposeless loiterings in and out of the cottage, in long reveries and solitary walks.

The middle of May came without bringing the young Doctor, or even a letter from him. The family were seated one moonlight night in the large, old-fashioned porch in front of the cottage, enjoying the moonlight and Eony's piano. Kate sat in a rustic arm chair just outside, looking up at the silvery crescent swimming through pearly clouds, and the flickering shadows of the climbing sweetbrier coming and going on her fair face. Captain Danton smoked and Grace talked to him; and while she sat, Father Francis opened the garden gate and joined them.

RACKED BY INNUMERABLE PANGS, restless by day, sleepless at night, rising unrefreshed in the morning, without appetite and perfected by varying and perplexing symptoms, the dyspeptic takes indeed a gloomy view of human existence. For him the zest of life seems gone. Heartburn, oppression at the pit of the stomach, and the attendent annoyances of of constipation and biliousness, combine to render him utterly wretched. But there is, if he will but take advantage of it, a reliable source of reliable relief from all misery. NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY and DYSPEPTIC CURE is, as its name imports, a botanic preparation, free from mineral poisons, and as all-sufficient remedy for indigestion in its most obstinate form. It not only enriches the blood by enabling the digestive organs to convert the food received into nutriment, but disperses it by increasing the action of the bowels and kidneys, the natural outlets for its impurities. But while it blazes the bowels, it never does so violently and with pain, like a drastic cathartic. It aids, but never forces, Nature, invigorates as well as purifying and regulating the system. It thoroughly removes those diseased humors which tend to vitiate the blood, purifies the urinary secretion, and promises a flow of healthy bile into the natural channel, besides expelling it from the circulation. Experience has proved that this standard medicine is a thorough remedy for dyspepsia, biliousness, costiveness, kidney complaints, scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, humors and all impurities of the blood. Price $1.00. Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac-simile of their signature. Sold by all medicine dealers

A NOTED BUT UNTITLED WOMAN.

[From the Boston Globe.]

Messrs. Editors:—

The above is a good likeness of Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., who above all other human beings may be truthfully called the "Dear Friend of Woman," as some of her correspondents love to call her. She is zealously devoted to her work, which is the outcome of a life-study, and is obliged to keep six lady assistants, to help her answer the large correspondence which daily pours in upon her, each bearing its special burden of suffering, or joy at release from it. Her Vegetable Compound is a medicine for good and not evil purposes. I have personally investigated it and am satisfied of the truth of this.

On account of its proven merits, it is recommended and prescribed by the best physicians in the country. One says: "It works like a charm and saves much pain. It will cure entirely the worst form of falling of the uterus, Leucorrhœa, irregular and painful Menstruation, all Ovarian Troubles, Inflammation and Ulceration, Floodings, all Displacements and the consequent spinal weakness, and is especially adapted to the Change of Life."

It permeates every portion of the system, and gives new life and vigor. It removes faintness, flatulency, destroys all craving for stimulants, and relieves weakness of the stomach. It cures Bloating, Headaches, Nervous Prostration, General Debility, Sleeplessness, Depression and Indigestion. That feeling of bearing down, causing pain, weight and backache, is always permanently cured by its use. It will at all times, and under all circumstances, act in harmony with the law that governs the female system.

It costs only $1. per bottle or six for $5., and is sold by druggists. Any advice required as to special cases, and the names of many who have been restored to perfect health by the use of the Vegetable Compound, can be obtained by addressing Mrs. P., with stamp for reply, at her home in Lynn, Mass.

For Kidney Complaint of either sex this compound is unsurpassed as abundant testimonials show.

"Mrs. Pinkham's Liver Pills," says one writer, "are the best in the world for the cure of Constipation, Biliousness and Torpidity of the liver. Her Blood Purifier works wonders in its special line and bids fair to equal the Compound in its popularity.

All must respect her as an Angel of Mercy whose sole ambition is to do good to others.

Suicide in a Church at Rome.

A startling incident took place in the Church of the Apostles, in the Piazza of that name, in Rome. Alessandro Palcombi, a watchmaker, well known as a steady, religious man, and the father of a family, entered the church between six and seven o'clock in the morning. A priest was saying mass at a side altar, and the sacristan and workmen were busy with preparations for the exhibition of the Holy Sepulchre. Many persons were praying or engaged in confessing. Palcombi having confessed and communicated, went to the chapel of the Sepulchre, knelt down, and, pulling out a revolver, shot himself in the head, inflicting what is probably a fatal wound. The consternation in the church was extreme, especially among the clergy, because the act desecrated the church, and unless the reconsecration could be performed in all haste the great ceremonial of Holy Thursday could not be performed in that church. The church was immediately closed. Fortunately a substitute for the Vicar-General was found at once, and the ceremonial of consecration was instantly performed, so that the exhibition of the Holy Sepulchre took place the same afternoon. The event has caused a great sensation in the religious world of Rome. The cause of the attempted suicide is unknown.

Outrage in a Cathedral.

At the Mansion House, George Campion, aged thirty-eight, who described himself as an inventor of agricultural implements, at Devonshire square, E. C., was charged with maliciously disturbing the congregation at St. Paul's Cathedral, and with wilfully breaking the ornaments of the communion table. Canon Gregory deposed that they had just commenced singing the anthem when he saw the prisoner racing up the choir as hard as he could run. Witness instantly ran out of his stall, thinking the accused was a madman who was bent upon doing some mischief at the east end of the church. As witness ran after him he saw the prisoner leap upon the Communion table, seize the cross which had been there some twelve or fifteen years, and dash it down to the ground as hard as he could. The prisoner then dashed down one candlestick to his right hand and another to his left, and next he began to throw down some vases containing flowers. At that time several gentlemen had reached the Communion table. There were more than 1,000 persons present in the Cathedral at the time. Upon the gentlemen reaching the Communion table the prisoner said, "I surrender, I surrender," and then jumped down from the altar, and began uttering the cry, "Protestants to the rescue!" They did their best to stop the prisoner's cries, and took him without violence to the aisle of the choir, sent for a policeman, and gave him in charge. Replying to Sir Thomas Owden, Canon Gregory said there was nothing new or unusual on the Communion table, there being substantially the same ornaments upon the altar as there had been for the last thirty or forty years, with the exception that a larger cross was placed there twelve or fifteen years ago. The accused endeavored to cross-examine the witness with respect to practices which he alleged were Ritualistic, but Sir Thomas Owden, who presided, declined to enter into that question. On the prisoner promising not to make further disturbances, Sir Thomas Owden imposed a fine of £5, or, in default, one month's imprisonment. The fine was paid by a friend.

Skimmed Milk for Hens and Chickens.

There is nothing better for laying hens in the spring than milk, after the cream has been taken off. We have tried it several seasons with complete success. With the milk given fresh from the dairy room every day, the fowls will need no other drink, and it will supply everything required in the way of animal food. The pullets fed with milk and corn, and a mixture of corn meal and milk, through the cold weather, have given an abundant supply of eggs. Wheat bran is also a good article to mix with the milk. It is better to give the mixture a boiling and to feed it in the warm state, but this is not necessary. We have also found the milk one of the best kinds of diet for young chickens, soon after they come from the nest, to promote their health and rapid growth. Indian meal, ground coarse, and scalded with milk, is a perfect feed for them. As they grow older, grass, cabbage, or onions may be chopped fine and added to the daily rations. A portion of the milk on dairy farms, usually going to the pig trough, may be diverted to the chicken coop with great advantage. Eggs are worth twenty-five cents a dozen, and poultry twenty cents a pound, when pork brings but ten cents a pound.—American Agriculturist for May.

Raising Fine Wooled Sheep.

The directors of the Union or Hamilton Exhibition have taken a new departure in regard to the encouragement of raising fine wooled sheep. They have added a special class for Canadian bred Southdowns. Some of the Southdown men have thought that it is not giving a fair show to them to allow the importers of the prize winners at the Royal or other English exhibitions to run round all our exhibitions and carry off all the first prizes, as it is claimed that these prize winners seldom do good to the real breeder, but only give a reputation, often undeserved, to dealers; also that these imported show ewes seldom breed, and that we are encouraging the speculator rather than the breeder. By awarding the same prizes to Canadians we encourage our farmers to strive for honors. The subject deserves the consideration of the directors of other exhibitions. We know that for a long series of years Canadians have not had the same privileges and encouragement that importers have had. For instance, when exhibiting at the Provincial, if an animal gained a prize and it was imported, the prize money was doubled. This was militating against the Canadian breeder, and paying a premium to foreigners. Canada has now the nucleus of as good stock as any other country. It only requires the care, the feed, and the attention to compete with any in the world. Canadians have not as long purses to continue the feeding and care that many wealthy foreigners have; but for profit and use Canadians can produce such as are suitable to our requirements just as well as foreigners. So support Canadian expenditure for the benefit of Canadians.—Farmers' Advocate.

Close Pruning for Small Fruits.

The importance of thinning canes, and shortening in the wood of the small fruits, is not generally understood by the average farmer. He thinks he has done his duty when he has planted his currant bushes and raspberries under the wall or fence and left them to the rivalry of weeds and their own suckers. His grape vine climbs an apple tree, or the trellis on the side of barn without much pruning and he blames the nurseryman for imposing upon him with worthless varieties of fruit. Let him apply the knife to the grape vine cutting back all the new wood to two eyes, after the vine has covered the trellis, and he will see clusters to rejoice his vision and palate. Only four canes to the stool should be left for the raspberry, and treat other shoots as weeds. Even the canes that are left to grow, after the old ones have finished bearing and are cut away, should have their branches shortened in, by thumb pruning, to give the best results. Manure your currant bushes with ashes; keep down the worms with white hellebore, cut out one-third the wood every season, and even the old Red Dutch currant will surprise you with its fine fruit.—American Agriculturist for May.

Spare the Destroyers of the Potato Bug.

A number of insects aid the farmer and gardener in keeping the greatest of potato pests, the Colorado beetle, in check. The Lady-bugs or "Lady-birds," in their larval state, are among the most effective enemies of the "potato bug," doing valuable service in destroying both eggs and larvæ. The mature lady-bugs are red pink or bright color, with small black dots, and should be known and protected by all farmers.

Some of the tiger beetles do a good work against the potato beetle. The Lydella doryphora is an internal parasite, closely resembling a common fly, and is one of the most efficient destroyers of the Colorado beetle. The female fly attaches a single egg to the body of the potato larva. The small footless maggot soon hatches, burrows into the body of its victim, and finally destroys it. This fly may be seen buzzing about in the summer, and at times is so abundant in potato fields, as to remind one of a swarm of bees.

A species of mite (Uropoda Americana) attacks the beetle and sometimes so covers its host that no part of the beetle is visible. This external parasite is about the size of a small pin head, and is yellowish brown.

Several birds feed upon the potato beetle, among which is the too much persecuted crow. This sable bird will even dig into the earth for the hibernating individuals. The services of the common quail are underrated in this respect. The rose breasted grosbeak has a fondness for the potato beetle, and does much good by feeding upon it. Ducks and chickens have learned to eat the larvæ, and some fowls have overcome their native dislike for the mature insect. Thirty or forty perfect beetles have been found in a chicken's crop.

Among quadrupeds the skunk sometimes eats the potato beetle, while the common toad and black snake feed freely upon this pest of the farm.

The various poisons employed, among which Paris Green and London Purple take the lead, are effective and easily applied; but every precaution should be taken to favor the natural enemies, and thus help to so adjust the system of nature that it will favor the healthful growth of all farm and garden crops. Spare the insect and other enemies of the potato beetle, and there will be less need of applying dangerous arsenical compounds.—American Agriculturist for May.

MY DEAR SIR,—In September last I contracted a severe cold, which settled on my lungs, quite seriously affecting the left one. I had a very bad cough, accompanied by expectoration, indicative of Pulmonary Phthisis. My strength decreased and spirits sank very low, and when I called upon you, I was in doubt whether any medical treatment would avail in my case. Under your treatment I have already recovered my wonted strength and health. My strength has increased, my cough has ceased, and in every way I feel much benefitted by your treatment.

You are at perfect liberty to use these statements as you please. Very sincerely yours,

BELLEVILLE, FRIDAY, APRIL 20.

Prince Edward County Election.

Under the above heading, the Globe furnishes, in its issue of the 18th inst., the following little bit of the inner history of the Grit party :

It will be remembered that the election in this county was between two Reformers, Mr. James Hart, and the late popular member, Mr. Gideon Striker. The Conservatives, being hopeless of electing a Conservative, gave their support to Mr. Hart, and he received a sufficient number of Reform votes to give him a small majority over his opponent. Mr. Hart has been all his life a true Reformer and a friend of the Mowat Government, and no pro claimed himself during the contest. We learn that Mr. Striker came to Toronto yesterday with a petition against the return, and the funds to make the deposit. Seeing the Attorney-General, however, the latter prevailed on him as a friend of the Government not to file the petition, the Attorney-General having received assurances from various quarters, which he had no doubt can be relied upon, that Mr. Hart had not changed his party, had no sympathy with the Opposition, and would give the Government a loyal support. The petition is therefore not to be filed, and the majority of the Government is eleven instead of nine, as has been assumed.

We should like to know when and where Mr. Hart proclaimed himself, during the contest, to be a friend of the Mowat Government, and the journal which so states ought to furnish particulars as to the time and place of such utterances and the words used by Mr. Hart. The facts that Mr. Hart has been opposed to the Mowat Government since 1879 ; that he was tendered and accepted the nomination of the Conservative party, by the votes of which party he was elected ; that Mr. Hardy and other Grit emissaries went into Prince Edward and addressed public meetings in opposition to Mr. Hart's candidature, all go to disprove the assertion of the Globe and the "assurances" which Mr. Mowat had "received from various quarters" that Mr. Hart will support the Government.

Further, we do not believe that Mr. Striker would willing give way even to a supporter of the Government, and therefore we incline to the opinion that, if he abandoned the petition at Mr. Mowat's instance, some substantial consideration must either have been given or promised, and that Mr. Mowat must have been deceived. There is but one person who can clear up the doubt which the Grit party have cast upon his position, and that person is Mr. Hart. That gentleman owes to those who voted for him in the late election a clear and unmistakable explanation of his position, and this we trust that he will give at an early day.

Editorial Brevities.

Mr. Lowe, the Deputy Minister of Agriculture, has investigated the figures furnished by the Yankee agent at Port Huron, as representing the emigration from Canada to the United States. Instead of 71,242 emigrants, as stated by the aforesaid agent, Mr. Lowe has found that the number was but 2,422.

The Toronto Canadian suggests, in view of the theft of official correspondence and the forgery of a letter by a Grit agent, that if the upholders of Mr. Mackenzie's "standard of political morality" cannot keep it aloft without committing larceny, they had better furl their banner and run up a black flag.

Bishop Cleary has denounced the Kingston papers as immoral. The Whig and News don't agree with the Bishop, neither do the Protestant clergy of the city, the leaders of the Salvation Army, nor prominent laymen, Roman Catholics and Protestants, who have been interviewed on the subject.

The Globe argues with all its might against the Dominion Franchise bill as suggesting irresistibly "the utter nonsense of attempting to draw a hard and fast line in the matter of the property qualification of voters." Our contemporary is, then, opposed to its party on this question, the Ontario franchise being vastly less liberal than that which is proposed for the Dominion ; and Mr. Mowat's supporters voted down a proposition to liberalize the franchise which was made during the last session of the Legislature.

The organ further says : "We all know how the property qualification works in practice. Partizans get hold of the assessorships and they decide between a great many of the people as to who is or who is not to vote." There is some force in this contention, witness the frauds in Thurlow. Such rascality as the Globe alleges, when perpetrated on an extensive scale defeats itself, however, as the courts seldom or never hesitate to do justice in such cases. Witness, again, the correction of the Grit manipulation of the voter's list of Thurlow.

Despite the fault finding of the Grit organ, the Government's proposals have been received with great favor by the public generally. The independent newspapers are unanimous, so far as we have seen, in praising the Premier's bill as liberal and founded on a correct principle. The Montreal Post, which is usually hostile to the Government, remarks : "The bill by establishing a much needed uniformity and securing a desirable enlargement of the franchise will, no doubt, commend itself to the favor of the House and to the approval of the country." The Toronto World, which is generally fair in its criticisms, is also in favor of the bill. It says : "Sir John Macdonald has stolen a march on the Liberals in the matter of the franchise. The latter have been too cautious for a progressive party. A true reforming party will force reform ; our Reformers always calculate whether a proposed reform will help them to gain or hold office." With the unanimous support of his party, with the approval of the independent press, and with the sympathy of a portion of the Grit party, the Premier can afford to laugh at the captious criticisms of the Globe and the chronic malcontents who have followed its lead in condemning this most liberal measure.

Dominion Parliament.

THURSDAY, April 19.

THE PIG IRON BOUNTY.

The House resolved itself into Committee.

Sir Leonard Tilley, in moving that it is expedient to provide by law that a bounty of one dollar and fifty cents per ton be paid on all pig iron manufactured in Canada from Canadian ore, between the first day of July, 1883, and the thirtieth day of June, 1886, inclusive, and that a bounty of one dollar per ton be paid in the like manner on the same manufactured between the first day of July, 1886, and the thirtieth day of June, 1889, inclusive, said that during the last two years the Government had been urged to give some additional encouragement to the development of the iron industry, and last session he had promised to take the matter into consideration, and to meet, as far as possible, the demands of the industry. One of the difficulties the Government had to meet was that in increasing the duty on pig iron, which was a raw material, it might result, as we were not producing all we require, in an increase of the price to manufacturers. In order to avoid that difficulty it had been thought desirable to come to the House and ask it to give for the production of pig iron a bounty for six years, the bounty to be $1.50 per ton for the first three years, and $1 per ton for the next three years. There were three iron manufacturing industries in Canada, one at Londonderry, one at Three Rivers, and one at Woodstock, N. B. The production of these was probably 20,000 tons during last year.

Mr. Mackenzie—How much did we import ?

Sir Leonard Tilley—50,431 tons last year. It was expected that during next year, from July, 1883, to July, 1884, there would be 35,000 or 40,000 tons manufactured in the existing establishments.

Mr. Ross (Middlesex)—Does the hon. gentleman intend to pay the bounty to [illegible]

Sir Leonard Tilley replied in the affirmative. It would be unfair to give it to new furnaces and not to give it to the old ones.

Mr. Blake—Where will there be any new industries ?

Sir Leonard Tilley—In the neighborhood of Ottawa there is to be one, and in the rear of Belleville there is to be another.

After further discussion, the resolution was adopted.

Mr. Caron's Militia bill was passed through Committee of the whole and reported. On the motion for the third reading, Mr. Ross (Middlesex) moved an amendment to the effect that the sale of beer be prohibited in canteens.

Sir Leonard Tilley at once moved the adjournment of the debate, which was carried.

The House then went into concurrence on the tariff resolutions.

Messrs. Blake and Fisher made strong speeches in favor of exempting books.

A number of resolutions were concurred in to come into effect to morrow, April 20, with the exception of agricultural implements, which does not, as already announced, come into effect until May 10.

The House adjourned at 1.15.

Beware of Imitations.

Since Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has become celebrated, a number of unprincipled persons have been endeavoring to palm off Electron and Electric Oil for the genuine DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. Beware of these similar named articles. If their originators had any faith in the healing properties of their own medicines they would, like honest men, give them name of their own, and not try to sell them the reputation of another ; but as they know their preparations have no merit, they resort to the most unprincipled means of selling them by getting a name as near as possible to Eclectric. We therefore ask the public when purchasing to see that the name DR. THOMAS' Eclectric Oil is on the front of the wrapper, and the signature of NORTHROP & LYMAN, the proprietors for Canada on the back.

Mental Probes.

To the Editor of the Intelligencer.

SIR,—In view of the approaching visit of Mr. Stuart Cumberland, I would suggest the appointment of a representative committee to investigate the phenomena which Mr. Cumberland professes to demonstrate. If a few Bellevillites succeeded in exposing Dr. Slade, who had non plussed the scientists of Germany, perhaps we may throw some new light on the thought reading of Mr. Cumberland, who, however, is not to be classed in the same category as Slade. Much, at any rate, might be done in the way of showing that the power is not confined to one or two individuals of exceptionally sensitive organism or delicate nervous perceptions and receptivity, but that it is to a certain extent possessed by all who have anything sympathetic in their nature. It has always been a Utopia of poets that in the time to come words will be dispensed with, and our thoughts will flow into each other's minds without verbal communication.

"And thought crept out to wed with thought,
Ere thought could wed itself with speech."

Perhaps the faculty may be strengthened by cultivation and by intense application to such an extent that even abstract thoughts may be divined, but I doubt whether even Mr. Cumberland or Mr. Bishop has ever read a thought which had not for its basis some present material object. In order to explode the "electric current theory," would it not be well to ask Mr. Cumberland to hold two individuals at once—each thinking of a different object—and require him to read their respective thoughts successively. Let us choose several pairs of cognate spirits such as Mr. Geo. D. Dickson, Q. C. and Mr. T. S. Carman—or Mr. B. Falkiner and the enforcer of the Snow By-law—or our local Goldwin Smith and the Young editor of the Trenton, Courier, (the one epigrammatical the other grammatical)—or Alderman Starling and the City Missionary—or S. S. Burdett and an Irishman, or any other chums the proximity of whose magnetic poles will not disturb Mr. Cumberland's search after knowledge.

Perhaps he may tell us whether Belleville or Preston or Toronto or Kingston is to have the smelting works which must come now or never.

Yours,
STANDARD.

For the Intelligencer.

In answer to many of my old friends in Hastings, allow me to say, that I wintered through all right in Manitoba. The oldest inhabitant tells me this has been an unusually cold winter, and yet, I never enjoyed a winter better in Ontario. Our clear sky, and bracing atmosphere, is most enjoyable. I feel as though my youth has been renewed, by coming to this country. The possibilities of this land cannot be exaggerated. Think of the millions of acres of rich fertile land without a stick or a stone waiting to be turned over, and yielding to the tiller its golden returns. And then those rich hills to be literally given away, by our Government, on the sole condition of honestly taking possession, and cultivating, and occupying the same for three short years or six months in each year, for three years. In Dakota five years residence is required, before a deed issues and then an offensive oath, that discriminates against Great Britain, must be taken by the settler, before his title is perfected. How unpatriotic for a portion of the Ontario press, to be ever decrying our own land, and extolling the land across the border. I can assure my many friends in the east, that every possible encouragement is afforded by our own Government to real settlers, and that every industrious poor man, coming here, can soon make unto himself comfortable.

The churches are actively engaged in their legitimate work and laboring hard to promote the spiritual welfare of the people. The Sabbath is faithfully observed and law, human and Divine, respected. The contrast between Manitoba, and her Democratic neighbor is very marked indeed. Our rich prairies, extensive coal fields, and gold, and silver mines send out an inviting welcome to the frugal and industrious of all lands and bid them come.

F. M. FINN,
M. E. Minister.

CARMAN, April 9th, 1883.

To the Editor of the Intelligencer.

William T. Randall, D. R. O., of Lonsdale, does not seem to be satisfied with the piece of political jobbery carried out by him and his colleagues in the late election. He now tries, through the Chronicle, to polish over the "Lonsdale scheme" by bringing forward the plea of ignorance. We are not going to deny Mr. Randall's claim to having a surplus of that enviable possession.

It does not seem possible, though, that a man who has filled the position of D. R. O. for the length of time Mr. Randall has, would make such a mistake without having some corrupt object in view. Mr. Randall makes the assertion that "the scrutineer presented himself with a paper filled in, in a very awkward manner." When Mr. Randall makes this assertion, he does not seem to have the least regard for the truth. He says that "those persons resisted that I could not be admitted as a scrutineer." The party present was made up of four or five Grits of the blackest dye and the son of the would-be M. P. P., with Mr. Randall to bear their standard. Again, he tells us that "he wanted me to wait until he could satisfy himself whether my papers were right or not." Mr. Randall again forgets that it is sinful to lie. In the last place he tells us that "the vote I challenged was as good as my own. I being in the same position." Here, again, Mr. Randall forgets that he has arrived at the years of accountability, and that he will be held responsible for penning such falsehoods. We think it would be to the interest of the "Reform party" and Mr. Randall also for him to forsake the political arena, and give his undivided attention to the importation of pickle-grinders and white rats from the United States. Should he fail in this, we have great faith in him as a writer of fiction.

Can you find a case of Bright's Disease of the Kidneys, Diabetes, Urinary or Liver Complaints that is curable, that Hop Bitters has not or cannot cure? Ask your neighbors if they can.

A common, and often fatal, disease is Jaundice. Regulate the action of the Liver, and cleanse the blood with Burdock Blood Bitters, and the worst case may be speedily cured.

A HORRIBLE DEATH

Fatal Effects of two Much Whiskey, Wine and Beer.

QUEBEC, April 18.

A frightful death occurred here to-day. Philip Turgeon, a dry goods clerk aged about 28, left his residence at 3 p. m. yesterday, in apparently good health and perfectly sober. He was brought home at 20 minutes to 4 in a comatose condition, senseless and unconscious. His family deeming him under the influence of liquor, thought it would wear off, and did during his forty minutes' absence from home deceased visited a tavern kept by one Tessier, where it is said for a wager he swallowed in rapid succession five glasses of whiskey and two of beer mixed with wine and whiskey. On taking the last tumbler it was noticed that the unfortunate man turned suddenly pale and fell senseless, in which condition he was taken home as already stated. Deceased was married and leaves a young wife of twenty years and an infant of sixteen months. Octave Lartie, carter, the party who wagered with the deceased, and one Drouin, who was also present and urging him to drink, have been arrested as accessories to his death. It has been ascertained that the tumbler used by deceased was what is styled a soda water tumbler and that he imbibed about a quart and a gill of whiskey besides nearly the same quantity of beer and port wine, all within the space of fifteen minutes.

VERMILYEA'S SELF-FITTING CORSET.

PATENTED 1ST MARCH, 1881. IMPROVED 9TH JUNE, 1882.

TO THE LADIES OF BELLEVILLE AND VICINITY:

IN order to correct an erroneous impression abroad relative to the suit pending between ourselves and J. S. and Elizabeth Guthrie, of St. Catharines, relative to a corset patent, we wish to say that the suit by us against the Guthries does not in any way affect "Vermilyea's self fitting Corset." The question in dispute was whether we had the EXCLUSIVE right to manufacture in this section "Guthrie's Champion Corset" and its improvements. We contended we had the exclusive right. The defendants claimed we had only a right equal with themselves to sell in this section. The Court held that we had not the exclusive right, and we at once took the necessary proceedings for appeal to the full court.

We still have the right, and it is not disputed, to manufacture "Guthrie's Champion Corset" and the improvements thereon in this section. "Vermilyea's Self-Fitting Corset" is not in question, for it is a patent of our own invention, and needs no recommendation as it is so well known to our lady customers all over Ontario. We are now sending our Corsets into New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, and they are also being manufactured in Winnipeg.

We have on hand a full stock of Ladies' Underclothing, all our own manufacture.

Thanking the ladies for patronage in the past we still hope for a continuance of the same.

The Peterborough Review furnishes the following :—" One of these rather unusual occurrences (namely an extensive land slide) took place on the Belleville and Madoc Railway on Saturday morning the 14th, causing quite a sensation and alarm among the passengers as well as officials of the mail train going north. On that day, as the train was nearing the cutting close by Moira Lake, about three miles from Madoc, a mount or hill was seen descending from its elevated position at a rapid pace, reaching the railroad track just as the engineer of the train was enabled to pull up, and prevent what might have been a terrible collision. As it was the engine ran into, and was almost covered with the sliding debris. It is estimated that one hundred and fifty tons slid down the hill, consisting of earth, rock, trees and stumps. It took a large gang of men six or seven hours to clear the track and replace again in its position the engine, which was thrown off and considerably injured by the shock it received.

AMERICAN.

The Irish plotters in the United States

New York, April 20.—Patrick Egan is reported as saying that he was not in favor of the use of dynamite, yet he would not oppose it.

At a meeting of the Irishmen of Jersey City last night, a resolution was adopted endorsing the action of the Invincibles of Ireland, and favoring the use of dynamite.

There is only one coachmaker named Merritt in Brooklyn. He formerly employed a man named Lynch, but he was middle aged and had weak eyes. Merritt does not know whether this was the dynamiter arrested in London. There are three waggon makers named Bennet in Brooklyn, but none employed a man named Lynch lately. It is reported that Dr. Gallagher, arrested in London, when living in Greenpoint bought acids and glycine in quantities, and also rubber bags. He had a large practice as a physician.

O'Donovan Rossa says : "I never knew or had any associations, directly or indirectly, with Lynch. I live in the neighborhood of Greenpoint and have, I imagine, seen Dr. Gallagher often, but never aided him directly in his late attacks. I have some connection with the recent dynamite explosions in London, but what I know will never be known. I am willing, if the British Government will revoke its decree of banishment against me and insure my personal safety and pay my expenses, to go to London and face Lynch or any other of the informers. I know of such clubs as the Emerald club but nothing of the objects of the organization. I don't belong to it, never have, and know nobody identified with it prominently."

Wm. J. O'Dore says : "I am a member of the society Lynch speaks of, and in the main his story is true. The janitor of the building in which the Emerald club meets said that at the meetings, which were usually well attended, about half the members would leave early in the evening, and as many more come and take their places. The meetings were very quiet and private. A patrolman noticed that recently the meetings were much larger than last fall, and frequently 100 to 150 came out when the meeting adjourned." A man of high standing in Irish local circles is reported as saying : "I know Lynch, and he tells the truth. He was sent to Europe by men here. The Emerald club is one of the auxiliary societies of the great clan 'Na-Gael.' Five years ago it divided, and on account of a quarrel withdrew, from the Land League. Rossa, I believe, also withdrew a short time ago, but is still in sympathy with the organization."

AUDITORS' REPORT

FOR

THE CITY OF BELLEVILLE FOR THE YEAR 1882.

To His Worship the Mayor and Corporation of the City of Belleville :

GENTLEMEN :—We, the undersigned, respectfully report the completion of the audit of the accounts of the City for the year ending the 30th of December, 1882, as also the final them correct.

The rolls and receipts of the Collectors agree with the amounts credited on the Treasurer's books.

We found the amounts paid by the City Clerk to the Treasurer for Fines and Fees, Billiard and Miscellaneous Licenses, &c., to correspond with the books kept by him for that purpose.

We also checked the cash payments of the Harbor Master to the Treasurer, and found them correct.

We would respectfully call your attention to the small number of Cart and Livery Licenses issued, especially the latter, for which one person only, viz., John Nicholson, has been assessed.

The books of the City Treasurer we have found correct and neatly kept ; also vouchers produced for all moneys paid out.

We herewith submit the following statements prepared in duplicate :—

No. 1.—A detailed statement of Receipts and Expenditures for the year 1882.
No. 2.—An abstract of No. 1.
No 3.—A detailed statement of unpaid Accounts for the year 1882.
No. 4.—A statement of Floating Liabilities and available Assets to meet the same.
No. 5.—Statement of Debenture debt.
No. 6.—Statement of Sinking Funds.
No. 7.—Statement of Harbor account.
No. 8.—Statement of License Inspector's account.
No. 9.—Receipts and Expenditures of the Public and High Schools.
No. 10.—Statement of Separate Schools.
No. 11.—Statement of Assets of the City of Belleville, December 30th, 1882.

During the year the Rolls of 1879, 1880 and 1881 have been returned, the Rolls of 1882 being the only ones in the hands of the Collectors at the close of the year.

The neatness and accuracy of the books and accounts, as well as the order and courtesy on the part of the Officers, which were pointed out on previous occasions, still continue to characterize the City Officials.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

The Bad and Worthless

are never imitated or counterfeited. This is especially true of a family medicine, and it is positive proof that the remedy imitated is of the highest value. As soon as it had been tested and proved by the whole world that Hop Bitters was the purest, best and most valuable family medicine ever known on earth, many imitations sprung up and began to steal the notices which the press and people of the country had expressed the merits of H. B., and in every way trying to induce suffering invalids to use their stuff instead, expecting to make money on the credit and good name of H. B. Many others started nostrums put up in similar style to H. B., with variously devised names in which the word "Hop" or "Hops" were used in a way to induce people to believe they were the same as Hop Bitters. All such pretended remedies or cures, no matter what their style or name is, and especially those with the word "Hop" or "Hops" in their name or in any way connected with them or their name, are imitations, counterfeits. Beware of them. Touch none of them. Use nothing but genuine Hop Bitters, with a bunch or cluster of green Hops on the white label. Trust nothing else. Druggists and dealers are warned against dealing in imitations or counterfeits.

Daily Intelligencer.

One of Earth's Angels.

'Have you heard from your brother yet?' he asked of Grace, after a few moments preliminary conversation.

'No; it is rather strange that he does not write.'

'He told me to make his apologies. I had a letter from him to-day. He is very busy preparing to go away.'

'Go away! Go where?'

'To Germany; he leaves in a week.'

'And will he not come back to say good bye?' inquired Grace, indignantly.

'Oh, certainly! He will be here in a day or two.'

'And how long is he going to stay abroad?'

'That seems uncertain. A year or two, probably, at the very least.'

Grace stole a look at Kate, but Kate had drawn back into the shadow of the porch, and her face was not to be seen. Father Francis lingered for half an hour, and then departed; and as the door was falling heavily, the group in the porch arose to go in. The young lady in the easy-chair did not stir.

'Come in, Kate,' her father said; 'it is too damp to remain there.'

'Yes, papa, presently.'

About quarter of an hour later, she entered the parlor by way good night, very pale, as they all noticed.

'I know sitting in the night air was bad,' her father said. 'You are as white as a ghost.'

Miss Danton was very grave and still for the next two days—a little sad, Grace thought. On the third day, Doctor Frank arrived. It was late in the afternoon, and he was to depart again early next morning.

'What are you ruthless away for now?' asked his sister, with asperity. 'What has put this German notion in your head?'

The young man smiled.

'My dear Grace, don't wear that severe face. Why should I not go? What is to detain me here?'

This was such an unanswerable question that Grace only turned away impatiently; and Kate, who was in the room, fancying the brother and sister might wish to be alone, arose and departed. As the door closed after her, Captain Danton's wife faced round and renewed the attack.

'If you want to know what is to detain you here, I can tell you now. Stay at home and marry Kate Danton.'

Her brother laughed, but in rather a constrained way.

'That is easier said than done, sister mine. Miss Danton never did more than tolerate me in her life—sometimes not even that. Impossibilities are not so easily achieved as you think.'

'Suppose you try.'

'And be refused for my pains. No, thank you.'

'Very well,' said Mrs. Grace with a shrug; 'a wilful man must have his way! You must tell whether you will be refused or not until you ask.'

'I have had a tolerably strong conviction, though. No, Mrs. Grace, I shall go to Germany, and forget my folly; for that I have been an idiot, I don't deny.'

'And are so still! Do as you please, however; it is no affair of mine.'

And Frank rode over to the new building to see how it progressed. It was late when he returned with the Captain, and he found that Kate had departed to spend the evening with Miss Howard. If she wanted further proof of her indifference surely he had it here.

It was late, and the family had retired before Miss Danton came home. She was good enough though, to rise very early next morning to say good-bye. Doctor Frank took his hasty breakfast, and came into the parlor, where he found her alone.

'I thought I was not to have the pleasure of seeing you before,' he said, holding out his hand. 'I have but ten minutes left; so good-bye.'

His voice shook a little as he said it. In spite of every effort, her fingers closed his, and her eyes looked up at him with her whole heart in their clear depths.

'Kate!' he exclaimed, the colour rushing to his face with a sudden thrill of ecstasy, and his hand closing tight over the slender fingers he held. 'Kate!'

She turned away, her own cheeks dyed, not daring to meet that eager, questioning look.

'Kate!' he cried, appealingly; 'it is because I love you I am going away. I never thought to tell you.'

* * * * *

Five minutes later Grace opened the door impetuously.

'Frank, don't you know you will be late—Oh, I beg pardon.'

She closed it hastily, and retreated. The Captain, standing in the doorway, looked impatiently at his watch.

'What keeps the fellow? He'll be late to a dead certainty.'

Grace laughed.

'There is no hurry, I think. I don't believe Frank will go to Germany this time.'

CHAPTER XXIII.

Far away from the blue skies and bracing breezes of Lower Canada, the twilight of a dull April day was closing down over the din and tumult of London.

It had been a wretched day—a day of sopping rain and enervating mist. The newly lighted street lamps blinked dismally through the wet fog, and the pedestrians hurried along, poising umbrellas, and buttoned up to the chin.

At the window of a shabby-genteel London lodging house a young woman sat, this dreary April evening, looking out at the cheering prospect of dripping roofs and muddy pavement. She sat with her chin resting on her hands, staring vacantly at the passers-by, with eyes that took no interest in what they saw. She was quite young, and had been very pretty, for the loose, unkempt hair was of brightest auburn, the dull eyes of hazel brown, and the features pretty and delicate. But the look of intense sulkiness the girl's face wore would have spoiled a far more beautiful countenance, and there were traces of sullenness and trouble, all too visible. She was dressed in a soiled silk, arabesqued with stains, and a general air of neglect and disorder characterized her and her surroundings. The carpet was littered and unswept, the chairs were at sixes and sevens, and a baby's crib, wherein one new and pink infant reposed, stood in the middle of the room.

The young woman sat at the window gazing sullenly out at the dismal night for upwards of an hour, in all that time hardly moving. Presently there was a tap at the door, and an instant after, it opened, and a smart young person entered and began briskly laying the cloth for supper. The young person was the landlady's daughter, and the the girl at the window only gave her one glance, and then turned unsociably away.

'Ain't you lonesome here, Mrs. Stanford, all alone by yourself?' asked the young person, as she lit the lamp. 'Mother says it must be awful dull for you, with Mr. Stanford away all the time.'

'I am pretty well used to it,' answered Mrs. Stanford, bitterly. 'I ought to be reconciled to it by this time. Is it after seven?'

'Yes, ma'am. Mr. Stanford comes home at seven, don't he? He ought to be here soon, now. Mother says she wishes you would come down to the parlor and sit with us of a day, instead of being moped up here.'

Mrs. Stanford made no reply whatever to this good-natured speech, and the sulky expression seemed to deepen on her face. The young person finished setting the table, and was briskly departing, when Mrs. Stanford's voice arrested her.

'If Mr. Stanford is not here in half an hour, you can bring up dinner.'

As Mrs. Stanford spoke, the pink infant in the crib awoke and set up a dismal wail. The young mother arose, with an impatient sigh, lifted the babe, and sat down in a low nurse-chair, to soothe it to sleep again. But the baby was fretful, and cried and moaned drearily, and resisted every effort to be soothed to sleep.

'Oh, dear, dear!' Rose cried impatiently, giving it an irritated shake. 'What a torment you are! What a trouble and wretchedness everything is!'

She swayed to and fro in her rocking chair, humming drearily some melancholy air, by-and-by, baby, worn out, wailingly dropped off asleep again in her arms.

G. W. Mingay, Parkdale, Toronto, writes: "My wife had several very severe attacks of cramps in the stomach. Hearing of DR. AUSTIN'S PHOSPHATINE, and its pleasant ease to take, I gave her two bottles, and she has not had an attack since, and her health is much improved." For sale by all druggists.

The most recent preparation placed upon the market in this country, is the GREAT GERMAN INVIGORATOR, which has never been known to fail in curing a single case of impotency, spermatorrhœa, weakness and all diseases resulting from self-abuse, as nervous debility, inability, mental anxiety, languor, lassitude, depression of spirits and functional derangements of the nervous system. HACKED BY INNUMERABLE PANGS, restless by day, sleepless at night, rising unrefreshed in the morning, without appetite and pester-ed by varying and perplexing symptoms, the dyspeptic takes indeed a gloomy view of human existence. For him the zest of life seems gone, a feeling of oppression at the pit of the stomach, and the attendant annoyances of of constipation and billousness, combine to render him utterly wretched. But there is, if he will but take advantage of it, a reliable source of reliable relief from all misery. NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY and DYSPEPTIC CURE is, as its name imports, a botanic preparation, free from mineral poison, and an all-sufficient remedy for Indigestion in the most obstinate form. It not only enriches the blood by enabling the digestive organs to convert the food received into nutriment, but depurates it by increasing the action of the bowels and kidneys, the natural outlets for its impurities. But while it relaxes the bowels, it never does so violently and with pain, like a drastic cathartic. It aids, but never forces, Nature, invigorating as well as purifying and regulating the system. It thoroughly removes those diseased humors which tend to vitiate the blood, purifies the urinary secretion, and promotes a flow of healthy bile into the natural channel, besides expelling it from the circulation. Experience has proved that this standard medicine is a thorough remedy for dyspepsia, biliousness, costiveness, kidney complaints, scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, lumbago and all impurities of the blood. Price $1.00. Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac-simile of their signature. Sold by all medicine dealers.

FOR THE

KIDNEYS, LIVER AND URINARY ORGANS.

Here's where WARNER'S SAFE CURE has achieved its great reputation. It acts directly upon the kidneys and liver and by placing them in a healthy condition drives disease and pain from the system. For all Kidney, Liver and Urinary troubles; for the distressing disorders of women; for Malaria, and physical troubles generally, this great remedy has no equal. Beware of impostors, imitations and concoctions said to be just as good.

A NOTED BUT UNTITLED WOMAN.

[From the Boston Globe.]

Messrs. Editors—

The above is a good likeness of Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., who is known personally to many, as it may be truthfully called the "Dear Friend of Woman," as some of her correspondence leads to call her. She is zealously devoted to her work, which is the outcome of a lifestudy, and is obliged to keep six lady assistants, to help her answer the large correspondence which daily pours in upon her, each bearing its special burden of suffering or joy at release from it. Her Vegetable Compound is a medicine for good and all evil purposes. I have personally investigated it and am satisfied of the truth of this.

On account of its proven merits, it is recommended and prescribed by the best physicians in the country. One says: "It really is like a charm and saves much pain. It will cure entirely the worst form of falling of the uterus, Leucorrhœa, Irregular and painful Menstruation, all Ovarian Troubles, Inflammation and Ulceration, Floodings, all Displacements and the consequent spinal weakness, and is especially adapted to the Change of Life."

It permeates every portion of the system, and gives new life and vigor. It removes faintness, flatulency, destroys all craving for stimulants, and relieves weakness of the stomach. It cures Bloating, Headaches, Nervous Prostration, General Debility, Sleeplessness, Depression and Indigestion. That feeling of bearing down, causing pain, weight and backache, is always permanently cured by its use. It will at all times, and under all circumstances, act in harmony with the law that governs the female system.

It costs only $1 per bottle or six for $5, and is sold by druggists. Any advice requested in special cases, and the names of many who have been restored to perfect health by the use of the Vegetable Compound, can be obtained by addressing Mrs. P., with stamp for reply, at her home in Lynn, Mass.

For Kidney Complaint of either sex this compound is unsurpassed as abundant testimonials show.

Mrs. Pinkham's Liver Pills "are the best in the world," for the cure of Constipation, Biliousness and Torpidity of the liver. Her Blood Purifier wards off all approaches of scrofulous humors, and is the special bane and antidote to the poison of the system, caused by a sedentary life.

All will confess that the Portrait and Autograph of Mrs. Pinkham are worthy of a place in every household.

ROCK OF AGES.

"Rock of Ages, cleft for me
Let me hide myself in thee!"
Save the lady, soft and low,
And her voice's gentle flow
Rose upon the evening air
With that sweet and solemn prayer;
Rock of ages cleft for me
Let me hide myself in thee!

Yet she sang as oft she had
When her heart was gay and glad,
Sang because she felt alone,
Sang because her soul had grown
Weary with the tedious day
Sang to while the hours away:
Rock of ages cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in thee!

Wandering, homeless, thro' the night,
Praying for the morning light,
Pale and haggard, poor and weak,
With sunken eye and hollow cheek,
Went a woman, one whose life
Had been wrecked in early strife,
One, a lost and only child.
One by sin and shame defiled,
And her heart with sorrow wrung,
Heard the lady when she sung
"Rock of Ages cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in thee!"

Pausing, low her head she bent,
And the music as it went
Pierced her blacken'd soul and brought Back to her the lost in thought
Trembling she stood the past,
And the burning tears fell fast
As she called to mind the days
When she walked in virtue's ways;
When she sang that very song
With no sense of sin or wrong:
"Rock of Ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in thee!"

On the marble steps she knelt,
And her heart with sorrow felt
More than she could speak, as there
Quivering, moved her lips in prayer,
And She felt she had forgot
Smiled upon her lonely lot,
Heard her as she murmured oft,
With an accent soft and soft,
"Rock of Ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in thee."

Little knew the lady fair,
As she sang in silence there,
That her voice had pierced a soul
That had lived 'neath sin's control!
Little knew she what had done,
That a lost and erring one
Heard her—as she breathed that strain,
And returned to God again!

TABERNACLE SERMONS.

Discourse by Rev. T. De Witt Talmage.

PETER COOPER THE PHILANTHROPIST.

"Now Barzillai was a very aged man, even four score years old; and he had provided the king of sustenance while he lay at Mahanaim; for he was a very great man." II. Samuel, 19, 32.

Barzillai of the text was a very old man, a very kind old man, a very benevolent old man, a very patriotic man, a very wealthy man of the tenth century before Christ, suggestive of our modern philanthropist Peter Cooper, of the nineteenth century after Christ. And as there has been many a man in the centuries B. C. typical of some man in the centuries A. D. We can see this Barzillai of the text going out to meet David's retreating army and provide them with flour and corn and mattresses, it makes me think of our modern philanthropist who was always ready to make responses in time of necessity, whether it were individual, municipal or national. The snow of his white locks has melted from the frosts, and the benediction of his genial face has come to its long amen; but his influence, halting not a second for the obsequies to be finished, moved right on with no change save that of augmentation, for in the arithmetical sum of a useful life death is multiplication instead of subtraction. And the marble of the tomb, instead of being the goal at the end of the race, is only the starting point for a grander career. Why so many good people with this off in reverence before a man who never wielded a sword, or made masterly oration, or stood in the forefront of warfare, or was either general, nor lord, nor governor, nor president. This, learned title of LL. D. bestowed by a university did not stick to him one minute. The prefix of "Mr." and the suffix of "Esq." seemed always an incongruity when connected with his name. For all Christendom has been, and for all ages to come he will be, plain Peter Cooper. But why all the flags at half mast? And why the complimentary resolutions of Parliament and Common Council? And why a deep fetched sigh from millions of hearts which cannot make adequate expression of their grief?

The remark in answering these questions; Peter Cooper was the father of many American philanthropies. There have been larger donations for the public good since his great munificence of 1857, but that great gift of Cooper Institute has brought forth scores and hundreds of philanthropies all over the face of the land over. As a father may have six children, all of whom shall grow up to be larger than himself, so that munificence of 1857 has brought forth thrice and thousands of charities, some of them larger in bulk than the original. You must remember when that six-storied building, Cooper Institute, Third and Fourth avenues was built at an expense of $630,000, and then endowed with $150,000 more, you should remember that in those days millionaires were as uncommon as hardly stop to look at them, you must remember that in those times a millionaire was a rare spectacle. Why Stephen Girard and John Jacob Astor of olden times would almost have excited the sympathy of our modern railroad magnates. But the well on to $800,000 expended in building and in endowing Cooper Institute were more than $5,000,000 now. There have been larger gifts in our time which have not produced more than a fraction of the good produced by that munificence of 1857. That gift brooded other charities, that beneficence mothered hundreds of educational institutions, that generosity gave glorious suggestions to many a man who so fortune was held with the iron grip of selfishness. If you should trace back the ancestral line of many of the hospitals and infirmaries and colleges and universities and benevolent institutions of this country, you would find that Peter Cooper was their glorious progenitor. O! how this shines out in contrast with much that we see in our day. That institution there standing twenty-six years on the great thoroughfare, saying to the populations surging to and fro: "Here I stand without money and without price to bless and educate all the struggling who will come under my wings." The institution standing for twenty-six years, from all its windows crying out against miserliness and child sin. That free school, from the birthplace of hundreds of free reading-rooms all over America. Great reservoir of Christian beneficence in Cooper's fountain.

Mr. Cooper has also—Peter Cooper—has also impressed us all with the fact that it is a very wise thing for a man to bestow his own charity. How much more beautiful is ante mortem charity than post mortem benevolence. There is many a man who has kept his money as long as he could keep it, and then when his had to die he has made some charitable institution a legatee. Many a man has kept his money just as long as he could keep it, and when death met him, said: "Well, if I must, I must, and now, Bible Society, you take so many thousands, and reformatory institution, you take so many thousands." The fact is, if that man had had four or five silent partners in his shrewd he would have taken all his wealth with him. Better is than never to be charitable, but greater will be the reward of that man who gives to charitable institutions while he has the power to retain what he is giving away. It seems to me that often a donation in a last will and testament is merely an attempt to bribe the ferryman of the river Styx to land the man in celestial instead of infernal regions. Mean as sin, while he lives, he expects to cross over and be ushered up the shining banks of heaven. A skinflint, he goes out into the world, expects to be hailed on the other shore as a George Peabody. Beside that, how often it is that charitable intentions in last will and testament fails to reach its right destination. If you have pride in being a sane man, and if you are at the same time desirous of making over a reputable contribution, make the contribution before your death, for the probability is your heirs will prove you insane when you are dead. Not an estate is taken into the surrogate's court, and there is a great quarrel over the matter and as every good man has some idiosyncrasies, your idiosyncrasies will be taken out, and they will be ventilated, and they will be enlarged and they will be caricatured, until the courts of Brooklyn and New York will pronounce you a fool. If a man have a second wife, the children of the first wife will prove in the courts that the man was subjected to undue influences, and many a man when he made his will had more brain than all his children ever will have, has been pronounced after death to have been fit for the lunatic asylum. Be your own executor, like Peter Cooper. Do not let charitable institutions be chiefly indebted for your last sickness and death. Better like Peter Cooper to walk through the halls you have built by your benefactions, and see the men whom you have educated by your charity and get the sublime satisfaction of your generosity. I am not surprised to read that the Barzillai of my text lived to be 80 years of age. He stood in the perpetual sunshine of his own generosity. I am not surprised that our modern Barzillai lived to 82 years of age. He felt the reaction of his helpfulness for others. Doing good was one of the strongest reasons for his longevity. There is great excitement in a chase, and many an old hunter's heart has throbbed at the crying of the hounds; but there is one kind of chase that is very exhausting and that is deathful. Many a man with a large fortune behind him has called up his vast dollars as a pack of hounds to go out with him and hunt up one more dollar before he dies. Away, away, the old hunter and all the hounds. Hotter and hotter the chase. Closer on the track and closer on the track, the old man a little ahead, and his dollars following on like a pack of hounds. Now they are coming at the death, the dollar only a little way ahead, and the old man, with pale cheek and panting breath and shrivelled arm, clutches for the dollar just as it turns on its track, and misses it by an inch, and with a long groan, until the exhausted dollar plunges into a hole and burrows deeper down and burrows deeper down, until the old hunter with both hands takes hold and claws out the dirt from the embankment, burrowing deeper down and deeper down until, just clutching that last dollar, the burrow of embankment breaks and he rolls over into his own grave, while a clap of thunder from the clear sky sounds, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his soul?" We talk a great deal about old misers. There are no old misers, or but very few of them. The most of the misers are comparatively young. Avarice kills more than war. In contrast with all that, look at the philanthropist at 92 years of age, dying of a cold caught in going out to look after the prosperity of a charitable institution which he himself had founded, with its 2,000 students in its evening schools.

Peter Cooper also impresses us with the best way of settling this old quarrel between capital and labor, this altercation between the rich and the poor. There are two ways in which this quarrel between capital and labor will never be settled. One is by the violent suppression of the laboring classes, and the other is by the violent attack of the mob. This is fast getting to be the age of dynamite. Dynamite under the Kremlin. Dynamite near the Parliament buildings. Dynamite to get rid of Dynamite in Ireland. Dynamite in England. Dynamite in Germany. Dynamite in Russia. Dynamite in America. The rich are becoming more arrogant and the poor more unmanageable. I prescribe for the cure of great evil the largest kind of allopathic dose of Peter Cooperism. Who ever heard of a strike under Cooper Institute? Who ever looked for a keg of dynamite in the cellar of Peter Cooper's house? In the name of great philanthropic excitement, when public men have had to have their houses guarded by soldiers, no excitement has ever stood at that man's door, and there has not been a time in the last forty years that the plainest man in New York and Brooklyn could not ring his door bell and go in and shake hands with Peter Cooper. The poorest man, with a hod of bricks on his shoulder climbing the ladder on the wall, never begged the philanthropic capitalist his ride in an easy carriage. On great occasions, when there came great audiences in Cooper Institute, the founder of that institute walked on the platform, the hard hands of American laborers in the applause clapped the hardest. When the opulent men of America and England and Russia and all the other lands shall stretch out to the laboring classes and the suffering classes as kind and as great a hand of patronage as Peter Cooper, that will terminate the age of dynamite. What the police cannot do, what shot and shell cannot do, take of these laws avowedly executed cannot do, what armies with bayonets cannot do, will yet be accomplished by kind words and deeds and sympathy and help. Peter Cooperism. I hail the early twilight of that day when the men of fortune in all lands will emulate Peter Cooper. There are 70,000 destitute children in New York city, and out of my fortune I will build this line of asylums, and there will be room for them. There are vast multitudes of people in all the cities living in filthy and unventilated tenement houses, and out of my fortune I will build a line of residences with cheap rents. There are many who know nothing of Jesus Christ; I will turn my fortune inside out to send them flaming evangels. There shall be no more hunger, there shall be no more ignorance, there shall be no more crime, so far as I can help it." When the day comes that quarrel between capital and labor, and between the poor and the rich, will cease, and the last torch of incendiarism will be extinguished, and the last dagger of assassination will go to silicing bread for poor children, and the last pound of dynamite that now threatens death will go to work in the quarries to blast foundation stones for churches and universities and asylums. May the spirit of Peter Cooper come down upon all the bank stock, and the government securities and the railroad companies, and the great business houses of America.

Peter Cooper has also impressed us with the new style of monumental and epitaphal commemoration. You all want to be remembered. It would not be a pleasant thought to you to think that the moment you are gone out of the world you will be forgotten. But if the executors of Peter Cooper should expend $20,000 or $30,000 for a mausoleum in Greenwood it would not make his name any more remembered as that building on Third and Fourth avenues, New York. How few the people who would walk around the grand mausoleum when compared with the vast multitude that will move up and down by that structure in the ages that are to come, and think of the hands who will be educated in that building will there ever be one so stupid as not to know who founded it? And how great a heart he had! And how he struggled to achieve a fortune, and always mastered that fortune and never allowed that fortune to master him! What would be a monument of Aberdeen granite compared with a monument built out of the interests and souls of immortal men and women? What would be an epitaph cut by a sculptor's chisel compared with the epitaph that will be written by generations and centuries that are to come writing his praise? Adorned and beautiful be all the crypts and catacombs and shrines of the dead, but if the superfluous and inexcusable expense of catafalque and necropolis and mausoleum had been put into the living world, expended to have been bread for all the hungry and knowledge for all the ignorant, and a home for all the lost. The Pyramids of Egypt are the tombs of the dead kings, their names all obliterated; and travellers tell us that even the pyramids of Egypt are crumbling away. But monuments of good last forever. Long after Walter Scott's Old Mortality shall have grown the faster the chisel in reviving the names faded from the old tombstones, the names of those who have helped others will be held in everlasting remembrance. The Sabbath School teacher builds her monument in the heavenly thrones and palaces of her converted class. George Muller, of England, builds his monument in the orphan houses of England. George Peabody builds his monument in the library of his native village and the schoolhouses for educating the poor in the cities in different parts of the South. Handel built his monument in the Hallelujah chorus. Cyrus Field built his monument in the cables underlying the sea, lashing the continents together and hastening on the day of universal brotherhood. He who prays or gives for a church of Christ builds for himself a mansion in all that sacred edifice shall accomplish for good. Wilberforce built his monument in the piled up golden shekels of gratitude of slave trade. Livingstone built his monument in what shall be regenerated Africa. Paul built his monument in the magnificent story of the resurrection. William E. Dodge built his monument in the reformatory institutions he either established or helped to support. Peter Cooper built his monument in the noble philanthropies he encouraged by the establishment of that one institution for the education of the masses. Ah! that is a fame worth having—that is an immortality you may strive after without the degradation of worldly ambition. Let such monuments be built in all the lands and until every one of them is finished, straightened and every inebriate learns the luxury of cold water, and every outcast is brought home to food and shelter, and every one extirpated, and Paradise lost becomes Paradise regained.

But once more I am impressed with the fact that the longest life-path has a terminus. What a gauntlet to run—ninety-two years of epidemics, and ailments, and accidents! Why, it seemed as if he would never get done with us. Living on from the administration of George Washington to that of President Arthur. But the liberal hand is closed, the weary soul is shut, the world-encompassing heart is still. When he was at my house I felt I was entertaining a king. But the king is dead. The largest volume of his story is read. He has run his last chapter, and its last page, and its last line, and its last word. And what are the ninety-two years of earthly existence compared with the five hundred thousand million years which just open the chapter of the great future? For that let us all get ready. Christ came to reconstruct us into purity, into holiness and happiness and heaven. What were the minutiæ of Peter Cooper's religious experiences I do not know. Some men are worse than their creed. Some men are better than their creed. In my estimation the greatest profession of the religion of Jesus Christ a man can ever make is a holy life devoted to making the world good and happy. I make no depreciation of the important duty of professing faith in Christ and to the usual modes in the Christian church; but grander than that is a life all devoted to making the world better and to making the world good. A man may be a member of the most orthodox church in Christendom, and be may not at all be a communicator for half a century; if he be mean and selfish and careless of the world's condition, he is no Christian; while on the other hand, a man may have peculiarities of religious belief, and yet if he spend his whole life for others, he is so much like Christ I shall call him a Christian. The grandest philanthropy is the service over and over rendered to the suffering and the needy, there may be here and there, as the years go by, of a setback in our national prosperity, but God only grant that we may not fail to roll into the lap of this nation. Between my journey at the South five years ago and my journey at the South last month there has been a change for the better. Industrial resurrection. The Chattahoochee will soon rival the Merrimac, and already all over the South you hear the hum of the spinning jenny and the clatter of the spindle. In the city of Atlanta, $6,000,000 invested in manufactories. The South has gone out of politics and gone into business, and there is going to roll up from that part of the land a wealth unimaginable. Then from the West all the mines and the great wheat fields of Dakota there will be silver and gold and precious stones rolled over all this land. But the need will be just as appalling as now, and more tremendous. Five million people in the United States to-day over ten years of age who cannot read; and millions more in the United States to-day over ten years of age who cannot write, and two million of them voters—a fact startling not only to the North but to stun every philanthropist. We want five hundred Cooper Institutes. We want churches innumerable. We want the gospel of Christ preached from the Sabbath to Sabbath, and from one reaching from the St. Lawrence to Key West and from Barnegat lighthouse to the Golden Gate of the Pacific. You and I have a responsibility in the matter. God help you to do your work and help me to do mine. I like the sentiment and I like the rhythm of that verse, written by some anonymous poet:

"When I am dead and gone.
And the mould upon my breast,
Say not he did ill or well,
Only he did his best."

HAGGED BY INDOMMISABLE PANGS, restless by day, sleepless at night, rising unrefreshed in the morning, without appetite and pestered by varying and perplexing symptoms, the dyspeptic takes fitfully and reluctantly of another miserable existence. For him the rest of life seems gone. Heartburn, oppression at the pit of the stomach, nausea, distaste for food, sensations of constipation and billousness, combine to render him utterly wretched. It not only enriches the blood by enabling the digestive organs to convert the food received into nutriment, but departs at its by increasing the action of the bowels and kidneys, the natural outlets for its impurities. But while it relaxes the bowels, it never does it violently and with pain, like a drastic cathartic. It aids, but never forces, Nature, by invigorating as well as purifying and regulating her sole and all impurities of the blood. Price $1.00. Sample Bottle 10 cents. BELLEVILLE, SATURDAY, APRIL 21, 1883.

Two Opinions

That clause of the Dominion Franchise Act which provides for the revision of the voters' lists by the County Judges or, in case of their refusal, by barristers appointed by the Government, has been received with strong manifestations of hostility by the Grits. The reason advanced for this hostility is thus set forth by the Ottawa organ of the Opposition in its usual cultured and gentlemanly style :

It is not a constituency here and there that he (the Premier) intends to disfranchise through the appointment of partisan returning officers, but all the constituencies. His Franchise Bill is constructed with the sole apparent view of placing the electorate in the hands of men who shall be selected by th Government. His "Deserving Barristers" are, if this latest legislative atrocity should be allowed to become law, to prepare the voters' lists. They shall have power to say who shall or who shall not have the right to vote, and as he intends that every man of them shall be a "Jim Stevens," he hopes in this way to secure a Tory majority in every constituency.

In opposition to this expression of opinion, which involves an outrageous insult to the County Judges of Ontario, we have another to present—one for which the Grit party must have the greatest of respect—that is, if their recent laudations of their leader as the clearest thinker and the most eminent lawyer in Parliament, were sincere. This opinion is that of no less a person than Mr. Edward Blake, and was delivered by him in the House of Commons in 1870, in the course of a speech which he made on the Franchise Bill which Sir John A. Macdonald had introduced, and which provided for the appointment of three assessors in each electoral district to prepare the lists. Mr. Blake said :

In England they had revising barristers, and he asserted that the House must do so if it were going to have anything like a fair constituency, if it intended to keep the Government free from suspicion, if it were going to free the country from the almost certainty that there would be partisanship in that matter. The only way to remedy the system was not the way proposed by the mover of the bill (Sir John Macdonald) but the proper mode was to adopt the English system of revising barristers.

Those who admire Mr. Blake and endorse his opinions cannot but disagree with those of their party organs which have been combating their leader's views. The organs themselves are welcome to what comfort they can extract from Mr. Blake's utterances in favor of the Government's proposition.

Transparent Hypocrisy.

The Ottawa Free Press utters a hypocritical wail over the defeat of the Orange Incorporation Bill, and makes an attempt to arouse the Orangemen against the Premier. It says :

Orangemen now know exactly how they stand, and if it is any consolation for them to reflect that the Ultras of Quebec are the masters of the situation and can make Sir John do as they please they are welcome to it.

In order to refute this charge and to demonstrate the arrant hypocrisy of the writer who made it, it is only necessary to reproduce the Free Press' analysis of the vote which was recorded on the question in the House, which is as follows :

Ministerialists who voted for the Bill	61
Opposition who voted for the Bill	9
Ministerialists who voted against the Bill	56
Opposition who voted against the Bill	50
Members absent	176
	35

Of the Conservatives who voted there was a majority of 5 for the bill. Of the Grits who voted, there was, on the Free Press' own showing, a majority of 41 against the bill. The Free Press' attempt to shift, by a hypocritical dodge, the responsibility for the defeat of the bill from the shoulders of its own party, will not avail. Had not the Ontario Grits added their strength to that of the Quebec members—Rouge as well as Bleu—the bill would have been passed by a majority of 20 at least. Let there be no misunderstanding about this matter. The Grit party cannot be permitted to play the double game which they have been attempting. They must not be allowed to represent to the Roman Catholics that they secured the defeat of the bill and to the Orangemen and Protestants that the Bleus of Quebec defeated the measure. Such contradictory statements bear the impress of falsehood on their face and condemn those who make them as unworthy of belief or trust.

Editorial Brevities.

The disclosure made by the informer Lynch shows unmistakably that the dynamite conspiracy had its origin in New York and Brooklyn, and that those who originated and have been carrying out this atrocious method of attacking a friendly power, are still busy with their infamous work under the shelter of the flag of the United States. The duty of the Government of the neighboring Republic is clear, and we hope that it will not be neglected. Should no steps be taken by the United States Government to put an end to such infernal plottings, they will have a heavy account to settle with Great Britain.

The time for the filing of petitions against the return of members to the Ontario Legislature, has expired. Our Grit friends were loud in their threats against Mr. Hudson, but the fact that that gentleman's right to the seat to which he was elected remains unchallenged, proves that his opponents knew the falsity of their allegations. They pretend, we believe, that Mr. Mowat mistakenly advised them that the time for petitioning did not expire until the 25th, but that allegation is merely made as an excuse for an inglorious backdown.

Institution for the Deaf and Dumb.

ANOTHER OUTBREAK OF FEVER.

Information of the fact that another outbreak of typhoid fever has occurred in the Institution for the Deaf and Dumb, will be received with regret by the people of the Province generally, and with especial concern by the residents of this city and its environs. So far, not more than nine of the pupils have been attacked, and it would be quite possible to carry on the school until the close of the regular term, but it is deemed more advisable to close a month earlier. The Government have, on the advice of Mr. Mathison—the able and energetic Superintendent—acted promptly in the matter of providing a supply of wholesome water for the Institution, and the result will be the shortening of the term by a month.

Mr. Mathison has issued the following circular, which fully explains the position of affairs :

ONTARIO INSTITUTION FOR THE DEAF AND DUMB

BELLEVILLE, April 20th, 1883.

It has been decided to close the Institution on Wednesday, the 16th May, for several reasons. One reason is that our water supply is somewhat limited and defective, and we desire to make ample provision for a better and more satisfactory supply for the future. It is settled that we shall have a large Filter and one or two new wells; tenders for the work are advertised for and operations will be begun early in May, hence the necessity for the removal of the pupils. Another reason is that owing to the sickness in the Institution, many of the parents desire to have their children at home before the usual time.

I regret to say that we have nine new cases of typhoid fever, the first symptoms being reported on Tuesday evening last; for over a month none were attacked and we thought the danger was passed. There is no occasion for needless alarm. All who are or may be sick will be carefully nursed by experienced and trustworthy persons. I have four children of my own exposed to the same influences as the pupils; they will not be sent away. I shall not object to pupils going home if parents arrange for their safe carriage en route; I cannot, however, procure return tickets at single fare for those who leave prior to the 14th of May, and they will have to pay full fare both ways.

As intimated above, the Institution will close on Wednesday, May 16th, and an officer will accompany such pupils as are to travel on the main lines of railway, on that day, taking care of them and their baggage, to the points agreed upon.

The regular yearly examination will commence on May 4th and terminate on the 11th.

I am now making arrangements with the various Railway Companies for the usual reduced rates for pupils going to and returning from their homes, for vacation, and I will furnish you with particulars as to the amount of money to be sent, where to meet your child etc., in a few days.

For the many grateful letters received during the past six weeks I am thankful. If you have not heard from me specially, you may be assured your child is well. Hoping those little ones now sick will soon be better and with kind regards, I am,

Yours faithfully,
R. MATHISON,
Superintendent.

Beware of Imitations.

Since Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has become celebrated, a number of unprincipled persons have been endeavoring to palm off Electrics and Electric Oil for the genuine DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL, by the use of these similar named articles. If their originators had any faith in the healing properties of their own medicines they would not dare to assert them, give them name of their own, and not try to sell them on the reputation of another; but as they know their preparations have no merit, they resort to the most unprincipled means of selling them by getting a name as near as possible to Eclectric. We therefore ask the public when purchasing to see that the name Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is on the front of the wrapper, and the signature of NORTHROP & LYMAN, the proprietors for Canada on the back.

CITY COUNCIL.

A special meeting of our municipal government was held last evening for the purpose of allowing the alteration of the site for the buildings of the Hart & Smith Stove Manufacturing Co. A main from the Gas Works runs through the southern part of the property and it is desirable that the proposed buildings should be erected further north in order to avoid the drain.

PRESENT: His Worship the Mayor. Ald. Smith, Dickson, Taylor, Petrie, Tickell, Baker, Dannet, Cooper, Clarke, Hanley, Macoun and McInnich.

The Mayor briefly set forth the object for which the meeting was called.

Ald. Macoun suggested that a space 66 feet wide, sufficient for a street, be left south of the proposed work.

Ald. Clarke spoke in the same strain.

Ald. Taylor was in favor of allowing the Company to move the site of their buildings 10 feet to the north and the entire land in that direction could perhaps be utilized by some other company or the city could use it for some purpose.

In reply to Ald. Tickell, Ald. Dickson said the Gas Company had the same right to use that property for their main that the railway had to come down Pinnacle street.

Ald. Petrie fancied that the Stove Company might commence at the northern extremity of these lots.

Ald. Dickson said this was a matter of importance and he had to regret that the meeting was so thinly attended, especially since four prominent members were absent. It was desirable to keep within our power the means of inducing others to locate here. It would be useless to bonus any establishment to locate here, if he understood the Council aright, and it was desirable to reserve the property that was left for some other enterprise. We have left, a piece of property 73 feet wide and 300 feet deep, which it might be proper to utilize, as some other industries may locate here in the near future. He was in favor of relaying the gas main and he only spoke in the interests of the city.

Mr. John Phippen said the removal of the drain would cost between $300 and $400 and it would require 25 feet off the southern part of the lot in order to be clear of the gas drain. If it were ordered that a change be made in the drain the city, as owner of one-third of the stock, would have to pay one-third of the cost. The Gas Company had the drain there 24 years but they would not want to do anything that might be objected to. The question was, was it desirable to change the drain in preference to giving the Stove Company 10 feet further north.

Ald. Smith was in favor of giving the company the 10 feet of land asked for.

Ald. Hanley said if the 10 feet were not given the work of erection could not be prosecuted, and a number of mechanics would be out of employment.

Mr. John Bell said the contract for the stove works had been given, and work on it begun. If a new gas main were built, a considerable time would elapse, and as the contract of the stove company with the city stated that the buildings should be up and operations be commenced by July 1st, the stipulation could not be fulfilled unless work was permitted to go on. Besides an additional expenditure to the city would be entailed by the changing of the gas main.

After further remarks, Ald. Dickson moved that the Stove Company be allowed 10 feet of the strip of land to the north of that recently granted them.

This was carried and the Council adjourned.

Dominion Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

TUESDAY, April 20.

In the House to-day Mr. Abbott presented a petition from the Canadian Pacific Railway Company asking for permission to present a petition for a private bill. He said that the circumstances under which this petition had been presented at this late period was owing to the fact that it was only this morning that the Company had been able to execute an agreement with the three lines of railway between Montreal and the terminus of the Credit Valley Company, namely the Credit Valley, Ontario and Quebec, and a part of the Atlantic and Northwestern Railway Companies, by which these companies leased their lines to the Canadian Pacific Railway Company. The latter were not authorized by their charter to make such leases. They consequently presented a petition asking for the passing of the bill giving them this power. He moved that the petition be read and received. The motion was carried and the petition read.

The House went into Committee on Supply and passed a number of items, an informal discussion taking place on each.

The House adjourned at five minutes past midnight.

VERMILYEA'S SELF-FITTING CORSET.

PATENTED 18T MARCH, 1881. IMPROVED 9TH JUNE, 1882.

TO THE LADIES OF BELLEVILLE AND VICINITY:

IN order to correct an erroneous impression abroad relative to the suit pending between ourselves and J. S. and Elizabeth Guthrie, of St. Catharines, relative to a corset patent, we wish to say that the suit by us against the Guthries does not in any way affect "Vermilyea's self-fitting Corset." The question in dispute was whether we had the EXCLUSIVE right to manufacture in this section "Guthrie's Champion Corset" and its improvements. We contended we had the exclusive right. The defendants claimed we had only a right equal with themselves to sell in this section. The Court held that we had not the exclusive right, and we at once took the necessary proceedings for appeal to the full court.

We still have the right, and it is not disputed, to manufacture "Guthrie's Champion Corset" and the improvements therein in this section. "Vermilyea's Self-Fitting Corset" is not in question, for it is a patent of our own invention, and needs no recommendation as it is so well known to our lady customers all over Ontario. We are now sending our Corsets into New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, and they are also being manufactured in Winnipeg.

We have on hand a full stock of Ladies' Underclothing, all our own manufacture.

Thanking the ladies for patronage in the past we still hope for a continuance of the same.

THE Globe of the 20th says :—"The 'Fred Johnston" who was sentenced to seven years in the penitentiary for burglary at Belleville was recognized upon arriving at Kingston as Fred Jacobs, the well known Toronto "crook." Two years ago Jacobs and an accomplice named Mitchell stole a quantity of cloth from Saunders' tailor shop, King street. After a time the detectives brought the crime home to the pair, and Jacobs and his partner were sent to Kingston Penitentiary for two years. Jacobs, who is an "artful dodger," played sick shortly after his committal, and by dint of eating soap pills and practising other tricks known to convicts, was released from penitentiary after a nine months' stay—dying with consumption. When he reached Toronto he appeared to have recovered his health, and since that time has been a continual source of trouble to the detectives. When the suspicious characters were imprisoned two weeks ago for vagrancy, Jacobs took flight to Belleville, where he was summarily punished for a daring burglary.

MESSRS. REYNOLDS have secured Rice's company, who will present Gilbert and Sullivan's new opera "Iolanthe," for the 2nd May. The New York Sun says of the opera and its performance by this company :—"Gilbert and Sullivan's new opera, 'Iolanthe,' was produced in Haverly's theatre last evening by E. E. Rice's new company, and thoroughly delighted the large, brilliant and fashionable audience, which was composed, in considerable measure, of musical people. The music of 'Iolanthe' is not of the ear-tickling order which prevails in 'Pinafore,' but there is a certain rythmical swing, the melodies are well formed, the harmonies are thoroughly worked out, and the orchestral scoring is delightful. The libretto is, of course, in Gilbert's usual vein. The wit is brilliant, the satire keen, while the construction is similar to that which has pervaded all this author's works, from the first to the present. The most absurd ideas and situations occur, side by side with the gravest topics, and the argumentative manner in which they are written gives an appearance of possibility to the most ridiculous assertion. It is certain that 'Iolanthe' in musical construction and story will take rank among the best compositions of the kind known to the stage."

PRESIDENT ARTHUR ILL.

NEW YORK, April 21.—A Savannah special says the President was taken seriously ill early on Friday morning. He had a severe attack of bilious colic, and was threatened with congestive chills. Exposure in the jungles of Florida and over eating is the cause of the attack. The physicians labored four hours with him before any reaction set in, and were on the point of telegraphing to Washington for his physician. On Friday afternoon the President was able to go on the deck of the Tallahassee for a short time, but soon went back to bed. In the evening he was resting easily. The attack indicated malaria in the system, and may necessitate an entire change in the President's plans for the summer.

THE IRISH CONSPIRATORS IN THE UNITED STATES.

O'Donovan Rossa and his followers claim that the Philadelphia Convention will adopt the dynamite policy. The leaders of the Land League party assert that the dynamite faction will fare no better at Philadelphia than at the Chicago Convention two years ago. Patrick Egan believes the Land League and all other Irish organizations will be as one united body at the Convention. The primary object of the new organizations will be to secure self-Government for Ireland. He says it is possible the Land League at the preliminary meeting may dissolve and enter a new body, as the purposes of the latter are its own only.

Ex-State Senator Coe, of Coe & Merritt, carriage manufacturers, Brooklyn, says a man named Lynch was employed in his firm about 6 months in 1881. He was about 50 years of age.

BLOODY ROW AMONGST LABORERS.

AMSTERDAM, N. Y., April 21.—An investigation shows that the row between the West Shore RR. laborers last evening, took place on a bridge between Amsterdam and Port Jackson. Wm. Kendaeck, Rob't McKimm, Frank Dedonarto, Jas. Rezzo and another Italian were participants. All except Kendneck were interviewed. Dedonarto jumped upon McKimm and would have stamped him to death had not a citizen taken him off. McKimm was seriously injured Rezzo shot Kendneck in the breast and he soon died ; he lived in Perryville, Ontario Co. The three Italians were arrested and unsuccessfully attempted to escape while being taken to the lock up. A mob of Irish laborers threatened to lynch the murderer, but the police were prepared for a riot.

FATAL RESULT OF A DISPUTE.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., April 21.—Eames and Higham, participants in yesterday's tragedy, had always been the best of friends. The workmen say they never knew that Higham carried a revolver, while outsiders say that ever since the trouble about property began, the shop had been a sort of arsenal, and all the men had revolvers. Eames was married, and somewhat eccentric. The murderer was overcome by nervous prostration and grief.

imitated or counterfeited. This is s true of a family medicine, and it is e proof that the remedy imitated is of highest value. As soon as it had been sted and proved by the whole world that Hop B tters was the purest, best and most valuable family medicine on earth, many imitations sprung up and began to steal the notices in which the press and people of the country had expressed the merits of H. B., and in every way trying to induce suffering invalids to use their stuff instead, expecting to make money on the credit and good name of H. B. Many others started nostrums put up in similar style to H. B., with variously devised names in which the word "Hop" or "Hops" were used in a way to induce people to believe they were the same as Hop Bitters. All such pretended remedies or cures, no matter what their style or name is, and especially those with the word "Hop" or "Hops" in their name or in any way connected with them or their name, are imitations or counterfeits. Beware of them. Touch none of them. Use nothing but genuine Hop Bitters, with a bunch or cluster of green Hops on the white label. Trust nothing else. Druggists and dealers are warned against dealing in imitations or counterfeits.

THE CROCUS.

The first to lay her pretty head
Upon the garden like a bear,
The first of all a brilliant kin
The bravest too, the pioneer.

What matters it if April winds
Blow chilly o'er her modest head,
What matter it if all the world
Se me snowy, dreary, cold and dead—

She, like the robin, early comes
To us a promise sweet to bring
Of tulips, lilacs, roses too,
And all the wonders of the spring.

What incense soft comes circling up
From out her sweet and tender throat,
What perfumes rich around her head
Like unseen angels always float.

Mayhap the envious snow may come
And all her tender beauty hides,
She folds her pretty petals up,
And patiently her time abides.

But when her friend, the sun, shines out
She nods and smiles like anything,
And he is glad, for she is first
To give him welcome in the spring.

FAME.

Ah Fate, cannot a man
Be wise without a beard?
From East to West, from Beersheba to Dan,
Say, was it never heard
That wisdom might in youth be gotten,
Or wit be ripe before 'twas rotten.

He pays too high a price
For knowledge and for fame
Who gives his years to be wise,
H's teeth and bones to buy a name,
And crawls through life a paralytic
To earn the praise of bard and critic.

Is it no better done,
To dine and sleep through forty years,
Be loved by few, be feared by none,
Laugh life away, have wine for tears,
And take the mortal leap undaunted,
Content that all we ask is granted?

But Fate will not permit
The seed of gods to die,
Nor suffer sense to win from wit
Its guerdon in the sky;
Nor let us hide, whate'er our pleasure,
The world's light underneath a measure.

Go then, sad youth, and shine!
Go sacrifice to Fame;
Put love, joy, health, upon the shrine,
And life to fan the flame!
They hapless self for praises barter,
And die to fame an honored martyr.

A New Clock.

Dr Lyman Beecher was frequently absent-minded. On one occasion, after an evening's service, he started for home in a brown study. The house of his block were of the same pattern. He entered the wrong door. The house he mistook for his own was occupied by a well known hatter by the name of Rhoades, a Unitarian. The doctor put his hat on the stand in the hall, went into the back parlor where Mrs. Rhoades and her family were gathered, drew a chair to the fire, put his feet to warm on a mantle over the grate, tipped his chair and his head—simply think. Just then he happened to notice a French clock under a glass, upon the mantle, and exclaimed:

'Wife, where in the world did you get that clock?'

No answer. No one could answer, for all were ready to burst with merriment at their neighbor's absence of mind.

'I say, wife! where did you get that clock?'

Mrs Rhoades was a lady. Patting her hand gently on his shoulder, in the sweetest tone she said:

'Dr. Beecher, you have made a mistake and got into the wrong house.'

He cast a quick glance around upon the family circle, sprang from his chair, and, with a bound, was out of the house without a word of explanation or excuse.

Preaching Under Difficulties

A young minister had gone to a prosperous church, in a certain town to preach his first sermon. Before leaving the house, the gentleman who was entertaining him suggested to him not to preach against Universalists. 'There are, said he, several Universalist families who have pews in our church, and we do not want them offended.' The young minister promised. At the church vestibule one of the deacons drew him aside and said: 'Do you see those two gentlemen just passing in? They are Spiritualists, but come here to church occasionally. I wish you would be a little careful not to hurt their feelings.' The minister promised. As he was ascending the pulpit steps one of the elders button-holed him for a moment to whisper an additional caution: 'The leading liquor dealer has just come into church, and he gives us a lift sometimes. I wish you would be particular not to allude to the whisky business or the temperance question.' The young minister getting fairly frightened to see the moral ground thus narrowing before him, inquired: 'Pray, who or what shall I preach against?' The elder's reply came with an air of triumph, 'Preach against the Jews; they haven't a friend in town.' If preaching is the art of not hitting anybody, that certainly would have been an effective direction.

Flies and Bugs.

Flies, roaches, ants, bed-bugs, rats, mice, gophers, chipmunks, cleared out by "Rough on Rats" 15c.

The Diamond Ring.

A certain rich man being reminded by the increasing weight of years that he should never be any younger, and must one day go the way of all flesh, called about him his three sons, whom he thus addressed:

'My children, when I die all I have will be yours, but in addition to the property which I shall divide among you equally, I have a ring for which is set a diamond of great value. This I intend for him who after a twelvemonth shall have made the greatest advance towards success in life. Here, take each of you one of those purses containing a hundred pieces of silver, go out into the world, and at the expiration of the time perscribed, return that I may judge which among you deserves the prize.'

Thereupon the sons received their father's blessing, and taking the purses of silver, went away. But when a year and a day were passed they returned and presented themselves before their father and it appeared they had chosen widely different means of gaining a commendation.

'My father,' said the eldest, 'with a part of the hundred pieces of silver thou gavest me I bought a certificate setting forth my great skill in healing the sick. I cultivated my beard and put on glasses that I might appear to be a man of learning. I gave out that I was able to cure all known diseases; I administered broad pills and sweetened water to all who placed themselves under my care, and as a result, I have gained wealth to the extent of one thousand pieces of gold.'

'My son,' remarked the parent, well pleased, 'truly thy cheek is colored.'

'My father,' then said the second youth, 'with thy hundred pieces of silver I purchased votes by which I secured to myself a Government contract. I engaged to transport the mails for one thousand pieces of gold per annum, and by exceeding prudence of management I have gained profits upward of fifteen hundred pieces of gold.'

'Verily, thy shrewdness is monumental,' exclaimed the delighted father, 'but thy brother hath not yet spoken.'

'With one of thy pieces of silver, O, my father, began the youngest son, 'I bought some tools and became a plumber——'

'My son, thou pride of my heart!' cried the enraptured old man, falling on his neck, while the happy tears coursed down his aged cheeks, 'thou needest say no more. Thou hast clearly shown that thou hast discovered the true road to success. It is to thee, without a question, the ring belongs.'

High art is indispensable:—Lady—'But, professor, how came you to offend Mrs Smith?' Professor—'Ah, I will tell you. Madame Smit she come to me and she say I vant my daughter to sing so high as Mees Brown, and she fly in one rage and say she have no money to be wise, if a teeth and bones to buy a name, and crawls through life a paralytic To earn the praise of bard and critic.

Daily Intelligencer.

Kentucky.

To the Editor of the Intelligencer.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 15, 1883.

MR. EDITOR:—One expression of regard from a very near relative, came to me in the shape of the DAILY INTELLIGENCER; and it is very welcome on two grounds—in the capacity aforesaid, and because it is the INTELLIGENCER.

I have noticed therein, and read with pleasure, occasional letters from various correspondents travelling or residing in other lands or far off parts of the Dominion—but do not remember to have seen, for some time at all events, any letter to you from "the South." This is clearly an omission on the part of somebody, and to remedy the defect (!) caused by his omission, I deemed it prudent to write myself. If somebody, whoever he may be, should read this, he will see and, let us hope, regret the remissness. And, my dear sir, can we not see very clear traces of selfishness in this admission? Indeed, I fear it does. It seems to me we should go farther and say that he has been grossly negligent, to say nothing of his ingratitude. No doubt, sir, at this very moment he is revelling in the warm sunshine beneath the bright blue sky of Kentucky, or perhaps in the orange groves of Florida itself, or lounging beneath the shade of some of the Louisiana, or perhaps regaling himself with the delicacies of an early tropical season; and all, sir, with a selfish disregard of the pleasure he might have conferred at the expense of a little time, a few words, and a sheet of paper.

I do not propose in writing of Kentucky to discuss statistics of products or population at any length. Whenever Kentucky is mentioned there is immediately associated therewith, so far as products are concerned, whiskey, tobacco and horses. As to the population—here is the census return in a few words: Total number (census of 1880), 1,648,708, of which 1,377,187 white, and 271,461 colored; native born, 1,589,-269; foreign, 29,473, being 3,742 more born to 100,000 native. Kentucky is singularly barren of large towns, of which there are only five with a population of more than 7,500 persons, three with more than 10,000, and one (Louisville) with more than 100,000. Between Covington, with 29,910, and Louisville, with 125,000, there is no intermediate. The items of whiskey, tobacco, and horses deserve a more extended notice than I am prepared to give, or than you would care to have in this letter, and they are, therefore, reserved for future communication; though either with the handsome women, mammoth cave, mineral springs, coming exposition, and, so on, I may say, however, in passing, that considerable attention is being drawn towards the recent efforts of the whiskey distillers and others, to prevail upon the Dominion Government to modify the restrictions upon the importation of Canadian whiskey, so as to permit large quantities of that article to be shipped into Canada for the purpose of temporarily evading the United States internal revenue tax, shortly to be collected. The refusal of the Canadian authorities to allow this, I gather from the local papers, created a feeling of great disappointment among the aforesaid distillers; but, sir, need I assure you that the little knot of Canadians in this city, in dignified course pursued by our Government was extremely gratifying! However, the distillers have not given up the matter in this direction; and heavily loaded trays of "Bourbon" are continually passing to the railroad depots en route to Berlin, and five hundred thousand barrels of "rose paint" are to be taken of bond per annum, of which one half is being, and is to be sent to Bermuda.

Climatically considered, Kentucky has many advantages, and certainly some disadvantages. The present is a season of great beauty and the weather is really delightful. The trees are leaving out, and the peach trees are blossoming. Everything seems awakening to life after a winter's inactivity. During the summer months the heat at times becomes oppressive, yet I must confess to having felt the heat quite as exhausting in Belleville, Toronto and Montreal—particularly the latter. Incident to the subject of climate, are the ubiquitous mosquitoes, which from the beginning of August until the first frost are an intolerable nuisance; and the contrivances in the way of "bars" are a little amusing to a stranger, but without them it would be quite impossible to obtain a comfortable night's rest. The fall, as in Canada, is perhaps the most enjoyable portion of the whole year, and it is followed by a winter usually of a variable nature. At times the sun; aided by a south wind, makes very pleasant days. Last Christmas day, my wife and I had a most delightful drive, behind a young Canadian at dinner, who had only just arrived from Stratford, and we ate the conventional turkey and drank the health of the "old folks at home" in a room with the doors and windows of our dining room open. On the other hand, there is a great proportion of the winter weather that is highly disagreeable, characterized mostly with real dry, clear, frosty days and nights. During the past two winters I have spent here, there has been very little snow, and I was particularly struck with a statement in your local columns a few weeks ago that the date of that issue was the one hundred and seventh consecutive day of sleighing. As a contrast I can safely say that during the winter just past, snow has not remained on the ground here for twelve consecutive hours, and this in two sections of country only thirty-six hours apart.

I take it for granted, sir, that you have read the article by Dr. P. Bender, in the April number of the North American Review, entitled "A Canadian view of Annexation." Without inquiring at all as to the merits or demerits of the article, allow me to ask if you are aware of any reply having been made to it? Surely it demands such reply, if not on its own merits, certainly on account of the medium through which it was given to the public. Should its allegations go unchallenged it is not fair to presume that very many people will accept the statements made therein as the absolute facts in the premises? It is true that Sir Francis Hincks had a short editorial in the Journal of Commerce of a late issue. But it amounts to little more than a feeble remonstrance. Now, sir, do you not think Dr. Bender's article demands a searching and vigorous reply?

It is refreshing after so many miscarriages in the way of "local enterprises" in Belleville, to see, at length, one which promises to be carried to a successful issue. I refer to the Hart & Smith Stove Mfg. Co. The V. P. of that company I am proud to consider one of my earliest and best friends, and I violate no confidence, sir, in telling you that such an enterprise has been a cherished object of his ambition for many years; and under his practical supervision and extensive knowledge of the requirements of the trade, we shall certainly have the pleasure of seeing at least one more flourishing manufactory in Belleville. The enfranchised part of the matter is how the one or two trifling privileges asked of the City were granted by the Council with so little opposition. Certain it is that the encouragement therefore given by that noble board to the location of manufactories within the City limits, was no indication of such a complete change of tactics. Was it because the H. & S. Co. did not insist on a bonus?

Incidentally I have spoken of a few Canadians who are located in Louisville. There are not many; and, I believe most of them are employed in the offices of the Louisville & Nashville and other railroads. Others hold responsible positions in banks, mercantile houses &c., &c., and, so far as I know, are all doing well.

Many of us no doubt are becoming more or less attached to our "Kentucky homes"—the benedicts particularly; but still I think the following expresses the real feeling of the majority:

Kentucky, thou art bright and fair—
Thy fields are clad with verdure rare;
Enriched from nature's choicest store,
Long may thou be prosperous evermore.

Oh Canada! our hearts still cling to thee, but Closer, when distant from thy shore:
Dear to our thoughts and memory:
Canada the land we all adore.

Hard Lumps in Breast

DR. R. V. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y.: Dear Sir,—I wrote you some time ago that I thought I had a cancer. There was a large lump in my breast as large as a walnut, and had been there four months. I commenced taking your "Golden Medical Discovery," "Favorite Prescription" and "Pellets" in June and the lump is gone.

Yours gratefully, MRS. R. R. CLARK,
Irvington, Mich.

Why compel them to take those vile and nauseating medicines, when Putner's Emulsion is so palatable and nice, and produces better results than any other. Most extraordinary reports are daily recorded in favor of its cures, where other preparations of the kind have failed, and then been cast aside in disgust.

FOR DELICATE WOMEN, who are suffering from Anæmia and weakness, caused from over nursing, Putner's Emulsion is just what is required to give tone to the system, and will immediately build them up in health and strength.

Well as Ever.

Lottie Howard writes from Buffalo, N. Y. "My system became completely debilitated through arduous professional duties. I suffered from nausea, sick headache, and biliousness; tried Burdock Blood Bitters with the most beneficial effect. Am well as ever."

Would you avoid the sillary complaints incidental to spring and summer? Cleanse the system with Burdock Blood Bitters. It regulates the Liver, Bowels, Kidneys and Blood, and is the purest tonic in the world. Trial bottles 10 cents.

G. W. Mingay, Parkdale, Toronto, writes: "My wife had several very severe attacks of cramps in the stomach. Hearing of DR. AUSTIN'S PHOSPHATINE, and its pleasantness to take, I gave her two bottles, and she has not had so severe since, and for health is much improved." For sale by all druggists.

Shiloh's Consumption Cure.

This is beyond question the most successful Cough medicine we have ever sold, a few doses invariably cure the worst cases of Cough, Croup, and Bronchitis, while its wonderful success in the cure of Consumption is without a parallel in the history of medicine. Since it's first discovery it has been sold on a guarantee, a fact which no other medicine can stand. If you have a Cough we earnestly ask you to try it. Price 10cts. 50 cts. and $1.00. If your Lungs are sore, Chest, or Back, Lame, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. L. W. Yeomans & Co., wholesale and retail agents.

Prepare for Spring.

After a long, severe winter the system needs cleansing of its impurities. Nature must be assisted to recuperate, the Liver must be made to act, the blood made pure and impurities carried off. Zopessa acts as a gentle purgative. The results of a few doses are most surprising. Ask your druggist for a 10 cent sample, and try Zopessa, the most powerful remedy for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Constipation, and Biliousness ever introduced in this country.

CUT THIS OUT.

"Frank P. Warner came into our store to purchase a sample bottle of Zopessa for a friend, and stated that he (Mr. Warner) was afflicted with Kidney and Liver troubles for five years, and had paid $200 or $300 for Doctor's bills, and has now been completely cured by the use of two large bottles and one sample bottle of Zopessa. He was so had at one time that he lost 37 pounds of flesh, but after using Zopessa claims that he is a sound man, and now weighs 145 pounds. He was loud in his praise, and readily consented to allow us to use his name for reference."

In all, thirty-six petitions have been lodged. The elections of thirteen Conservatives and nineteen Reformers have been protested. Two of the petitions are against against the return of Mr. Metcalfe, and cross petitions have been filed against the unsuccessful Conservative candidates in North Ontario and East Huron, and against the defeated Grit candidate in Halton.

Each case will be tried before two Judges, and it is expected that all will have been decided before the 1st of July.

That "Christian Politician."

The Peterborough Review takes Mr. Mowat—the alleged "Christian politician"—thus sharply to task for having, as the Globe alleges, induced Mr. Striker to withdraw his petition against the return of his successful opponent :

"But supposing the Globe tells the truth, see what a position it has placed its party in by its indecent boasting. Either Mr. Striker and his friends were on the point of entering a protest without sufficient cause, simply because Mr. Hart is a political opponent, or else Mr. Mowat, who was in communication with Mr. Striker and must have known his reasons for the protest, prevailed upon him as a friend of the Government not to proceed with the petition but to let him take his seat. That is, the Premier of Ontario, the Attorney General and legal adviser of the Crown for the Province, connived at a corrupt arrangement for letting a candidate, not duly elected, misrepresent a constituency, because he would give the Government his support. No matter if the law were broken, no matter if the result was a misrepresentation of the constituency obtained by corrupt means, still Mr. Mowat was quite ready to be a party to the corruption by staying its exposure if he could thereby secure another vote to keep himself in power.

"What a nice man for the first law officer of the Province! An instigator of the quashing of law proceedings against a suspected law breaker, an accomplice in shielding a supporter in turn for his support! Is it any wonder that the Province is dismissing from power men who seem to glory in their corruption?"

After the appointment of the disrobed J. Currie as Registrar and of the malodorous S. S. Peck as Stipendiary Magistrate of Haliburton, no one can wonder at anything which Mr. Mowat may do.

It has been suggested that Mr. Mowat, finding that Mr. Striker (acting on his advice) had allowed the time for petitioning to expire, the best has been made of a bad mistake, and the Globe has endeavored to win over Mr. Hart by representing the Premier as having voluntarily advised the withholding of the petition. What success such an attempt would be likely to meet with is thus indicated by the Picton Gazette :

The Globe undertakes to gloss over the whole affair by stating in effect that the Government will find in Mr. Hart a slavish supporter. In this they will find out their mistake in due time. It is true Mr. Hart made certain concessions which he will faithfully carry out; further than this his friends can rely upon him to act fairly independently, and in the interest of his native province.

Answer This.

Can you find a case of Bright's Disease of the Kidneys, Diabetes, Urinary or Liver Complaints that is curable, that Hop Bitters has not or cannot cure? Ask your neighbors if they can.

Editorial Brevities.

The Hamilton Trybune (Independent Grit) makes the following hard hit at the leading organ of its party :—"The Globe is hard pressed to find a peg on which to hang an objection to the Dominion Franchise Bill. It erects a man of straw, and, dodging around it, delivers blow after blow at the unresisting object. It ridicules the idea of a property qualification, but proposes for it no substitute. True, it asks 'would it not be better to do away with the whole affair of a property qualification'; and to a careless reader this conveys the false impression (as doubtlessly it was intended to do) that the Globe and the Liberal party favor manhood suffrage. But the Globe does not say so. A shilly-shallying, a beating around the bush, a dont-say-any-thing-to-commit-the party kind of policy governs the present opinionless editor of the Globe who sits restlessly in the two-sizes-too-big-for-him managing-editor's chair, waiting for the "speak now" mandate from Mr. Blake at Ottawa. What an attitude for the once leading organ of public opinion in Canada to hold!"

It is to be hoped that those journalists who have been insinuating that the Princess Louise would never return to Ottawa, because of various reasons which were evolved from the inner consciousness of contemptible gossips, are content to chew their leek. It is not a very large leek, and the gutter-snipes of journalism are tolerably well acquainted with the flavor of leeks.

Some interesting and valuable information, says the Globe, is contained in a return presented to Parliament on the 20th. From the statistics it is gathered that for the year ending June 30th last there was an increase in the mileage of Canadian railroads of 269. The total nominal capital invested was $415,611,819, as compared with $389,285,700 at the corresponding period of the previous year. Upwards of nine and a quarter million passengers were carried, and thirteen and a half million tons of freight handled. The total earnings of all the roads were twenty-nine million dollars, the expenses twenty-two millions, leaving a net profit of $6,637,000.

The Picton Gazette suggests, in view of the early retirement of Sir Charles Tupper from the Cabinet and his departure for England, that "some public recognition should be given of the esteem the electors have for him as a statesman, prior to his departure from Canada. This recognition might take the form of a public banquet—in both Montreal and Toronto, as representing the commercial centres of the two Provinces—and should be supplemented with addresses from the Liberal-Conservative organizations in each constituency." Certainly Sir Charles Tupper has rendered great services to his country and to his party, and the Conservative party ought to mark their appreciation of those services in a tangible way. We approve of the idea of a banquet at Montreal, but not of the proposal to inflict a multitude of addresses on Sir Charles. Better by far present him with a service of plate, or some other substantial and valuable souvenir.

Says the Independent Monetary Times : "Some of the party journalists, who have for weeks past quoted from the Monetary Times the number of and names of failures that were taking place week by week, in order to show how badly the National Policy is working, will find cold comfort in to day's issue. In this province only two small failures are noted."

Hops.

The Montreal Gazette says :—The question of an export demand does not enter into the calculations of dealers here, as it is now conceded on all hands that the Canadian market is not sufficiently supplied with the home article to meet the wants of the trade during the next five months, and brewers do not look for much lower prices than these now ruling. There have been transactions in Canada hops since our previous report at 90c for choice, some for shipment and some for the city trade, but of course they refer only to small parcels, as brewers confine their purchases to immediate requirements, and will not need many for one or two months. There have been enquiries for hops during the past few days, but at lower figures, and the market may be called dull. The New York market was reported by the Commercial Bulletin of that city of April 18th, as follows ;—"The accounts coming from Europe are all more or less in favor of a strong market here. Lots there available for shipment have become quite scarce, while prices are now asked that tend to check purchasers of stock to come this way. London has not reached a point that would give promise to export business here right away, but the most conservative reports leave the impression that some supply must necessarily be secured from America before the end of the season. Cash sales on the spot ket have been made at 90c @ 92c for prime goods and 85c @ 87c for medium quality. A prominent brewer paid $1 (time) for a 5-bale lot, and another gave 95c cash. Quite a number of transactions with brewers at 90c @ 95c for good brewing qualities are reported, the whole making up a very fair volume of business.

Beware of Imitations.

Since Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has become celebrated, a number of unprincipled persons have been endeavoring to palm off Electron and Electric Oil for the genuine Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. Beware of these similar sounding articles. If their originators had any faith in the healing properties of their own medicines they would, like honest men, give them name of their own, and not try to sell them on the reputation of another; but as they know their preparations have no merit, they resort to the most unprincipled means of selling them by getting a name as near as possible to Eclectric. We therefore ask the public when purchasing to see that the name Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is on the front of the wrapper, and the signature of Scott & Lyman; the proprietors for Canada on the back.

Let there be no mistake about this, that the Myrtle Navy tobacco is manufactured from the very finest Virginia leaf. No higher quality of leaf can be purchased for any tobacco made. It is selected with the very greatest care, and treated with the most approved process for preserving the flavor of the tobacco.

A common, and often fatal, disease is Jaundice. Regulate the action of the Liver, and cleanse the blood with Burdock Blood Bitters, and the worst case may be speedily cured.

A New Principle.

The principle upon which Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor acts is entirely new. It does not sink deep into the flesh, thereby producing soreness, but acts directly upon the vital covering of the corn, separates it from the under layer, removes the direct pressure from the part, and at once effects a radical cure, without any pain or discomfort. Let those who are suffering from corns, yet skeptical of treatment, try it, and by the completeness of the cure, they will be ready to recommend Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor to others. N. C. To the Editor of the Intelligencer.

Sir,—Most of Commander Cheyne's audience were probably pleased, on the whole, with the lecturer's effort on Thursday night last in the City Hall. The scenes were certainly very fine and the description clear. But the lecturer surely failed to apprehend the moral tone of his audience here, as well as in Ottawa, when he thought to please by narrating an incident which occurred in a time of war, yet not in a battle scene and in which he confessed to have acted a part; which incident to a number of the audience, if not to all, appeared to be inhuman and wanton, viz.—That of shooting down, from a British man-of-war (though all true Britons would blush to acknowledge the act) a man who stood all alone on the shore, some three miles distant, and that with no other purpose that we could gather from the description given by the lecturer, than merely to gratify a vicious curiosity to see how nicely they could strike their mark, or have a little sport, the officer in command suggesting, according to his (the lecturer's) own confession, that they give that fellow on the shore a scare. His audience here did not wonder that the public at Ottawa were aroused to indignation at the cool narration of the incident in that city, as an illustrator of the accuracy of the British gunner; we would rather wonder that the lecturer would repeat so grave an offence to the sensibilities of a Christian public. And his effort last night to cast a reflection upon the religious sentiment that prompted a Christian people to resent such an offence, representing as he did such Christians as hypocritical, was certainly uncomplimentary to himself and offensive to a thoughtful people. Had it come from an avowed infidel lecturer engaged as such, then it might have been regarded as relevant; but in this case, to say the least, it was inexcusable. Yours sincerely,

D. Williams.

VERMILYEA'S SELF-FITTING CORSET.

To the Ladies of Belleville and Vicinity:

In order to correct an erroneous impression abroad relative to the suit pending between ourselves and J. S. and Elizabeth Guthrie, of St. Catharines, relative to a corset patent, we wish to say that the suit by us against the Guthries does not in any way affect "Vermilyea's self fitting Corset." The question in dispute was whether we had the exclusive right to manufacture in this section "Guthrie's Champion Corset" and its improvements. We contended we had the exclusive right. The defendants claimed we had only a right equal with themselves to sell in this section. The Court held that we had not the exclusive right, and we at once took the necessary proceedings for appeal to the full court.

We still have the right, and it is not disputed, to manufacture "Guthrie's Champion Corset" and the improvements thereof in this section. "Vermilyea's Self-Fitting Corset" is not in question, for it is a patent of our own invention, and needs no recommendation as it is so well known to our lady customers all over Ontario. We are now sending our Corsets into New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, and they are also being manufactured in Winnipeg.

We have on hand a full stock of Ladies' Underclothing, all our own manufacture.

Thanking the ladies for patronage in the past we still hope for a continuance of the same.

BELLEVILLE, MONDAY, APRIL 23.

City and Vicinity.

ST. GEORGE'S DAY.

THERE was a partial eclipse of the moon yesterday morning.

THERE was nothing doing at the Police Court this morning.

THE masons began work on the stove foundry this morning.

THE temperature last night registered 6° below the freezing point.

No. 1 steamer was engaged to-day in filling the water tank on Octavia street.

J. M. FERRIS, M. P. P., and G. Striker, ex-M. P. P., were in the city to-day.

HON. MR. BOWELL arrived here yesterday morning and left for Ottawa at noon today.

BUSINESS in police circles is unusually dull. The last recorded arrest was made on Friday night.

THE members of the Ministerial Association had a general exchange of pulpits yesterday morning.

THE members of the Driving Park Association are requested to meet at the office of Mr. Henry Corby, to-night.

MR. W. T. SPENCER, telegraph operator at the G. J. R. depot in this city, is laid up with inflammatory rheumatism.

THE Township Council of Amoliasburg, held a meeting on Saturday last to consider some matters relating to the ferry lease.

THERE is no change to note in the condition of the fever patients at the Institute. With the above exceptions, the general health of the pupils is good.

MESSRS. Downey & Preston purchased on Saturday last 2,658 dozen eggs, in the market here, for export, and for which they paid $372.12, or 14c. per doz.

THE best of people are liable to make mistakes. Those who took their stoves down last week erred somewhat—but then they may not be included among the best of people.

BASEBALL is a popular pastime among the youthful residents of the northern part of the city on Sunday. Some of them act if it would not be inappropriate to take their measure for a rawhide.

THE management of the Intercolonial Railway has issued the best guide book ever published by any railway in Canada. The illustrations are of a superior character, and the descriptive matter is highly interesting and instructive.

WE are informed that the landslide story which appeared in Saturday's issue and which was clipped from the Peterboro' Review, was greatly exaggerated and had it been carefully pruned would have made a nearer approach to correctness.

MR. W. POUDSON, late Mechanical Superintendent of the G. J. R. here, was on Friday last presented by the employees of the line with a handsome gold chain and locket. The locket bears the monogram of the recipient and was suitably inscribed.

A. G. J. R. TRAIN went to Hastings this morning to bring down another instalment of timber. Last night, however, the boom at that place which contained the timber broke and the latter got so mixed in with logs that none of it could be loaded to-day.

THE Varuna and Utica pumped the water out of the Mary Ethel on Saturday and jack screws were put under the latter to raise her so that the necessary repairs could be made to her. From some unexplained cause the screws slipped and the steamer again went to the bottom.

MR. W. P. CHARLES, Evangelist from St. Louis, who was announced to address the meeting in Metropolitan Hall yesterday, did not appear, having missed connection at Toledo. He however arrived by noon train to-day, and will assist Mr. Irving in the Bethel Hall every evening this week.

AN order-in-council was passed on the 17th of April setting apart that portion of the Otonabee river from Lock's bridge, Peterboro', to its inlet at Rice Lake, the waters of Rice Lake and its tributaries, with the River Trent down to the Bay of Quinte, in the province of Ontario, for the natural and artificial propagation of fish for three years from April 1st.

THE mystery in reference to Janet Blakey, who suddenly disappeared from Stockdale, a village two miles west of Frankford, March 23d, has been solved. It was generally supposed that she was drowned, and sure enough, her body was found on Thursday, by Mr. Henry Bowerman in his mill pond in Cold Creek, after diligent search. He was just going to give up the search, when crossing for the last time he discovered the body.

THE Society of the Sons of England met at their hall, Robertson block, Front street, yesterday and having formed in procession marched to Christ Church, where the annual sermon was preached by Rev. Mr. Sibbald. The sacred edifice was well filled by the members of the society and their friends. The discourse was earnest and practical and thoroughly appropriate to the occasion. Mr. Fetherston and the choir materially assisted in the service. A concert will be given in the City Hall to night under the auspices of the Society, when a programme embracing many excellent features will be presented.

THERE was a large attendance at the Ministerial Association this morning, and the meeting was exceedingly interesting. Mr. McLean, the President, was in the chair. Reports were individually received from the members present concerning the exchange of pulpits yesterday, all expressing great pleasure in taking part in it. The Association made arrangements for a systematic study of the false religions of the world as compared with Christianity. Mr. Stobo read an interesting paper on the Judgment, which was a careful exegesis of 2 Cor. v., 10 and 11, with special reference to the saints, and it was discussed by the members present.

THE excursion season on the Moira River opened yesterday morning under favorable circumstances as to wind and weather, but the finale was disastrous and damp. The party comprised Michael McAlary and James Hume, employed at Corby's Mill, their boat was a punt, and their destination the west side of the river above Corby's dam. They were attired in their best clothes and wore reversible collars and plug hats. The boat got under way and the momentous journey began. When near the middle of the stream, Mac was telling Hume a funny story. The punt got under control the current, and notwithstanding the efforts of the boatsmen, the craft went over the dam, upset, and its occupants made two holes in the water. Being good swimmers and of strong physique, they succeeded in reaching the shore readily; wetter and sadder but somewhat wiser than when they started. Their next trip will be to Carnfton on foot.

AMONG the throng who visited this city on Saturday were many residents of Thurlow and Tyendinaga. Some of them lingered long and late and when they started for their homes showed the effects of too frequent liquidation. At a point on the Kingston Road about three miles from Belleville some of them met and engaged in conversation. In was in the vicinity of eleven o'clock when an individual hove in sight. He stood up in his waggon and his team were running for all they were worth. He neared the vicinity of those engaged in conversation and ran his waggon against a buggy owned by one of the talkers. The buggy was badly smashed, the waggon was slightly injured and the horses attached to each rig were thrown into the ditch on the roadside. Loud talk resulted, and as others came along they joined in. A fight at one time was imminent, but hostilities were fortunately avoided and the parties were enabled to go home without hurting one another, even had they the desire.

WEATHER PROBABILITIES—Toronto, April 23.—Lakes, fresh to strong north to east winds, continued cool, fair to cloudy weather, with local rains in some localities.

FOOTBALL.—A football match between the High School and the Institute clubs was played on Saturday afternoon on the grounds of the latter club. The play was spirited throughout, and some very good dodging was done on both clubs. The Institute club, however, play more into one another's hands, and keep their strength in reserve. The first game was won by the Institute club in 15 minutes, and the second game was won by the same club in 40 minutes, thus making the score 2 to 0 in favor of the Institute.

TERRIBLE EFFECTS OF A CYCLONE.

Twenty People Killed—75 Wounded.

200 HOUSES BLOWN DOWN

People and Trees Blown Hundreds of Yards.

WISSON, Miss., April 23.—A frightful cyclone passed over Wissen and Beauregard, a mile above here, yesterday afternoon. Its approach was made known by deep rumbling sounds. Some people supposed it was an earthquake. The thunder roared and lightning flashed with alarming force. Fences were blown down, and trees uprooted and cast a hundred yards away. East of the railroad in Wisson the damage was light, but in the western portion of the town the destruction was awful. In Peach Orchard street, where are a large number of houses, in which the operatives of the Mississippi Mills live, the greatest destruction occurred. People on all sides were sobbing, and the groans of the wounded beneath the ruins was appalling. Dwellings were torn to atoms, and a pine forest just beyond was blown out of existence. The church bells were rung, and people flocked to the scene from all directions.

When the storm had somewhat abated the work of removing the dead and extricating the wounded began. Calvin Read died from the excitement. Doctors soon arrived and did all in their power to relieve the wounded. It is estimated that 12 persons were killed, 2 or 3 children are missing, and 150 or 200 dwellings were blown from their foundations. Some escapes were miraculous. The number of people with broken limbs is estimated at 75. The wounded were removed as fast as possible to the houses which escaped injury. Several of the dead lay in the violent rain for more than an hour. It is feared many of the wounded will die.

Among the killed are Mrs. Cassty and two children; several children of J. E. Gilbert, one of whom was found crushed under the chimney; two persons were so mangled as to be unrecognizable. A little boy was blown several hundred yards, unhurt. Beauregard, which lay in the direct path of the cyclone, is now one mass of ruins. The roads are filled with fallen trees, and there is no a house standing in the place. The brick stores of Thompson & Co. and Daniels & Co., the largest in the place, were swept away, and timber scattered for miles.

The list of the dead and wounded is as follows: John Ross, mortally; Milton Strong, killed; Morgan James, mortally; Isaac Bloom, seriously; W. M. Daniel, mortally; Turnbull, of Brookhaven, fatally; Capt. Lampkins, wife and child, all dead; Geo. Hollaway, mortally; John Hallivay, leg broken. The depot was swept away, not a sign of it remains. Wilcox, both arms broken; A. J. Ferguson and family, ten persons, dangerously wounded; Char. Lane, mortally; Dr. A. J. Herce and child, mortally; their house fell on them; J. O. Williams, dead.

ANOTHER CYCLONE.

DESMOINES, Io., April 24.—A cyclone passed up the Maple River Valley last evening. The Danbury Catholic Church was wrecked and three houses were blown down and other minor damage inflicted. No lives are reported lost.

STILL ANOTHER.

WESTPOINT, Miss., April 23.—A terrific gale struck this town yesterday afternoon, accompanied by torrents of rain, and the largest hail ever seen. The Court House, Lawyer's Row, Central Hotel, Cotton Exchange office, Olympic Saloon, Henry House, Bibb's store and Finigan Hall were unroofed and damaged. A barber shop was partly blown down, and fences and trees were prostrated. No lives were lost.

Marine.

The first steamer to arrive here this season was the Quinte, of the Deseronto Navigation Company. She looks neat, clean and trim, and as bright as a new white cage in a circus procession. She is commanded by Captain Graves, while Amos Baker is the receiver of shekels, and clerk. Her route is the same as that of last year, viz: between Picton and Trenton.

The steam barge Belle Wilson, of Picton, is laid beneath the surface of a brand new exterior of paint, and looks as bright as a silver dollar fresh from the mint. She has been chartered for the summer season by Gilmour & Co., to carry lumber between Trenton and Oswego, at Port Hope rates—which figures have not as yet been set. She is expected to pass up from the Stone Mills, where she laid up, to Trenton, this afternoon or to-morrow.

The steam barge Sazen, which was laid up at Trenton, will pass down on Wednesday, with lumber for Oswego.

The Deseronto resumed her route this morning between Deseronto and Picton.

The tug Bonar left here this morning to bring up the schooner D. Freeman, which is laden with coal.

The Turtle Dove was the first craft to bring a load of wood to this city this season. She is reputed to be quite speedy since the addition was made to her length.

The scow Frank Smith is being put in order for the season.

The fly of the Mary Foster once more floats to the breeze and she is ready for orders.

The D. Freeman arrived this afternoon.

O. Bortle, of Manchester, Ontario Co., N.Y., writes:—"I obtained immediate relief from the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. I have had Asthma for eleven years. Have been obliged to sit up all night for ten or twelve nights in succession. I can now sleep soundly all night on a feather bed, which I had not been able to do previous to using the Oil."

MORNING DESPATCHES.

AMERICAN.

THE DYNAMITE DEMONS.

JERSEY CITY, April 23.—Ex-Coroner Burns says: Lynch and five others now under arrest in London were sent to England by a Committee of the Fenian Brotherhood, composed of Rossa, Edward J. Rowe and Joseph Cramien. Their action was endorsed by the Executive Committee. Dr. Gallagher was one of those men, Jos. McAlpine, of Jersey City, clerk in a dry goods store in New York, was another, and a man named Delany, under arrest as Dalton, was another.

DYNAMITING CONDEMNED.

At a meeting of the representatives of the Irish societies here, at which delegates to the Philadelphia convention were appointed, a resolution was adopted condemning the use of dynamite, as at present applied.

ROUGH WEATHER ON THE LAKES.

CHICAGO, April 23.—The schooner Evelyne Bates, from Muskegon for Chicago with posts, was wrecked in a storm on Saturday night. The crew of five men and a woman were rescued by the life savers. The lake is very rough and vessels coming in are more or less damaged. It is feared some will be driven on the west shore.

DYNAMITING ADVOCATED.

The old guard of the Fenian Brotherhood and Fourth Ward Land League yesterday appointed a delegate to the Irish Convention, at Philadelphia, of Fenian delegates. He was instructed to advocate the dynamite policy. The Land League delegates are unInstructed but they are said to favor it.

FIGHTING THE INDIANS.

HELENA, Montana, April 23.—The troops overtook the Band of Crees who stole horses near Benton. They killed their chief and two bucks and wounded several others. The remainder escaped across the British line. The Indians opened fire first.

THE MURDERS OF INFORMERS.

DUBLIN, April 23.—It is stated that a prisoner in Kilmainham gaol has given evidence to the authorities which throws complete light on the murders of informers during the past year.

GREAT LOSS AT LIVERPOOL.

LIVERPOOL, April 23.—The loss by the burning of Bates, cotton warehouse and Garner, Bibbs & Co's ship chandlery, on Saturday night, is now fixed at £250,000.

EXTENT OF THE CONSPIRACY.

LONDON, April 23.—The Times says that the Government has obtained information on recent inquiries, that the enrolled members of the Fenian organization in the United Kingdom number 150,000, and that there are besides distinct organizations of Fenianism, such as Vigilants and Invincibles. Kingston, who was arrested in Liverpool, belonged to both these branches. Such double membership is unusual. There are besides secret sections affiliated with the American dynamite party. The police have accurate information regarding the movements of the conspirators, and it is expected further revelations will be made.

KELLY AGAIN ON TRAIL.

DUBLIN, April 23.—Timothy Kelly, an alleged Phœnix Park murderer, was again placed on trial to-day.

VERDICT FOR BRADLAUGH.

LONDON, April 23.—The Lord Chief Justice has rendered a decision in favor of Bradlaugh, in his action against Newdegate, a member of Parliament, for maintaining the suit of Clarke against Bradlaugh, in regard to the latter sitting and voting in the House of Commons without taking the oath.

MORE THREATS.

Letters have been received by the officers of the branch of the Bank of England at Portmouth, threatening the destruction of the building by dynamite. Detectives have been detailed to watch the bank.

A Licensing Commission.

The Committee on liquor legislation agreed to recommend the appointment of a licensing commission to consist of the County Judge, the Mayor or Warden and a third party appointed by the Government. It is proposed to grant five licenses for the first 1,000 inhabitants and one for every additional 300 up to 3,000. It has also been agreed to summon the Rev. Thomas Gales, of Montreal, the Secretary of the Dominion Alliance for the Total Suppression of the liquor traffic, to give evidence before the Committee.

Attack on a Circus.

A DISSATISFIED MOB OPEN FIRE ON THE EMPLOYEES—SEVERAL OF THE LATTER WOUNDED.

DOVER, Del., April 21.—O'Brien's circus and menagerie, which exhibited here on Saturday, was attacked by a mob after the evening performance. The mob opened fire on the waggons being hauled to the depot for embarkation, and eight or ten circus employees were shot, some seriously. Chas Henderson, one of the proprietors, was shot in the eye and head, and one of the drivers was shot from a waggon. The police made no arrests. A committee of citizens waited upon the sheriff and requested him to restore order, and call out the militia if necessary to suppress the outbreak. Several private residence and places of business were riddled with bullets. The mob was dissatisfied with the show. It is stated that there is no hope of the recovery of Henderson.

The Bad and Worthless

are never imitated or counterfeited. This is especially true of a family medicine, and it is positive proof that the remedy imitated is of the highest value. As soon as it had been tested and proved by the whole world that Hop Bitters was the purest, best and most valuable family medicine on earth, many imitations sprung up and began to steal the notices in which the press and people of the country had expressed the merits of H. B., and in every way trying to induce suffering invalids to use their stuff instead, expecting to make money on the credit and good name of H. B. Many others started nostrums put up in similar style to H. B., with variously devised names in which the word "Hop" or "Hops" were used in a way to induce people to believe they were the same as Hop Bitters. All such pretended remedies or cures, no matter what their style or name is, and especially those with the word "Hop" or "Hops" in their name or in any way connected with them or their name, are imitations or counterfeits. Beware of them. Touch not, taste not. Use nothing but genuine Hop Bitters, with a bunch or cluster of green Hops on the white label. Trust nothing else. Druggists and dealers are warned against dealing in imitations or counterfeits.

One of Earth's Angels.

As it did so, the door opened a second time, and the brisk young person entered with the first course. Mrs. Stanford placed her little son back in the crib, and sat down to her solitary dinner. She ate very little. The lodging house soups and stews had never been so distasteful before. She pushed the things away, with a feeling of loathing, and went back to her low chair, and fell into a train of dismal misery. Her thoughts went back to Canada to her happy home at Canton Hall.

Only one little year ago she had given the world for love, and thought it well lost —and now! Love's young dream, splendid in theory, is not always quite so splendid in practice. Love's young dream had wound up after eleven months in poverty, privation, sickness and trouble, a neglectful husband, and a crying baby! How happy she had been in that bright girlhood, gone forever! Life had been one long summer holiday, and she dressed in silks and jewels, one of the queen bees in the great human hive. The silks and the jewels had gone to the pawnbroker long ago, and here she sat, alone, in a miserable lodging house, subsisting on unpalatable food, sleeping on a hard mattress, sick and wretched, with that whimpering infant's wails in her ears all day and all night. Oh! how long ago it seemed since she had been bright and beautiful, and happy, and free—hundreds of years ago at the very least! She sighed in bitter sorrow, as she thought of the past —the irredeemable past.

'Oh, what a fool I was!' she thought, bursting into hysterical tears. 'If I had only married Jules La Touche, how happy I might have been! He loved me, poor fellow, and would have been true always, and I would have been rich, and happy, and honored. Now I am poor, and sick, and neglected, and despised, and I wish I were dead, and all the trouble over!'

Mrs. Stanford sat in her low chair, brooding over such dismal thoughts as these, while the slow hours dragged on. The baby slept, for a wonder. A neighboring church clock struck the hours solemnly one after another—ten, eleven, twelve! No, Mr. Stanford yet, but that was nothing new. As midnight, struck, Rose got up, secured the door, and going into an inner room, flung herself, dressed as she was, on the bed and fell into the heavy, dreamless sleep of exhaustion.

She slept so soundly that she never heard a key turn in the lock, about three in the morning, or a man's unsteady step crossing the floor. The lamp still burning on the table, enables Mr Reginald Stanford to see what he was about, otherwise, serious consequences might have ensued. For Mr. Stanford was not quite steady on his legs, and lurched as he walked, as if his wife's sitting room had been the deck of a storm tossed vessel.

'I s'pose she's gone to bed,' muttered Mr. Stanford, hiccoughing. 'Don't want to make her—hic—a devil of a row! I ain't drunk, but I don't want to wake her.'

Mr. Stanford lurched unsteadily across the parlor, and reconnoitred the bedroom. Rose was sleeping soundly. He was wife there asleep, and after making one or two furtive efforts to remove his boots, stretched himself, boots and all, on a lounge in the sitting room, and in five minutes was as sound as one of the Seven Sleepers.

It was late next morning before either of the happy pair awoke. A vague idea that there was a chine in the air aroused the Reginald Stanford of clocks. A confused fog in his brain, that a too liberal allowance of rosy wine is too apt to engender, took some time to clear away; but when it did, he became conscious that the noise was not part of his dreams, but some one knocking loudly at the door.

Mr Stanford staggered sleepily across the apartment, unlocked the door, and admitted the brisk young woman who brought them their meals.

Mr. Stanford, yawning very much, proceeded to make his toilet. Twelve months of matrimony had changed the handsome ex-lieutenant, and not for the better. He looked thinner and paler; his eyes were sunken, and encircled by dark halos, telling of night revels and morning headaches. But that wonderful beauty that had blinded and dazzled her had lost its power to charm. She had been married to him a year—quite long enough to be disenchanted. That handsome face might fascinate other foolish moths; it had lost its power to dazzle her long, long ago. Perhaps the disenchantment was mutual; for the pretty rose checked, starry eyed girl who had captivated his idle fancy had become a dream of the past, and his wife was a pale, sickly, peevish invalid, with frowsy hair and slipshod feet.

The clattering of the cups and saucers awoke the baby, who began squalling dismally; and the baby's cries awoke the baby's mamma. Rose got up, feeling cramped and unrefreshed, and came out into the parlor with the infant in her arms. Her husband turned from a dreary contemplation of the sun trying to force its way through a dull, yellow fog, and dropped the curtain.

'Good morning, my dear,' said Mr. Stanford, pouring out a cup of tea. 'How are you to-day? Can you make that disagreeable youngster hold his confounded tongue?'

'What time did you get home last night?' demanded Mrs. Stanford, with flashing eyes.

'It wasn't last night, my dear,' replied Mr. Stanford, serenely, buttering his roll; 'it was sometime this morning, I believe.'

'And of course you were drunk as usual.'

'My love, pray don't speak so loudly; they'll hear you down stairs,' remonstrated the gentleman. 'Really, I believe I had been imbibing a little too freely. I hope I did not disturb you. I made as little noise as possible on purpose, I assure you. I even slept in my boots, not being in a condition to take them off. Wash your face, my dear, and comb your hair—they both need it very much—and come, take some breakfast. If that baby of yours won't hold its tongue, please to throw it out of the window.'

Mrs. Stanford's reply was to sink into the rocking-chair and burst into a passion of tears.

'Don't, pray!' remonstrated Mr. Stanford; 'one's enough to cry at a time. Do come and have some breakfast. You're hysterical this morning, that is evident, and a cup of tea will do you good.'

'I wish I were dead!' burst out Rose, passionately. 'I wish I had been dead before I ever saw your face!'

'I dare say, my love. I can understand your feelings, and sympathize with them perfectly.'

'Oh, what a fool I was!' cried Rose, rocking violently backward and forward; 'to leave my happy home, my indulgent father, my true and devoted lover, for you! To leave wealth and happiness for poverty, and privation, and neglect, and misery! Oh, fool! fool! fool that I was!'

'Very true, my dear,' murmured Mr. Stanford sympathetically. 'I don't mind confessing that I was a fool myself. You cannot regret your marriage any more than I do mine.

This was a little too much. Rose sprang up, flinging the baby into the cradle, and faced her lord and master with cheeks of flame and eyes of fire.

'You villain!' she cried. 'You cruel, cold-blooded villain, I hate you! Do you hear, Reginald Stanford, I hate you! You have deceived me as shamefully as ever man deceived woman! Do you think I don't know where you were last night, or whom you were with? Don't I know it was with that miserable, degraded French woman—that disgusting Madame Millefleur—whom I would have whipped through the streets of London, if I could.'

RACKED BY INSUMERABLE PANGS, restless by day, sleepless at night, rising unrefreshed in the morning, without appetite and pestered with loathing and perplexing symptoms, the dyspeptic knows indeed a gloomy view of human existence. For him the zest of life seems gone. Heartburn, oppression at the pit of the stomach, and the attendant annoyance of constipation and biliousness, combine to render him utterly wretched. But there is, if he will but take advantage of it, a reliable source of reliable relief from all misery. NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY and DYSPEPTIC CURE is, as its name imports, a botanic preparation, free from mineral poison, and an all-sufficient remedy for indigestion in its most obstinate form. It not only enriches the blood by enabling the digestive organs to convert the food received into nutriment, but depurates it by increasing the action of the bowels and kidneys, the natural outlets for its impurities. But while it relaxes the bowels, it never does so violently and with pain, like a drastic cathartic pill, but never forces Nature, invigorating as well as purifying and regulating the system. It thoroughly removes those diseased humors which tend to vitiate the blood, purifies the urinary secretion, and promotes a flow of healthy bile into the natural channel, besides expelling it from the circulation. Experience has proved that this standard medicine is a thorough remedy for dyspepsia, biliousness, costiveness, kidney complaints, scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, lumbago and all impurities of the blood. Price $1.00. Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac-simile of their signature. Sold by all medicine dealers

Clever Diamond Swindle

A BLUISH TINT GIVES TO DIAMONDS WHICH DECEIVED MANY EXPERTS.

A despatch from New Haven, Conn., says: Jacob Nepel, a diamond broker, was arrested Sunday by Detective Reilly, charged with obtaining money under false pretenses from Edward Engel, a pawnbroker. Bail in $2,000 was required and furnished by Mr. Steinert, the pawnbroker. Mr. Engel states that he has in his possession a diamond which came from Nepel, five of them being 3/4 in size studs, a pair of ear rings, and a finger ring. On these he advanced $625, and now finds that they are not worth more than from $300 to $400. Mr. Engel says that on March 27 a young man, who subsequently proved to be C. R. Dormas, son of a carriage maker in New Haven, brought him a diamond stud weighing three carats, on which he wanted $200. He represented that he had been sent to Mr. Engel by a party staying at the Grand Union hotel, who was in need of money. The stone also appeared to the pawnbroker like a rare gem, something not often seen, and he gave a check for the desired amount. A few days after it came blush tint which makes a diamond so valuable. Mr. Engel went so far as to question the police as to whether they had such a stone of the kind had been stolen, and received a reply in the negative. Chief of Police Webster himself examined the stone, and was greatly pleased with its appearance. A local jeweler, of 35 years' experience, to whom it was shown, said he had never saw anything like it before. The next afternoon another young man called at Engel's again, bringing a solitaire pair of ear rings, and a solitaire ring. The ear rings he said were purchased at Tiffany's and cost $700. He represented that the owner needed $425. All the diamonds, he said, belonged to the same party. Mr. Engel knowing him the money asked for, supposing the stones were of the old mine variety. The day after he showed them to Miller & Burdell, of No. 13 John Street, New York. They asked him how much he paid for the stones. When Mr. Engel mentioned the price they said that they must have been stolen; they could not have been obtained honestly at the sum named. The stud which brought $200 they said was worth $1,000.

The result of the enquiry Mr. Engel told the police here was as follows: "I had heard that wonderful stones in the colors I saw, and to look like the gems of the first water, and so I asked Heller & Burdell if it was possible that these stones had been put through the process. They laughed when I told them that they had read about such things, but they did not believe any preparation could give the shine the appearance of the rays on the stud. They made a test, however, and by a good scrubbing of soap and water all the rich bluish tinge was made to disappear, and the beautiful stone turned out to be nothing but the common African diamond, with which the market is flooded. Instead of being worth $1,000 it would hardly bring $100. All other stones were subjected to the same process, and the fine color disappeared in the same manner."

On April 2 young Dormas came again to Engel, this time bringing a two carat stone with the same blue tint, for which he wanted $2500. Acting on information given him the police, Mr. Engel retained the stone and said he would settle with the owner. It transpired that the diamonds came from Nepel, who had obtained them from Nepel, who agreed to give him a percentage for disposing of them. Mr. Engel states that the parties interested—Nepel, Dormas and the young man—been to him offering to settle the case by paying him the difference between the actual value of the stones and the sum he had loaned them, competent judges to estimate the real worth of the diamonds.

George B. Ford, the jeweller, says that he has seen a number of artificially washed diamonds, and that many merchants have, abouts have been deceived by them. He states that a scientific paper recently published an account of a similar fraud perpetrated in Paris. A magnificent stone, sold at an enormous price, lost one sixth of its value in consequence of a simple washing in soapy water. Purchased as a Brazilian gem, it was thus discovered to be only a Cape diamond of a honey-yellow color. The process of washing yellow diamond colorless, according to this statement, consists in plunging the stone for a few moments in a aqueous solution of the antiline violet. After drying every trace of color vanishes, while the lustre remains unobscured.

John Brown

SOME OF THE STORIES ABOUT QUEEN VICTORIA'S FAVORITE GILLIE.

On one occasion the Queen, accompanied by two of her daughters, was returning to Balmoral from a visit to Glassalt, when suddenly two horses started aside from a road they were unaccustomed to. It was an awkward spot for an accident, but John Brown, realizing the danger at a glance, exclaimed "Pull up!" so vigorously to the coachman, that serious consequences were averted. As it was, the carriage was overturned and the royal party were thrown out. At a little distance the coachman lay insensible. The outriders was on before, and only John Brown remained to do duty for all. With great coolness he whipped out his clasp knife and quietly cut the traces to free the struggling animals, and bore the unmanned coachman to a place of safety. It is alleged that only for a moment he was perplexed, when his lamp went out, and the unpaved state of the station caused him to stumble. When young mad O'Connell darted out on her from the shrubbery at Buckingham Palace, pistol in hand, he positively pinched the pane very rough up from the ground as if he had been an offending kitten, and held him out so, clawing the air with his paws, till the Queen had passed out of harm's way.

So, too, he was death on all intruders on the Queen's privacy. Once when one of the press reporters whom he suspected of dogging her footsteps for "copy," he ordered them off the public highway as though he had all the Highlands in fee. He was grossly illegal, but they went. It is well known, too, that his ready tact has smoothed the Queen's way in the humble Highland home she has honored with her presence. "You see, he is one of ourselves, and his familiar face beside Her Majesty puts heart into us." Without a native pioneer it can be easily imagined how difficult it would have been for the Queen to make her way amongst a people whose language and manner and customs were strange to her. And upon the other hand how little sympathy there could have been between the exalted lady and the simple cotters! Her Majesty sometimes made her calls on unfortunate days; when "cleaning" was going on; and there was a thorough turn up in the household. On such occasions an ordinary herald would have been nonplussed, probably, but not he. Coolly seeking out the gudewife, he informed her officially that the Queen was at the door, and in the same breath rated her soundly for not being prepared to receive Her Majesty. He did not leave her in the lurch, however, but vigorously set to work to whisk pail and brooms out of sight, and make things straight before the royal visitors appeared on the scene.

In return for his faithful and discriminating service, the Queen was at times inclined to be over generous in substantial acknowledgment. On one notable occasion, the Queen's son-in-law, Prince Christian, who was the Ranger of Windsor Forest, proposed before the close of the pheasant season to have a small shooting party of his own friends. As is the custom in such cases, he submitted the names to Her Majesty, and they were approved, with the hope that Mr. Brown should be included in the number. The Prince politely bowed to this request, but instead of sending out the invitations as he had intended, he sent them, and he and "Mr. Brown" had the sport to themselves. The Queen, however, was by no means satisfied with this arrangement, and on this slight came from the one member of the royal circle for whom her Majesty has a profound regard, and whom she consults more than any other member of her family, this little annoyance was felt with all the more soreness. On another occasion when the court was established in Ravena in Italy, Brown was indisposed. As he had no faith in the skill of any one raised south of the Tweed, he obtained the services of Sir Wm. Jenner, who was deemed clever enough for Her Majesty, and clamored for Dr. Marshall, the ordinary attendant of the royal household, who was absent on a holiday, the first for several years. So, in order to appease Brown, Dr. Marshall travelled across Europe to attend to his very ordinary ailment, at an expense to Her Majesty of some hundred guineas. A more substantial reward than such attentions as these, however, was given to Brown a year or two ago, when Her Majesty had built for his use, within the grounds at Balmoral, a plain, but spacious square mansion, occupying a pleasant situation in the centre of a lawn-like expanse of the royal demesne, with a carriage drive leading to it from one of the avenues. This abode was, doubtless, intended for his use in his declining years, after his regard should have passed away, but it was destined never to be permanently occupied. Brown remained in personal attendance on the Queen up to the time of his death, and he sat in his accustomed place behind her carriage when the last attempt was made upon her life, at Windsor, a little over a year ago.

Wilkie Collins.

I dare say you have seen pictures of him in his books, and as he believes in Anderson's sanitor on eleven years ago many readers of this will recall his appearance. He is much older in appearance than he was then, more stooped and grayer. Even when stooping a man of low stature, he has drawn his head down into his shoulders until he looks even smaller. Time has treated him none too well and disease has given him many a twitch and turn that he has never got straightened out. His skull is deep in front, eyes prominent and sparkling though the steel trimmed spectacles he habitually wears, mustache light of growth and beard long, square-cut and well trimmed, he looks, but for his rather debonaire dress, like an amiable patriarch of the East. His clothes gave him a debonnaire air that is very engaging. This day he wears a blue flannel jauntily cut coat and waistcoat, a pair of worn and, in one or two places mended pants' loose, neat fitting kid boots, infant's size, almost, and a linen shirt dashed with great gray squares, cut low in the neck and held together with a rakishly tied Belcher scarf. When he takes his seat he looks like it notice that he has a nervous movement of his knee, as if he were soothing invisible babies, and that the fingers of his left hand while hands are pear-shaped—swollen by rheumatic gout, he explains, from which he has long been a sufferer.—Correspondence Philadelphia Times

BELLEVILLE, TUESDAY, APRIL 24.

The East Hastings Protest.

Since the close of the contest in East Hastings, the eyes of the electors throughout the County have been turned in the direction of that Riding, knowing that some impetuous members of the Grit party there in, who are but the pliant tools of the Mowat Government and the office seekers under that Government, are "in season and out of season" passing the hat to raise the necessary funds to enter a protest whenever a Conservative is the successful candidate.

Many members of the Grit party felt that they would be fighting against fate in entering a protest, as they knew that the electors would simply be put to the inconvenience of re electing Mr. Hudson by an increased majority should he be unseated. Still it was supposed that a petition against the return of Mr. Hudson might be entered, in obedience to the mandates of the "powers that be" at Toronto. When the time had passed in which petitions could be entered, the electors generally, irrespective of politics, were grateful to find that they had been relieved from the worry which would have been entailed, even if the protest failed.

Had the petition, which we are informed was prepared in the office of a law firm in this city, been entered, it would only have been so at the instigation of Mr. Mowat himself, as its non-production in the proper quarter shows that the party here were not willing to proceed with the protest, although urged by the little Premier, whose short hold on Ontario is so uncertain. Some Grits say openly that the petition was stolen. If so, by whom? Not by a Conservative, as no Conservative ever claimed place or power, or other advantages from the revelations of a stolen document. If the petition was lost or stolen a new one could have been prepared in a short time, so we are of the opinion that such a claim for non-procedure will not receive credence. However, it is alleged, and upon the best of authority, that the reason for the petition falling through was a mistake make by Mr. Mowat—that Mr. Mowat, both by letter and telegram informed the parties who had the protest in charge that they must have the papers served by the 25th, whereas the 18th was actually the last day of service. Thus it will be seen that the protest, had it been entered would have been the protest of the Mowat Government and not of the party here. It is evident that the Government, in directing the entering of a protest must have gauged the course of the Conservatives of East Hastings by that of their own followers throughout the country, as they could not have known anything of the manner in which the contest in that riding was conducted.

We are not surprised that a protest was not entered, but it would have been wiser in the first place had the Grit party here acted on their own judgement, and not as directed from Toronto, to be driven like sheep to consent to enter a protest which they were wise in withholding.

Editorial Brevities.

The London Advertiser, under Mr. Mills' management, is even more economical of the truth than it was under the directorship of Mr. Cameron. It said in its issue of Saturday:

Mr. Hart, of Prince Edward, has definitely announced his determination to support Mr. Mowat.

Mr. Hart has done nothing of the kind. The Globe, which gave currency to the statement that the Advertiser has elaborated, gave some persons, whom it did not name, as Mr. Mowat's authority for his belief that Mr. Hart is a supporter of his.

Says the Toronto World:—"Was that our Blake who voted with the French Canadians on the Orange Bill division?' enquired a grave looking man yesterday morning at the office of the World. 'Certainly, there is but one gentleman of that name in the House. He has made a bid for Quebec support.' 'It must be so,' replied the bearded stranger, 'and corresponds with his speech, which affirmed that the French Canadians had not a fair share of the offices. I was in some doubt, but am satisfied now. Thanks.'"

Beware of Imitations.

Since Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has become celebrated, a number of unprincipled persons have been endeavoring to palm off Electron and Electric Oil for the genuine DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. Beware of those similar named articles. If their originators had any faith in the healing properties of their own medicines they would, like honest men, put them on the name of their own, and not try to sell them on the reputation of another; but as they know their preparations have no merit, they resort to the most unprincipled means of selling them by getting a name as near as possible to Eclectric. We therefore ask the public when purchasing to see that the name Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is on the front of the wrapper, and the signature of NORTHROP & LYMAN, the proprietors for Canada on the back.

Dominion Parliament.

OTTAWA, April 23rd.—By arrangement across the floor, the report of the Committee on the Kings, P.E.I., election case was to have occupied the attention of the House to-day, but owing to the absence of Sir John Macdonald, who forgot that his son was to have been married this morning when he consented to the arrangement, the matter was postponed. The consequence was that instead of a whole day being taken up with the discussion of the question, a number of private bills were advanced a stage and the order paper cleared of a number of notices of motions.

The House adjourned at 10:10 p.m.

Trenton Correspondence.

TRENTON, April 23, 18 3.

Messrs. Gilmour & Co's, large saw mill started up on Friday last.

On Saturday afternoon sawing was successfully commenced. This firm are rebuilding the long row of tenement buildings that were destroyed by fire on Mill street, and are also building three very nice small tenement buildings near the central school. They also purpose charging their employees reasonable rents, for their buildings.

J. W. Rogers, teacher here, will soon commence a new dwelling.

Mr. James Richardson is about to rebuild his dwelling. "Balloon frame" buildings are put up in a day, and during the next three or four days they are enclosed and become tenantable. The demand for dwellings is so great that drive houses and stables are being converted into dwellings. The east side of river is apparently taking the lead just now in consequence of having dwellings as near the mill as possible.

Capt. Porte has the Varuna and Utica both fitted up. These boats will ply during the coming season on the same routes as last year.

Geo. H. Gordon's new three story brick block is nearly completed, and is a credit to the town, as well as the builder. Messrs. G. H. Gordon and S. S. Bonter have been residents of Trenton for nearly 40 years, and for a large portion of that time have been success fully engaged in mercantile pursuits. There are few, if any, persons here now who were in business here 40 years since. A reference to this subject in future might not be uninteresting to some of our citizens.

British Columbia News.

DROWNING OF TWO PRESBYTERIAN MISSIONARIES —INDIAN ATTACK ON CHINESE MINERS.

VICTORIA, B. C., April 23.—News has been received from the Northwest coast of the drowning of Messrs. Chapman and Penny, two missionaries attached to the Presbyterian Mission, by the upsetting of their boat while out sailing. The bodies have not yet been recovered.

A despatch just received from the mainland says the Chilcoten Indians have risen against the Chinese miners and killed two, drove the rest into their lodge-house, which they surrounded, and when a messenger left for the nearest telegraph station the Indians were assaulting it and more are probably massacred.

A large number of immigrants are in town awaiting the opening of railway lands.

Alleged Infanticide.

KINGSTON, April 23.—Details of a most shocking case of alleged infanticide came to light this morning. It appears that about five weeks ago a young woman named Susan Philips came here from Corbyville, near Belleville, and hired as a domestic. On Saturday morning she remained in bed, stating she was sick, and at noon Dr. Fenwick was sent for. The suspicions of the proprietor of the house were confirmed, and on looking into the water closet the body of a full grown infant was observed. It was recovered and handed over to the doctor, in whose possession it now is. The girl, who is 19 years of age owns that the child is hers, but claims that its destruction was accidental. She is now in a critical condition. She states that a young man promised to marry her, but she refused to tell his name, and also that of her sister.

She is a young girl of good address, and no doubt belongs to a respectable family. As soon as she recovers she will be taken before a magistrate and made to account for the death of the child. No inquest will be held.

Can you find a case of Bright's Disease of the Kidneys, Diabetes, Urinary or Liver Complaints that is curable, that Hop Bitters has not or cannot cure? Ask your neighbors if they can.

SEEKING BETTER TERMS.—The Premier and Treasurer of Quebec, accompanied by several members of the Legislature, are in Ottawa endeavoring to obtain better terms for the Province of Quebec. They will ask that the basis of their subsidy be changed, and instead of 80 cents per head being paid as at present on the population of 1861, that it be calculated for each decade, according to the new census. This would give an increase to Quebec, according to the last census, of over $250,000.

A New Principle.

The principle upon which PUTNAM'S PAINLESS CORN EXTRACTOR acts is entirely new. It does not sink deep into the flesh, thereby producing soreness, but acts directly upon the external covering of the corn, separates it from the under layer, removes the direct pressure from the part, and at once effects a radical cure, without any pain or discomfort. Let those who are suffering from corns, yet skeptical of treatment, try it, and by the completeness of the cure, they will be ready to recommend Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor to others. N. C. In some schools the proportion of the short sighted was as high as 70 and 80 per cent. In the Heidelberg gymnasium it was 100 per cent., every lad in the school had bad eyesight. According to Professor Pfluger, this state of things arises from insufficiently lighted school rooms, bad print and bad paper, the method of writing in vogue, and ill contrived desks.

Nerviline, What is it?

POLSON'S NERVILINE is a combination of the most potent pain relieving substances known to medical science. The constant progress made in this department of science points upward and onward. Nerviline is the latest development in this movement, and embodies the latest discoveries. For neuralgia, cramps, pains in the head—external, internal, and local —Nerviline has no equal. Expend 10 cents in the purchase of a sample bottle of Nerviline and be convinced of its marvellous power over pain. Sold at Jas. Clarke & Co. Large bottles 25 cents, at all druggists.

IN THE history of medicine no preparation has received such universal commendation for the alleviation it affords, and the permanent cure it effects in kidney diseases, as DR. VAN BUREN'S KIDNEY-CURE. Its action in these distressing complaints is simply wonderful. Sold by all Druggists.

VERMILYEA'S SELF-FITTING CORSET.

TO THE LADIES OF BELLEVILLE AND VICINITY:

IN order to correct an erroneous impression abroad relative to the suit pending between ourselves and J. S. and Elizabeth Guthrie, of St. Catharines, relative to a corset patent, we wish to say that the suit by or against the Guthries does not in any way affect "Vermilyea's self-fitting Corset." The question in dispute was whether we had the EXCLUSIVE right to manufacture in this section "Guthrie's Champion Corset" and its improvements. We contended we had the exclusive right. The defendants claimed we had only a right equal with themselves to sell in this section. The Court held that we had not the exclusive right, and we at once took the necessary proceedings for appeal to the full court.

We still have the right, and it is not disputed, to manufacture "Guthrie's Champion Corset" and the improvements thereon in this section. "Vermilyea's Self-Fitting Corset" is not in question, for it is a patent of our own invention, and needs no recommendation as it is so well known to our lady customers all over Ontario. We are now sending our Corsets into New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, and they are also being manufactured in Winnipeg.

We have on hand a full stock of Ladies' Underclothing, all our own manufacture.

Thanking the ladies for patronage in the past we still hops for a continuance of the same.

REV. MR. MCLEAN and Judge Lazier were invited to attend the installation of Mr. Sanford Fleming, as Chancellor of Queen's University, Kingston, to-day and the invitation was accepted by them.

SOME of the weather wise assert that the weather will not moderate to any extent until after another snow storm has taken place. To justify their announcement, an instalment of the feathery flakes fell at noon.

AMONG the passmen at the recent examination in Queen's University, Kingston, the name of Mr. W. J. Shanks figures in junior Greek and junior Latin, and A. Givan, Campbellford; H. B. Rathbun, Deseronto and H. E. Young, Napanee, are in the B. A. list.

THERE was another pitch-in on the G. T. R. last night near Scarboro, in which two freight trains figured. No. 3—the midnight express, came east in two sections, the second of which was over two hours behind time. The noon train to-day was over a half hour late.

WE are informed that the ties on the North Hastings division of the Grand Junction, near Madoc, are so rotten that the passengers are afraid to ride over that portion of the road. It is also said that the decayed ends were plugged with good hardwood in order to lead people to think that the ties are sound.

SEVERAL young boys yesterday broke windows in the residences of Messrs. Job Lingham and U. E. Thompson and also smashed some of the lights in the old Masonic Hall. Mr. Lingham has obtained the names of some of the young miscreants and it is probable they will be so treated that a stop will be put to their wanton acts.

IT may disabuse the minds of many who are under the impression that navigation has opened unusually late this year to give the dates of the first arrival here in the years named: 1871, April 28th; 1872, April 24; 1875, May 3; 1876, April 25; 1879, April 26. Thus, the opening is at the average time, taking the last ten years as the criterion.

IN the Police Court to-day, Charles Pringle for being drunk and making too liberal a use of expressive English, contributed $3 to the city's funds. Joseph Maiden jr., for appropriating some towels belong to Mr. J. Post, was remanded until to-morrow, and the case of Spry against Gordanier for refusing to pay rent, was further remanded for a week.

THE Kingston Whig thus refers to a former resident of this city:—"W. J. Shanks has left for Winnipeg, where he has an opportunity of entering journalism in commercial life for the summer. He is talented, a good speaker, vocalist, writer and mathematician and may be expected to make his mark in the new Chicago. He returns in the Fall to finish his Collegiate course."

REV. E. D. MACLAREN, B.D., pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Brampton, will preach next Sabbath, morning and evening, in John Street Presbyterian Church. Mr. Maclaren is well known to many in this city as an effective preacher, he having ably supplied the pulpit of Rev. Mr. Burton during his absence. He has also proved a most successful pastor in Brampton, where, chiefly owing to his efforts, a handsome stone church has been built.

YESTERDAY was a day of accidents in Gilmour & Co's. mill, Trenton. One man fooled with a saw while it was in motion and dropped two fingers; another was loading a fractious horse which was hooked to a cart and which, when rearing, brought one of its feet down on the driver's hand as he grasped one of the shafts. He also lost a finger. Another man was working at the edger when a piece of a board flew off and struck him on the face, severely cutting one of his cheeks.

MOST of the Canadian scenery that finds its way into other countries, represents Canada in its winter garb, until many foreigners consider Canada as a country of almost perpetual snow and heavy overcoats. The publishers of "Picturesque Canada" have done a good work in representing Canada in its summer garb. The numbers that the agents are now delivering represent views of Toronto and vicinity, and fully sustain the reputation that the publishers gained in the first number published.

IT appears that one of the Brantford papers has been libelling the prince of song, James Gay, as his feelings have been so wounded that he contemplates an action at law. This cause will not be tried, however, in the same court that disposed of his suits here, neither will the same counsel appear. The poet speaks through the Guelph Herald in the following strain: The poet Gay does say that he intends entering a libel suit right away, in which we must $500 pay for the Courier's little say. A settlement is requested by the Queen's Birthday, or to gaol the libeller will be sent right away.

THE City Hall was crowded last night on the occasion of the first concert given under the auspices of the Sons of England Benevolent Society. The several contributors to the programme, namely Misses Hunter, Nunn, Greatrix, Bell, Tickell, Mesdames Campbell, Filliter, Corby, and Messrs. Wensley, Greaves, Milburn, Balkwell, Richardson, Riggs, Fetherston and Oldham acquitted themselves in a very able manner and encores were the order of the evening. The concert was a thorough success, and the Society are to be congratulated on the financial returns that have been accorded their first attempt in that line, which it is to be hoped will not be their last.

WE learn that the paragraph copied from the Stirling News Argus in reference to the business affairs of Mr. T. P. Pearce, of Marmora, is in part incorrect. Mr. Pearce has sold his residence to Mr. Riordon McWilliams, who intends converting it into a hotel, and has leased his mills to Mr. Carscallen. The grist mill will be operated by Mr. Walter Oraske, late of Stirling, Mr. Pearce intends to establish new industries in Marmora village, provided the Central Ontario Railway Company will extend a branch of their line to the village. He is also negotiating for the purchase of an interest in the axe factory here, with the object of largely extending the capacity of that flourishing concern, but will not remove from Marmora until the fall.

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE.—The numbers of The Living Age for April 14th and 21st contain A Few Words About the Eighteenth Century, Nineteenth Century; Miss Burney's Own Story, and The Enchanted Lake, Contemporary; Johnathan Swift, Blackwood; Scenes During the Winter of 1794-5, Temple Bar; Queen Victoria as Goddess, Starling Poetry, the Conditions of "The Grand Style," Sir George Jessel, and Socialism and Anarchism at Geneva, Spectator; and in the line of fiction "Under the Snow," "The Three Strangers," and "The Wizard's Son," with the usual quantity of poetry. The number for April 7th begins a new volume. A new volume began with the first number of January. For fifty-two numbers of sixty-four large pages each (or more than 3,300 pages a year) the subscription price ($8) is low; while for $10.50 the publishers offer to send any one of the American $4.00 monthlies or weeklies with The Living Age for a year, both postpaid. Littell & Co., Boston, are the publishers.

WEATHER PROBABILITIES—Toronto, April 24.—Lakes, moderate to fresh north to west winds, cool weather, slightly higher temperature.

DROWNED.—On Saturday the 21st inst., Joshua Marricle, a native of the Indian Woods in this County, was drowned at the head of Deer Lake. The deceased was in the employment of Rathbun & Co., driving sawlogs. He was last seen sitting on a log in the river, with his pike-pole beside him. A number of men were in the vicinity, but none saw him fall off the log. He was perfectly sober. But for his pike-pole being still lying on the log, his comrades would not have found him. His remains passed through Tweed on Sunday evening, for interment at the Indian Woods.

FRANK LESLIE'S POPULAR MONTHLY.—The May number is filled with matter of the most interesting and attractive character; the illustrations are profuse, and the colored frontispiece, "The Little Muchief Makers" from Blume's painting, is really worth more than the price of the magazine. Among the profusely illustrated articles are "The Shadows which Threaten France," by Richard B. Kimball; "Fools and Jesters," and "The British Museum," by N. Robinson; "Shall the Buffalo Go?" Reminiscences of an old Buffalo Hunter. "Freiburg"; "Transit of Venus," etc., etc. The thrilling romance, "The Beautiful Countess of Clairville," is continued, and there are short stories, sketches, etc., by W. J. Morgan, Dard Best, Walter E. McCann, Henry C. Ewart, etc. Most of the poems are tastefully illustrated, and are from the pens of Julia Goddard, John F. Waller, and other favorite writers. There is an abundance of brief articles, paragraphs, etc., entertaining and replete with information. A single copy is only 25 cents, or $3 a year postpaid. Address, MRS. FRANK LESLIE, Publisher, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

AMERICAN.

MURDERER HANGED.

FRANKLIN, Tex., April 24.—Wyatt Banks, colored, was hanged here yesterday, in the presence of 2,000 persons, for complicity in the murder of Jailor Wiser. Banks spoke for two hours on the scaffold. He met his death unflinchingly.

THE CLAYTON-BULWER TREATY.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—Lord Granville has written an elaborate reply to Frelinghuysen's note, in which the latter maintained that the Clayton-Bulwer treaty had been violated by Great Britain to such an extent as to justify the United States in denouncing it. The conclusions arrived at by the British Government are that the meaning and effect of article 8 of the treaty are not open to any doubt. The British Government has committed no act in relation to British Honduras or otherwise, which can invalidate the treaty and justify the Government of the United States in denouncing it, and no necessity exists for renewing any of the provisions of the treaty. There might, Lord Granville says, be advantages in defining by agreement the distance from each end of the canal, within which no hostiles should be committed by belligerents, in order to maintaining the freedom of passage through the Panama Canal, should it be completed, and when the tims approaches for its completion Her Majesty's Government will no doubt be prepared to give its careful attention to the question of concluding the arrangement with that object should such a proposal be made, but in the present stage of the enterprise they conceive it would be premature to enter upon negotiations for that purpose I have not, says Granville, thought is necessary to allude to the "traditional Continental policy" of the United States, as laid down in the "Monroe doctrine" sense. Mr. Frelinghuysen, in his note of 8th May last, in which he explained the views of his Government on that subject, admitted that Her Majesty's Government was not called upon either to admit or deny the views therein expressed. Lord Granville intimates that the British Minister will inform Frelinghuysen that Her Majesty's Government are actuated by the most sincere desire to arrive at an amicable settlement of the questions which have given rise to this correspondence, and that they note with great satisfaction the friendly assurance with which he concludes his despatch, that the diversity of opinion which now exists will not in anywise impair the good understanding happily existing between the people and Governments of the United States and Great Britain.

KILLED BY AN EXPLOSION.

AMSTERDAM, April 24.—Charles Walters, colored, died here in great agony from the effects of the explosion of a dynamite cartridge in his hand. The common belief is that he was the murderer of Wm. Percival, who was killed and his body placed on the railroad. In 1879 Walters was tried but escaped through legal technicalities.

The Bad and Worthless

are never imitated or counterfeited. This is especially true of a family medicine, and it is positive proof that the remedy imitated is of the highest value. As soon as it had been tested and proved by the whole world that Hop Bitters was the purest, best and most valuable family me icine on earth, many imitations sprung up and began to steal the notices in which the press and people of the country had expressed the merits of H. B., and in every way try to induce suffering Invalids to use their stuff instead, expecting to make money on the credit and good name of H. B. Many others started nostrums put up in similar style to H. B., with variously devised names in which the word "Hop" or "Hops" were used in a way to indnce people to believe they were the same as Hop Bitters. All such pretended remedies or cures, no matter what their style or name is, and especially those with the word "Hop" or "Hops" in their name or in any way connected with them or their name, are imitations or counterfeits. Beware of them. Touch none of them. Use nothing but genuine Hop Bitters, with a bunch or cluster of green Hops on the white label. Trust nothing else. Druggists and dealers are warned against dealing in imitations or counterfeits.

Daily Intelligencer.

One of Earth's Angels.

'I don't doubt it, my dear,' murmured Mr. Stanford, still unruffled by his wife's storm of passion. 'Your gentle sex are famous for the mercy they always show to their fairer sisters. Your penetration does you infinite credit, Mrs. Stanford. I was with Madame Millefleur.'

Rose stood glaring at him, white and panting with rage too intense for words. Reginald Stanford stood up, meeting her fierce regards with wonderful coolness.

'You're not going to tear my hair out, are you, Rose? You see the way of it was this: Coming from the office where I have been known to be clerk—thanks to my marriage—I met Madame Millefleur, that most bewitching and wealthy of French widows. She is in love with me, my dear. It may seem unaccountable to you how any one can be in love with me, but the fact is so. She is in love with me almost as much as Pretty Rose Danton was once upon a time, and gave me an invitation to accompany her to the opera last night. Of course I was enchanted. The opera is a rare luxury now, and la Millefleur is all the fashion. I had the happiness of bending over her chair all the evening—don't glare so, my love, it makes you quite hideous—and accepted a seat beside her in the carriage when it was all over. A delicious petit souper awaited us in Madame's bijou of a boudoir; and I don't mind owning I was a little elevated by sparkling Moselle when I came home. Open confessions are good for the soul—there is one for you, my dear.'

Her face was livid as she listened, and he smiled up at her with a smile that nearly drove her mad.

'I hate you, Reginald Stanford!' was all she could say. 'I hate you! I hate you!'

'Quite likely, my love; but I dare say I shall survive that. You would rather I didn't come here any more, I suppose, Mrs. Stanford?'

'I never want to see your hateful, wicked face again. I wish I had been dead before I ever saw it.'

'And I wish whatever you wish, dearest and best,' he said, with a sneering laugh; 'if you ever see my wicked, hateful face again, it shall be no fault of mine. Perhaps you had better go back to Canada. M. Le Touche was very much in love with you last year, and may overlook this little episode in your life, and take you to his bosom yet. Good-morning, Mrs. Stanford. I am going to call on Madame Millefleur.'

He took his hat and left the room, and Rose dropped down in her chair, and covered her face with her hands.

If Kate Danton and Jules Le Touche ever wished for revenge, they should have seen the woman who so cruelly wronged them at that moment. Vengeance more bitter, more terrible than her worst enemy could wish, had overtaken and crushed her to the earth.

How that long, miserable day passed, the poor child never knew. It came to an end, and the longer, more miserable night followed. Another morning, another day of unutterable wretchedness, and a second night of tears and sleeplessness. The third day came and passed, and still Reginald Stanford never returned. The evening of the third day brought her a letter, with Solomon's head on the outside.

"HOTEL DU LOUVRE, PARIS, April 10.

"MY DEAR MRS. STANFORD:—For you have still the unhappiness of bearing that odious name, although I have no doubt Cabbage Danton will shortly take the proper steps to relieve you of it. According to promise, I have rid you of my hateful presence, and forever. You see I am in brilliant Paris, in a palatial hotel, enjoying all the luxuries wealth can procure, and Madame Millefleur is my companion. The contrast between my life this week and my life last is somewhat striking. The frowning countenance of Mrs. Grundy is replaced by the ever-smiling face of my dark-eyed Adele, and the shabby lodgings in Crown street, Strand, are exchanged for this chamber of Eastern gorgeousness. I am happy, and so, no doubt are you. Go back to Canada, my dear Mrs. Stanford. Paps will receive his little runaway with open arms, and kill the fatted calf to welcome her. The dear Jules may still be faithful, and you may yet be thrice blessed as Madame La Touche. Ah, I forgot—you belong to the Church, and so does he, that does not believe in divorce. What a pity!

'I beg you will feel no uneasiness upon pecuniary matters, my dear Rose. I write by this post to our good landlady, inclosing the rent six months' rent, and in this you will find a cheque for all present wants.

'I believe this is all I have to say, and Adele is waiting for me to escort her on a shopping expedition. Adieu, my Rose; believe me, with the best wishes for your future happiness, to be 'Ever your friend,

'REGINALD REINCOURT STANFORD.'

CHAPTER XXIV.

One afternoon, about a fortnight after the receipt of that letter from France, Rose Stanford sat alone once more in the shabby parlor of the London lodging house. It was late in April, but a fire burned feebly in the grate, and she sat cowering over it wrapped in a large shawl. She had changed horribly during these two weeks; she had grown old, and hollow eyed, haggard, worn, wretched woman.

It was her third day up, this April afternoon, for a low, miserable fever had confined her to her bed, and worn her to the pallid shadow she was now. She had just finished writing a letter, a long, sad letter, and it lay in her lap while she sat shivering over the fire. It was a letter to her father, a tardy prayer for forgiveness and a confession of all her misdoings and wrong—of Reginald Stanford's father, for, of course, all the blame was thrown on him, though if Rose had told the truth, she would have found herself the more in fault of the two.

'I am sick, my father, and broken-hearted,' wrote Mrs. Stanford; 'and I want to go home and die. I have been very wicked, papa, but I have suffered so much, that even those I have wronged most might forgive me. Write to me at once, and say I may go home; I only want to go and die in peace. I feel that I am dying now.'

She folded the letter with a weary sigh and a hand that shook like an old woman's, and rising, rang the bell. The brisk young woman answered the summons at once with a smile on her face, and Mrs. Stanford's baby crowing in her arms. They had been very kind to the poor young mother and the fatherless babe during this time of trial; but Mrs Stanford was so ill and broken down to think about it, or feel grateful.

'Here, Jane,' said Mrs. Stanford, holding out the letter, 'give me the baby, and post this letter.'

Jane obeyed; and Rose, with the infant in her lap, sat staring gloomily at the red coals.

'Two weeks before it will reach them, two weeks more before an answer can arrive, and another two weeks before I can be with them. Oh, dear me! dear me! how shall I drag out life during these interminable weeks. If I could only die at once and end it all.'

Tears of unutterable wretchedness and loneliness and misery coursed down her pale thin cheeks. Surely no one ever paid more dearly for love's shortness than this unfortunate little Rose.

'Marry in haste and repent at leisure,' she thought, with unspeakable bitterness. 'Oh, how happy I might have been to-day if I had only done right last year. But I was mad and treacherous and false, and I dare say it serves me right. How can I ever look them in the face when I go home!'

The weary weeks dragged on, how wretchedly and miserably only Rose knew. She never went out; she sat up all day long in that shabby parlor, and stared blankly at the passersby in the street, waiting, waiting.

RACKED BY INCURRIGABLE PANGS, restless by day, sleepless at night, rising unrefreshed in the morning, without appetite and pestered by varying and perplexing symptoms, the dyspeptic takes indeed a gloomy view of human existence. For him the zest of life seems gone. Heartburn, oppression at the pit of the stomach, flatulence, constant annoyances of of constipation and biliousness, combine to render him utterly wretched. But there is, if he will only take advantage of it, a reliable source of reliable relief from all misery. NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY and DYSPEPTIC CURE is, as its name imports, a botanic preparation, free from mineral poison, and an all-sufficient remedy for indigestion in its most obstinate form. It not only cures disease by blood by enabling the digestive organs to convert the food received into nutriment, but depurates it by increasing the action of the bowels and kidneys, the natural outlets for its impurities. But while it relaxes the bowels, it never does so violently and with pain, like a drastic cathartic. It aids, but never forces, Nature, invigorating as well as purifying and regulating the system. It thoroughly removes those diseased humors which tend to vitiate the blood, purifies the urinary secretion, and promotes a flow of healthy bile into the natural channel, thereby expelling it from the circulation. Experience has proved that this standard medicine is a thorough remedy for dyspepsia, biliousness, costiveness, kidney complaints, scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, lumbago and all impurities of the blood. Price $1.00. Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac-simile of their signature. Sold by all medicine dealers

Joe Mulhattan, D. L.

SOMETHING OF THE DISCOVERER OF THE RECENT GREAT TEX'S METEOR WHICH SURPRISED THE TEXANS, THE MEXICANS AND THE PRESS—THE SCIENTIFIC YARNS HE HAS SPUN.

(From the Louisville Courier Journal.)

The newspaper press has recently contained the record of an immense meteor, which, falling upon the lone prairie, some 30 miles from any ranch, crushed it to atoms, killing and burying the entire family. The meteor is represented as having itself been hundreds of feet in the earth, towering seventy feet above its surface and covering an acre of ground, which is doing very well as meteors go. It is not to the credit of discerning telegraph and managing editors that this piece of fiction should have been permitted to attain the preeminence of double-leaded matter with the accompanying adjunct of displayed headlines.

The author of the story is Joseph Mulhattan, a young Scotch Irishman, formerly of Louisville, now of Galveston, Texas. As a romancer, he cultivates a field entirely his own, and as an archaic discoverer he has few if any rivals in the field of scientific imagination. For several years he has periodically surprised the country with his descriptions of encounters which never took place, of races which do not exist, and the unmuzzled readings of people who never lived. His first published romance was that of the terrific encounter of a drummer, of which genus he must be, with the fierce robbers on Big Clifty bridge, on the C. and O. and S. W. railroad. The valiant traveller promptly knew one of the robbers, and, with superhuman efforts, threw the other to the bottom of the abyss, which yawned 200 feet. Singularly enough, the robber arose slowly to his feet and painfully limped away. A Cincinnati sheet published this stuff, an enterprising reporter for a then existing Louisville evening paper rehashed it and it was reproduced to the dismay of the managing editor, who was temporarily absent, and who has not yet heard the last of it.

Then a strange new cave was discovered in Barren county containing numerous mummified specimens of a former race differing from any ever known to have inhabited this or any other country. These were described with minuteness of detail calculated to deceive and which did deceive thousands. The next widespread publicity was given to the discovery, and for months inquiries poured in from learned scientific bodies, both American and foreign, and the staid old farmers in the vicinity of the alleged cave were daily surprised by the arrival of wondering tourists, anxious to gaze upon the mummies, over-whom, as far surpassed the Mammoth Cave as does that great marvel the ground squirrel's burrow.

This was followed in rapid succession by startling incidents of travel, daring midnight burglaries and an occasional wandering again into the fruitful fields of cavedology. If the term is permissible, and the press continued to publish the marvellous stories in good faith.

Interviewed by one of his earliest journalistic victims, Mulhattan said: "I am not a mere vulgar liar. I have a romancing, diversifying only in the matter of form and substance from the novelists whom the world reads and admires. They work in the field of love and chivalry. My mind turns toward science, and if my imagination sees what is hidden from you, why call me a falsifier if I give you things that you cannot see? Columbus? You publish romantic episodes born of imagination every day—why not me? I have never written a word of injurious falsehood nor will I. It is too bad that the world should rudely call me a liar when I am but an unpretending romancist of a school probably all my own."

While saying this, the bright eyes of the really clever genius saddened as if he really did not know that his harpooning of lake trout on his helpless auditor, while he proved the truth of the assertion he made.

A few months since Mulhattan published a handbill announcing his departure for Texas, made the rounds of the newspaper offices, timidly laid a pleasant little gift on the desk of more than one favorite, promised to respect the high character of the paper for truth and uprightness by sending it nothing but truthful narrative in the future, and with a tremor in the happy voice said "good-bye" to each one, and was gone. That was several months ago, and now that the giant meteor fell was Joe Mulhattan more than a pleasant memory to the newspaper offices. No sooner had this latter romance appeared than each one in his old home, recognizing the evidences of his peculiar genius, gave full credit to the remarkable young author. Joe Mulhattan is not a bad fellow—he is just the reverse. He is an active, energetic, upright, business man, and valuable to the house which commands his services. He is gentle in manner, generous to a fault, and romance he never so largely in his chosen field, his word seriously given may be implicitly relied upon. Though the press is uniformly his victim, he has an honest liking for newspaper men, and is often about them. The world has thousands of men who would tell a dozen falsehoods to earn a penny, while Joe Mulhattan would scorn the thought of gaining thousands by other than honest means.

The Clock of Strasburg.

The late Transit of Venus curiously proved the accurate calculations of the ancient makers of that famous piece of mechanism, the Strasburg clock. A few days before the Transit, the American Register tells us, visitors to the cathedral, inspecting the time-piece attached to the clock, noticed that one of the small gilt balls representing Venus was gradually moving toward a point between the sun and the earth, and on the day when the passage the ball stood exactly between them. Old Conrad Dasypodius, the Strasburg mathematician, apprehended the manufacture of the clock and its accompanying planetarium some time between 1571-73, the dates differing according to various authorities, and it is interesting to note that, after three hundred years of existence, the clock faithfully fulfils the calculations of its dead inventor.

A correspondent sends the foregoing, which is quoted from the London Graphic, expressing doubts of its correctness, and asks for information. One of our astronomical correspondents sends us the following notes:

The construction of a machine which would exhibit accurately the motions, distances, and magnitudes of the planets, and could be kept in running order for 300 years, is an impossibility. Such a piece of mechanism would require the skill of the Great Architect of worlds.

This history of the Strasburg clock and the planetarium connected with it bears witness, like everything else, to the imperfection of workmanship, and the frequent necessity of changes and repairs.

The clock stands in the cathedral, and dates back to 1352, when it was put up under the patronage of Berthold de Buchek, at that time bishop of Strasburg. As time passed on the clock got out of order, and in 1547 three distinguished mathematicians were commissioned to put it in repair. They all died before the work was finished, and Conrad Dasypodius undertook the responsible task, which he completed in four years. The clock worked well until 1783, the year of the Great Revolution, when it struck for the last time.

It was left undisturbed for nearly 50 years, and fell into a dilapidated condition, mournful to behold. An effort was then made for its restoration. This was found to be impossible, for the works were so much eaten away by rust and verdigris. Finally, Schwilgue, an artist and mathematician of Strasburg, undertook to repair, modify and reinstate the clock. He commenced the task in 1838, and after working four years, completed it in 1840. A mythical story is told of him, which does not redound to the honor of his fellow citizens. It is said that he had engaged to construct a similar clock for the capital of one of the Swiss cantons, and that his ungrateful townsmen put his eyes out to prevent the fulfillment of his contract.

Schwilgue placed the mechanism of the old clock in the old casing, after skillful improvements and alterations, whereby it continues to be a source of proud satisfaction to the inhabitants of Strasburg, and an unfailing fount of attraction for strangers from all quarters of the globe. Besides the remarkable performances connected with the regular clockwork, it shows the celestial time, the movement of the planetary system, and the procession of the equinoxes. It is claimed that the mechanism is perfectly elaborated that it marks the 29th of February in every leap year.

It is not impossible that the planitarium may have marked the transit of Venus on Dec. 6 last, if by the inclination of the orbits of Venus and the earth to the ecliptic in accurately represented, Venus must sometimes be at a point directly between the earth and the sun, and consequently make a transit over his disk. The possibility of such an occurrence probably never entered the mind of the ancient Conrad Dasypodius, much less had he power to make the elaborate planetary arrangements to bring about a result, after a lapse of 300 years, depending on the contingencies then unknown. It was not until the seventeenth century that Kelper so far improved the planetary tables as to predict that transit of Venus would occur on Dec. 6, 1631.

We have no means of knowing what improvements Schwilgue made in the ancient piece of mechanism, but it is safe to say that absolute perfection was not attained. If Venus did actually wheel into line between the earth and sun on the 6th of December, 6 last, we are inclined to think it must have been a simple coincidence rather than a result of profound mathematical calculation. If such were not the case, why did we hear nothing of the transit of Venus in 1874, nor of the six transits of Mercury that have taken place since the planetarium was put in order in 1840?

BELLEVILLE, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 25.

The Popular Vote.

The subject of the popular vote is a sore one with the Globe. The leading organ of the Ontario Government does not like the fact to go forth to the public that, despite the frantic appeals to the people of the Government organs, on the subjects of the Boundary Award and the Rivers and Streams Bills; the exertion, to their utmost extent, of the powers of coercion which Mr. Mowat had secured from the people; and in spite of a vast amount of money corruptly spent to secure their triumph, the Government, whilst securing a majority of the members elected to the Legislature, did not obtain a majority of the popular vote. Hence the Globe has exercised, at various times, a great deal of ingenious trickery in endeavoring to make it appear that a small majority of the popular vote was recorded in favor of the Mowat administration. So apparently untruthful, however, have been the Globe's computations, that it has been compelled to admit, inferentially at least, that they are not well founded, by declaring its readiness to discuss the question with any journal which will proceed on a reasonable basis and apply the same principle of computation to both parties. This challenge we accept, and although the task involves a great deal of labor, and a considerable amount of space will necessarily be occupied in stating results, the importance of the subject warrants the expenditure of labor and space in bringing the question at issue to a determination.

The principles which we will apply to this competition shall be these:

1. In the cases of constituencies wherein two or more candidates of the same party opposed each other, take the majority in the general election for the Legislature in 1879; but if in the contest of 1879 there was not a party contest or more than two candidates, take the figures of 1875, and if the same objections apply to the returns for that year, go still further back. Dufferin must, however be an exception to this rule, as there has never been a straight party contest in that constituency.

2. Where two or more candidates of one party were opposed by one or more candidates of the opposite party, add the votes cast for each party in order to determine the majority. South Lanark would be an exception to this rule, as the successful Conservative was supported by the Reformers. We have seen a circular issued by the members of the Committee whom the Reform Association appointed to select a candidate for the constituency, in which they declared that they had deemed it unadvisable to make a nomination, and urged Reformers to vote for Lees, as Cameron (Reform) had taken the field against the wishes of the representative men of his party. Thus, the Conservatives are not entitled to count the apparently enormous Conservative majority in South Lanark.

3. In cases of elections by acclamation, take the majorities for 1879, or if the figures for that year are not suitable for comparison, for reasons given above, go further back, as above provided.

With these general rules for governance then, we proceed to sum up the returns, which the Globe itself has furnished as officially:

Ministerial majority.....2,710

It will be observed that we have taken the majority in North Waterloo from the return for 1879 and for these very good reasons: The Conservative who was nominated in opposition to Mr. Snider withdrew on the day of nomination, and his place was voluntarily assumed by Mr. Moyer, who had not consulted with the party, and who took no steps to promote his election, neither speaking at public meetings, asking a man to vote for him, or soliciting the turning out of vehicles for the conveyance of voters on election day. The Government majority was, under such circumstances, 730. We consequently, in accordance with the principle above laid down, go back to 1879, when, in a straight party contest, the Reform majority was 187.

CONSTITUENCIES WHERE TWO OR MORE CANDIDATES OF THE SAME PARTY STOOD.

	M.	O.
Brockville (1878)	113
Bruce, N. (1879)	402
Grey, b. (1875)		674
Leeds & Grenville (1879)		347
Dufferin		1,000
	515	2,021
		515
Opposition majority		1,506

There has never, as above stated, been a party contest in Dufferin, so we adopt the estimate of the Conservative majority that was made in the Legislature when the constituency was created, which estimate was generally accepted by both parties.

CONSTITUENCIES WHERE MORE THAN TWO CANDIDATES STOOD.

	M.	O.
Carleton	1,711
Hamilton (1879)	62
Kingston (1879)	199
Lanark S. (1875)	169
Ottawa (Commons, 1878)	504
Russell (1875)	394
Toronto East, (1879)	57
	62	3,034
	62
Opposition majority		2,972

We have classed Mr. Lees as a Conservative, which he undoubtedly is. In Ottawa there has not been a party contest since 1871, but as the returns of that election are not at hand, we take the average majority polled by the Conservatives in the Dominion election of 1878, when the contest was a party one.

ELECTIONS BY ACCLAMATION.

	M.	O.
Brant N. (1879)	340
Bruce S. (1879)	69
London (1879)		447
Oxford N. (1879)	1,157
	1,566	447
	447
Ministerial majority	1,119

INDEPENDENTS.

Classing the Independents with the parties to which they will probably attach themselves, we have a majority of 30 for the Government, as follows:

	M.	O.
Lincoln	69
Prince Edward		39
	69
	39
Ministerial majority	30

The constituencies being thus all disposed of, except Algoma, in which the election is yet to be held, we now proceed to sum up the results of our searching and systematic analysis of the returns. The total majorities for each party were, then, as follows:

	M.	O.
Majority in straight party contests between two candidates	2,710
Majority where two or more candidates of the same party stood		1,506
Majority where more than two candidates stood		2,972
Majority in acclamation constituencies	1,119
Majority for Independents	30
	3,859	4,478
		3,859
Opposition majority		619

Thus, after proceeding on a just and clearly defined principle—after conceding to the Government the majorities of Messrs. Gillies and Neelon—after being more generous to the Grit party, (by giving them the big majority cast for them in South Bruce in 1879) than just to the Conservative party—we find that a majority of 619 of the popular vote was rendered against Mr. Mowat's Government in the late election. That majority is not large; but, like Mercutio's wound, 'tis enough. It seals the fate of the Mowat Government, which is thus shown to have lost the confidence of the people to whom they appealed.

Editorial Brevities.

The local Goldwin Smith, with that modesty which ever distinguishes great men, shrinks from assuming that title, which our correspondent "Standard," actuated by intense admiration, has worthily bestowed upon him, and seeks to cast the distinction upon those who have no claim to it. No, an admiring public cannot consent to this. The purity of their English, the polish and incisiveness of their style, the broad and statesmanlike view of public questions which is habitually taken by them, distinguish alike the learned Professor from Oxford and his Belleville pupil whose daily contributions to the Liberal journal published in this city have won the admiration of unnumbered thousands. We respectfully press upon this distinguished ornament to the profession of journalism the acceptance of the title which he has so honorably won, and will always wear most worthily.

Can you find a case of Bright's Disease of the Kidneys, Diabetes, Urinary or Liver Complaints that is curable, that Hop Bitters has not or cannot cure? Ask your neighbors if they can.

A common, and often fatal, disease is Jaundice. Regulate the action of the liver, and cleanse the blood with Burdock Blood Bitters, and the worst case may be speedily cured.

FIFTH PARLIAMENT—FIRST SESSION.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

OTTAWA, April 24.—Owing to the at home given this evening at Rideau hall by the Princess Louise, the House did not sit later than six o'clock this afternoon. The session was chiefly occupied by a discussion on Mr. Abbott's bill to authorize the Canada Pacific Railway Company to lease in perpetuity the lines of the Credit Valley, Ontario and Quebec, and part of the Atlantic and Northwestern railway.

Mr. Abbott explained that this was in order to get a through line from the south bank of the St. Lawrence near Montreal to the western terminus of the Credit Valley railway.

Mr. White (Cardwell) in moving the adoption of the report of the Printing Committee, called attention to the fact that of late years there was very small accommodation in the way of Committee rooms for members who wished to consult, apart from the regular party caucuses, about public bills.

News Condensed.

"The term hydra may be used to represent any manifold evil. If you would battle successfully with this many-headed monster of disease you will find it expedient to keep Mrs. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound always at hand.—Dr. Banning.

—It is reported that owing to delicate health the esteemed member for the western division of Montreal, Mr. M H. Gault, will shortly retire. It is pleasant, however, to announce that his brother, Mr. A. F. Gault, the man with the liberal hand for noble works of christian benevolence, will be nominated, and very likely unanimously elected, as his brother's successor.

"Do boldly what you do at all." Boldly do we affirm that Kidney-Wort is the great remedy for liver, bowels and Kidney diseases, rheumatism and piles vanish before it. The tonic effect of Kidney-Wort is produced by its cleansing and purifying action on the blood. Where there is a gravelly deposit in the urine, or milky, ropy urine from disordered kidneys, it always cures.

—Canada is once more distinguished by the talent of one of her children, Miss Jones, of Halifax, daughter of a former Dominion Minister, having had two of her paintings accepted by the Paris Salon, in a competition wherein five thousand out of eight thousand pictures were rejected. Poetry, music, painting have all yielded honors to young Canadians in the world's fashionable centre within late years.

Beware of Imitations.

Since Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has become celebrated, a number of unprincipled persons have been endeavoring to palm off Electron Oil, Electric Oil for the genuine DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. Beware of these similar named articles. If their originators had any faith in the healing properties of their own medicines they would, like honest men, give them name of their own, and not try to sell them on the reputation of another; but as they know their preparations have no merit, they resort to the most unprincipled means of selling them by getting a name as near as possible to Eclectric. We therefore ask the public when purchasing to see that the name Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is on the front of the wrapper, and the signature of NORTHROP & LYMAN, the proprietors for Canada on the back.

A New Principle.

The principle upon which PUTNAM'S PAINLESS CORN EXTRACTOR acts is entirely new. It does not sink deep into the flesh, thereby producing soreness, but acts directly upon the external covering of the corn, separates it from the under layer, removes the direct pressure from the part, and as once effects a radical cure, without any pain or discomfort. Let those who are suffering from corns, yet skeptical of treatment, try it, and by the painless process, they will be sure, ready to recommend Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor to others. N. C. POLSON & CO., Kingston, Proprietors.

J. S. Wetherell, writing from Winnipeg, says: "I can say more about PHOSPHATINE now than when I saw you last in Toronto. My health is much improved, and I am free from headaches or any other aches, having only used two and a half bottles of your Phosphatine. For sale by all Druggists.

Now that there is a reliable remedy for kidney troubles, half the terrors attached to these complaints have been removed. For this let all be thankful, and to DR. Nerviline, What is it?

POLSON'S NERVILINE is a combination of the most potent pain relieving substances known to medical science. The constant progress made in this department of science points upward and onward. Nerviline is the latest development in this movement, and embodies the latest discoveries. For neuralgia, cramps, pains in the head—external, internal, and local—Nerviline has no equal. Expend 10 cents in the purchase of a sample bottle of Nerviline and be convinced of its marvellous power over pain. Sold at Jas. Clarke & Co. Large bottles 25 cents, at all druggists.

IN the history of medicine no preparation has received such universal commendation for the alleviation it affords, and the permanent cure it effects in kidney diseases, as DR. VAN BUREN'S KIDNEY-CURE. Its action in these distressing complaints is simply wonderful. Sold by all Druggists.

THE PUGILISTIC MANIA.

An Outcrop of the Fashionable Folly in Trenton.

Muscle vs. "Brains"—A Knock-out Prevented.

We have been informed that an outbreak of the fashionable craze for pugilism, which has spread over the continent of late, took place in Trenton on the 24th. The parties who resorted to the use of nature's weapons were (so our informant states) a tall Young man who imagines that he possesses a powerful mind, and a much smaller but muscular disciple of Vulcan, whose name is suggestive of "deals" in Chicago. The scene was one of the streets of the town, and the affair was impromptu.

We have been unable to obtain a full account of the rounds that were fought, but it appears that the efforts of the combatants were at first directed towards the scalping of each other, hair pulling being the order of the day. In this it is probable that the tall and lanky quill-driver had the advantage; but his antagonist more than equalized matters by gaining a bull-dog grip on the flowing beard of the manufacturer of public opinion, who appealed to a bystander, whose name suggests hunting by night about corn time, to release him from his predicament. Some exceedingly entertaining exhibitions of pugilistic skill followed and the little man had fastened a powerful hold upon one leg of his highly educated and intellectual competitor for championship honors, when scranium seemed very likely to salute mother earth with tremendous force before another moment had elapsed, when a gentleman interfered and prevented the impending knockout.

Now that an example has been set to the youth of Trenton by one for whose teachings the people of that town have so much respect, there can be little doubt that the columns of the INTELLIGENCER will be enlivened by the narratives of many a "merry mill" in that lively and enterprising town.

No Trouble To Swallow

A private letter received here to-day states that the ice in the bay below the Stone Mills was still strong and that people crossed it on foot on Sunday last.

The Olivia was towed over to the elevator on the west side to load barley. The D. Freeman went to the same point this afternoon for a like cargo. Both expect to be able to clear for Oswego to-morrow.

The Hero will resume her trips between Kingston and this city as soon as the ice leaves the eastern part of the bay.

Messrs. Oldrieve & Horn, of Kingston, have the contract to make the canvas for the new yacht now being built by Capt. Cuthbert. The same firm are also making a mainsail and two gibs for Mr. Pike's yacht. The main sail will be 32 feet boom; 37 feet leach; 23 feet gaff and 22 feet holst. Other yachts will receive an outfit from this firm.

It is expected that the Nellie Cuthbert will be floated this evening.

O. Hortle, of Manchester, Ontario Co., N.Y., writes:—"I obtained immediate relief from the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. I have had Asthma for eleven years. Have been obliged to sit up all nights for ten or twelve nights in succession. I can now sleep soundly all night on a feather bed, which I had not been able to do previous to using the Oil."

NEW YORK, April 25.—Several special trains started for Philadelphia this morning with delegates to the Irish convention.

PHILADELPHIA, April 25.—The convention of the Irish National Land League of America was called to order this morning. There was a large attendance.

The decorations were tasteful. A large number of lady delegates were present. At noon President Mooney called the Convention to order. The Convention selected the following temporary officers: President, Jas. A. Mooney of Buffalo; Secretary, J. J. Hines of Buffalo; Asst. Secretaries, Wm. F. Sheehan of Buffalo, and J. D. O'Connell, Washington. Mooney, upon taking the chair, said they had hoped to welcome Parnell, but owing to the present aspect of affairs it was absolutely impossible for him to absent himself from Parliament. In unfriendly quarters, he said, it is sought to make it appear that he fears to join us, but by no words spoken or action taken does our Convention compromise him. Such statements are pure falsehoods. Parnell knows the loyalty of the American allies; he does not and need not fear them.

The Bad and Worthless

are never imitated or counterfeited. This is especially true of a family medicine, and it is positive proof that the remedy imitated is of the highest value. As soon as it had been tested and proved by the whole world that Hop Bitters was the purest, best and most valuable family medicine on earth, many imitations sprung up and began to steal the notices in which the press and people of the country had expressed the merits of H. B., and in every way trying to induce suffering invalids to use their stuff instead, expecting to make money on the credit and good name of H. B. Many others started nostrums put up in similar style to H. B., with variously devised names in which the word "Hop" or "Hops" were used in a way to induce people to believe they were the same as Hop Bitters. All such pretended remedies or cures, no matter what their style or name is, and especially those with the word "Hop" or "Hops" in their name or in any way connected with them or their name, are imitations or counterfeits. Beware of them. Touch none of them. Use nothing but pure Hop Bitters, with a bunch or cluster of green Hops on the white label. Trust nothing else. Druggists and dealers are warned against dealing in imitations or counterfeits.

One of Earth's Angels.

The good natured landlady and her daughter took charge of the baby during those wretched weeks of expectation, or Mrs. Reginald Stanford's only son would have been sadly neglected.

April was gone; May came in, bringing the anniversary of Rose's ill-starred marriage and finding her in that worst widowhood, a day of ceaseless tears and regrets to the unhappy, deserted wife. The bright May days went by, one after another, passing as wretched days and more wretched nights do pass somehow, and June had taken its place. All this long, long time, no letter had come for Rose. How she watched and waited for it; how she had strained her eyes day after day to catch sight of the postman; how her heart leaped up and throbbed when she saw him approach, and sank down in her breast like lead as he went by, only those can know who have watched and waited like her. A sickening sense of despair stole over her at last. They had forgotten her; they hated and despised her, and left her to her fate. There was nothing for it but to go the almshouse and die, like any other pauper.

She had been mad when she fancied they could forgive her. Her sin had been too great. All the world had deserted her, and the sooner she was dead and out of the way the better.

She sat in the misty June twilight thinking this, with a sad hopeless kind of resignation. It was the fifth of June. Could she forget that this very day twelve-month was to have been her wedding day! Poor Jules—poor Kate! Oh, what a wretch she had been!

She covered her face with her hands, tears falling like rain through her thin fingers.

'I wonder if they will be sorry for me, and forgive me, when they hear I am dead!' she thought. 'Oh, how I live, and live, when other women would have died with half this trouble. Only nineteen, and with nothing left to wish for but death.'

There was a tap at the door. Before she could speak it was opened, and Jane, the brisk, came rustling in.

'There's a gentleman down stairs, Mrs. Stanford, asking to see you.'

Rose sprang up, her lips apart, her eyes dilating.

'To see me! A gentleman! Jane, is it Mr. Stanford?'

Jane shook her head.

'Not a bit like Mr. Stanford, ma'am; not near so 'andsome, though a very fine-looking gentleman. He said, he'd call you as 'ow a friend wanted to see you.'

A friend! Oh, who could it be? She made a motion to Jane to show him up—she was too agitated to speak. She stood with her hands clasped over her beating heart, breathless, waiting.

A man's quick step drew up the stairs; a tall figure stood in the doorway, hat in hand.

Rose uttered a faint cry. She had thought of her father, of Jules Le Touche, never once of him who stood before her.

'Doctor Frank!' she gasped; and then she was holding to a chair for support, feeling the walls swimming around her.

Doctor Frank took her in his arms, and kissed her pale face tenderly and pityingly as her father might have done.

'My poor child! My poor little Rose! What a shadow you are! Don't cry so—pray don't!'

She bowed her weary head against his shoulder, and broke out into hysterical sobbing. It was so good to see that friendly, familiar face again. She clung to him with a sense of unspeakable trust and relief, and cried in the fullness of her heart.

He let her tears flow for a while, sitting beside her, and stroking the faded, disordered hair away from the wan, pale face.

'There! there!' he said, at last, 'we have had tears enough now. Look up and let me talk to you. What did you think when you received no answer to your letter?'

'I thought all very cruel. I thought I was forgotten.'

'Of course you did; but you are not forgotten, and it is my fault that you have had no letter. I wanted to surprise you; and I have brought a letter from your father breathing nothing but love and forgiveness.'

'Give it to me!' cried Rose, breathlessly; 'give it to me!'

'Can't, unfortunately, yet awhile. I left it at my hotel. Don't look so disappointed. I am going to take you there in half an hour. Hallo! Is that the baby?'

Reginald Stanford, Junior, asleep in his crib, set up a sudden squall at this moment.

Doctor Frank crossed the floor, and hoisted him up in a twinkling.

'Why, he's a splendid little fellow, Rose, and the very image of—What do you call him?'

'Reginald,' Rose said, in a very subdued tone.

'Well, Master Reginald, you and I are good friends, aren't we, and you're not going to cry!'

He hoisted him high in the air, and baby answered with a loud crow.

'That's right. Babies always take to me, Rose. You don't know how many dozens I have nursed in my time. But you don't ask me any questions about home. Aren't you curious to know how they all get on?'

'Papa is married, I suppose!' Rose said.

'Of course—last January. And Dauton Hall was burnt down; and they have built up another twice as big and three times as handsome. And Mr. Richards—you remember the mysterious invalid, Rose?'

'Yes.'

'Well, Mr. Richards turned out to be your brother Harry, who lived shut up there, because he thought he had committed a murder some time before in New York. And Agnes Darling—you have not forgotten Agnes Darling?'

'Oh, no.'

'Agnes Darling turns out to be his wife. Quite a romance, isn't it? I will tell you all the particulars another time. Just now, I want you to put on your bonnet and come with me to my hotel. Don't ask me why—I won't tell you. We will fetch the baby too. Go, go at once.'

Doctor Frank was imperative, and Rose yielded at once. It was so indescribably delightful, after all these weeks of suspense and despair, to see Frank Dauton's friendly face, and to listen to his friendly voice, commanding as one who had the right. Rose had her hat and shawl on directly, and with baby in her arms, followed him down stairs. A hansom stood waiting. He helped her in, gave the cabman his orders, took his place beside her, and they rattled off.

'When am I going home?' Rose asked, suddenly. 'Have you come to fetch me?'

'Not precisely. You are to return with me, however.'

'And when are we going?'

'That is not quite decided yet. It is an after consideration, and there is no hurry. Are you particularly anxious to be back to Canada?'

'I am tired of being lonely and homeless,' poor Rose replied, the tears starting. 'I want to be at rest, and among the dear familiar faces. Doctor Frank,' she said, looking at him appealingly, 'have they forgiven me, do you think?'

'Whom do you mean by they, Mrs. Stanford?'

'Papa and—and Kate.'

'I must have been rather disagreeable to Kate at first, to have her lover run away and leave her, but I really think she has got over it. We must be resigned to the inevitable, you know, my dear Rose, in this changeable world.'

Rose sighed, and looked out of the window. A moment later, and the cab drew up before a stately hotel.

'This is the place,' said the Doctor. 'Come!'

He helped her out, gave his arm, and led her up a long flight of broad stairs. It was a little journey through carpeted corridors to the gentleman's apartments; but he reached the door at last. It opened into a long vista of splendor, as it seemed to Rose, accustomed so long to the shabby Strand lodgings. She had expected to find the Doctor's rooms empty; but to her surprise, within an inner apartment, whose door stood wide, she saw a lady. The lady, robed in bright silk, tall and stately, with golden hair twisted coronet wise round the shapely head, stood with her back to them, looking out of the window. Something in that straight and stately form struck with a nameless thrill to Rose Stanford's heart; and she stood in the doorway, spell bound. At the noise of their entrance, the lady turned round, uttered an exclamation of pleasure, and advanced towards them. Doctor Frank stood with a smile on his face, enjoying Mrs. Stanford's consternation. Another second and she was clasped in the lady's arms.

'Rose! Rose! My dear little sister!'

'Kate! Rose murmured, faintly, all white and trembling.

Kate looked up at the smiling face of the Doctor, a new light dawning on her.

'Oh, he has never told you! For shame, Frank, to shock her so! My darling, did you not know I was here?'

'No; he never told me,' Rose said, sinking into a chair, and looking hopelessly at her sister. 'What does it mean, Kate? Is papa here?'

RACKED BY INNUMERABLE PANGS, restless by day, sleepless at night, rising unrefreshed in the morning, without appetite and pestered by varying and perplexing symptoms, the dyspeptic takes indeed a gloomy view of human existence. For him the zest of life seems gone. Heartburn, oppression at the pit of the stomach, and the attendant annoyances of of constipation and billousness, combine to render him utterly wretched. But there is, in fact, but little advantage of it, a reliable source of reliable relief from all misery. NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY AND DIGESTIVE CURE is, as its name imports, a botanic preparation, free from mineral poison, and an all-sufficient remedy for indigestion in its most obstinate form. It not only enriches the blood by enabling the digestive organs to convert the food received into nutriment, but depurates it by increasing the action of the bowels and kidneys, the natural outlets for its impurities. But while it relaxes the bowels, it does so prudently and with pain, like a drastic cathartic. It aids, but never forces, Nature, invigorating as well as purifying and regulating the system. It thoroughly removes those diseased humors which tend to vitiate the blood, purifies the urinary secretion, and promotes a flow of healthy bile into the natural channel, besides expelling it from the alimentation. Experience has proved that this standard medicine is a thorough remedy for dyspepsia, biliousness, costiveness, kidney complaints, scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, lumbago and all impurities of the blood. Price $1.00. Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac-simile of their signature. Sold by all medicine dealers

Here is where WARNER'S SAFE CURE has achieved its great reputation. It acts directly upon the kidneys and liver and by placing them in a healthy condition drives disease and pain from the system. A Paris Tragedy.

SEQUEL TO THE "AFFAIRE MONASTERIO."
MME. CHALANTAN KILLED TO END A SCANDAL—THE "STIRRING EPISODE" TO BE DRAMATIZED.

The Monastorio abduction case described in the Free Press of Saturday is retold as follows in a Paris letter of April 6, with a highly sensational sequel:

More sensational than the "Bourgeois de Lille" and the "Bird of Prey" was a drama in real life played yesterday in one of the little by-streets of Montmartre. It is the epilogue to a serio comedy, the so-called "Affaire Monasterio," with which the French press have been busy for six weeks, and of which I was waiting the denouement in order to give a true version of the story. Yesterday's incident, however, has changed my intention, and, therefore, I will serve up briefly as much as is certain in this imbroglio, as it will explain the tragedy. A Mlle. Fidelia Monasterio was left a small fortune by her father a South American, deceased a few years ago. Fidelia is of feeble mind, and, since her inheritance, has always been the prey of money sharks, among of whom the chief seem to be her mother, much addicted to strong drink and a sort of half brother one Carlos Lafit. As long as this pair of worthies could keep the girl under the chloral treated her tolerably well, although evidence before the court where the case was tried and adjourned on the ground of incompetency showed that she was frequently fed on putrid meat and decayed vegetables, "whereby her health suffered." All of a sudden appeared Mme. Chalantan, a woman of the nitri and flower of the demi-monde. Chalantan, seized with pity for the poor creature's sufferings, inveigled Fidelia from the maternal roof to her own dwelling in the Rue des Batignolles, which Carlos flanked by two medical men, invaded one day in early March, and capturing the runaway, slipped her into a strait jacket after a severe fight with her friend and defender, and conveyed her to the private mad house, of which she had already been an inmate. Mme. Chalantan was indignant and appealed to the press and the public. Mme. Monasterio and her son Carlos were indignant at Mme. Chalantan's indignation, a commission de lunatico inquirendo was appointed, a great mad doctor reported officially that if Fidelia was not absolutely a lunatic she was as nearly as possible an idiot, and the authorities issued a warrant, in virtue of which she was to be discharged from the asylum, to come under the legal guardian, a member of the Chilian Legation, by whom she would be repatriated. But when the officers got to Picpus, the bird had flown, leaving the keepers gaping, away, for which Carlos, Mme. Monasterio, and their two accomplices, the mad doctors, were at once arrested and brought to trial on the charge of "illegal deprivation." Where Fidelia is nobody knows positively except M. Lafit, by whom was produced several affidavits from residents in England, all to the effect that Fidelia was there, in excellent health and spirits, and not at all anxious to return to France. This case has had no issue yet, on some legal quibble its definite hearing has been postponed, the defendants, meanwhile, being lodged gratuitously by the Government, at St. Lazare and elsewhere, but in the course of the trial the counsel for the defence was very hard upon the chief witness for the prosecution, Mme. Chalantan, whom M de Sal represented as a monster guilty of the most odious crimes, as a creature to be banished for her infamy from society. Whether this insult helped his client's cause much I cannot say; Mme. Chalantan was obliged to bear it in silence, but it roused to wrath her husband, from whom she was judicially separated, and that individual decided to "put en end to a scandal which will sully an honorable name." This to the Police Commissaries, Hungren and other well-known valuable Roots and Herbs. It is entirely vegetable, and cannot hurt the most delicate constitution it is one of the best medicines in use for Regulating the Bowels.

It is sold by all respectable druggists at one dollar for a quart bottle, or six bottles for five dollars.

England Improving Her Navy

QUICK WORK AT CHATHAM DOCKYARD—THE NEWEST FIGHTING SHIP, THE WARSPITE.

A naval officer who returned from duty in the European squadron a few days ago visited the naval establishments of England before starting for home. He said:—"At no time has there been so much activity at the Chatham dockyard as this season of the year as now. The British Admiralty are for some reason, perhaps because of the present Irish troubles, pushing forward the armored vessels which are building, and will have them completed at an early date. The mechanics are employed on extra time. The greatest amount of attention is being given to the powerful twin screw steel-armored steamer Warspite, which is altogether an exceptional type of vessel. It is intended that she shall be the fastest armored vessel afloat; and, while she is to be employed on cruising duty, her offensive and defensive equipment will be equal to that of any vessel she will probably ever meet. She is over 300 feet long, with a displacement of 7,390 tons. Her armor plating will be steel-faced, ten inches thick, and carried five feet below the water line. Her armament is laid on a low-tech backing, with the usual iron skin plating, thus presenting a solid thickness of nearly two feet of steel, iron and timber against the impact of shot and shell.

Above the fighting deck will be a tower, protected by steel armor, while her weather deck will be protected by steel-faced armor. The armament will be unusually heavy, consisting of four 18-ton breech-loading rifles, besides the usual machine guns and torpedoes. The rifles will be capable of piercing sixteen inches of iron armor, or thirteen inches of steel armor at a distance of 1,000 yards. She will also have a number of six-inch breech loading rifles for effective work at a range of five miles. Her cost, when completed, will be about $3,750,000, her hull and machinery alone costing about $2,500,000. This, together with the other armored vessels, will be completed during the present year.

The Canadian Pacific Railway.

A letter from Mr. Van Horne to the Minister of Railways on the subject of the route of the Canada Pacific Railway through the Rocky Mountains was presented to the House on Tuesday. Mr. Van Horne, in the course of his letter, which is dated Montreal, April 15th, 1883, says:—

"In response to your request for additional information concerning the line proposed to be adopted by this company through the Rocky and Selkirk Mountains, I submit the following profile of the line from Fort Calgarry to the second crossing of the Columbia River, as deduced from the latest reports of the engineers of the company. This profile shows the worst that may be expected as to gradients, and it is believed that great improvements will be made in the final location. In locating the line through the Mountains the chief considerations have been the saving of distance, the cost of construction and economy in operation, and as affecting the latter, curvature and gradients have been carefully considered. Danger from land slips and loss of time in construction, and that each of these objections is so serious as to render the use of that gradient almost impracticable, and, inasmuch as an assistant engine would be required on a grade of 90 feet as well as on one of 116 feet per mile, the company have decided to adopt his idea of a direct line down the west slope of the Rocky Mountains with a gradient, for a distance of 20 miles, at the last named rate. The next problem encountered is as to whether the line should be carried around the great bend of the Columbia River, or directly across the Selkirk Mountains, and a practical line has been found directly across, reaching the summit on either side by grades of 116 feet, and each 20 miles in length. The distances saved by this line is 63 miles, while by a line following the Columbia Valley, around the mountains, it would be about 140 miles. We have, therefore, to consider whether a line 63 miles in length with two gradients of 116 feet per mile, each 20 miles in length, is preferable to a line 140 miles in length with maximum gradients of 52 feet per mile. The practicability of operating gradients as heavy as 116 feet is beyond question; such gradients are used on all of the Pacific lines, and many even heavier have been used for years in various parts of America. The question is, therefore, one of economical operation. To operate such heavy gradients to the best advantage with a considerable traffic, heavy assistant engines are necessary, and the cost of operating such grades, as compared with grades of 52 feet per mile for the same distance, is almost precisely the cost of the service of the assistant engines and the additional wear and tear of track incident to their use, and as against this we have the saving of the cost of operating 77 miles of additional line and the saving of nearly two hours' time with passenger and four hours' time with freight trains. The latter consideration, which is of great importance in competing for through traffic, would alone be sufficient to justify the use of heavier gradients. The entire products of the coal mines between the Red River and the Rockies, in addition to the through traffic to and from the Pacific Coast, must pass over the section east of Winnipeg, while the mountain section will have little more than the through traffic which, in the case of the other Pacific lines, amounts to about ten or twelve per cent. of the whole. The only place between Montreal and the Pacific Coast where west-bound trains will require assistance is the ascent of the east slope of the Selkirks, and the east-bound trains will require assistance to only two places, namely, the ascent of the west slope of the Selkirks, and the west slope of the Rockies, twenty miles in each case. It should be remembered in this connection that the preponderance of through traffic across the continent is largely west-bound, and the three heavy gradients rising east-bound might therefore be still heavier without material disadvantage.

Daily Intelligencer.

BELLEVILLE, THURSDAY, APRIL 26, 1883.

Chief Justice Wallbridge on Sunday Observance.

The following, from the Presbyterian Advocate, will be read with warm approval by the opponents of Sunday labor everywhere, and especially by the residents of this part of the country :

The new Chief Justice of Manitoba is the right man in the right place. Last autumn six young men, Presbyterians from Prince Edward Island, engaged with a firm of contractors on the Canada Pacific, to work from November till April. Soon after their engagement they were ordered to work on Sabbath. They refused. The contractors dismissed them in just such language as one would expect a Sabbath breaking contractor to use. The young men brought an action at the recent assizes claiming damages for wrongful dismissal. In charging the jury Chief Justice Wallbridge said :

"It appeared that one Sunday morning they were told to go to work, but they did not go, and he (the Chief Justice) was bound to tell them that they were not bound to go. Some people were more strict than others in the observance of the Sabbath. Presbyterians were particularly strict, and those men were Presbyterians. They had a right to be strict ; and the law gave them that right. If they were dismissed, he considered the dismissal a wrongful one."

The jury gave the young men eighty dollars each as damages. A few such lessons would have a good effect a little nearer home than Winnipeg. An employer has no legal right to compel his employe to work on Sabbath. The employe has a right to refuse, and, if dismissal follows refusal, damages can be collected. It should be remembered, however, that the young men in question were faithful work men. All the ingenuity of the lawyers could prove no other charge against them but that they would not work on Sabbath. All honor to the young men who had the principle to refuse to desecrate that day, and the pluck to bring the Sabbath breaking contractors into court. We venture to say that these young men know the Shorter Catechism. They were taught their duty in some Presbyterian home—it may have been a humble one—in Prince Edward Island, and when they went to the North-West they knew their rights and knew how to defend them.

Editorial Brevities.

The London Advertiser sheds the light of its powerful intellect on the Premier's Franchise Bill in a short editorial, the opening portion of which reads as follows :

Sir John Macdonald's Franchise Bill is not a measure which can commend itself to the good sense of the House or of the country. We have not got the Bill before us, but we shall not be at all surprised to find that and so on and so forth. Writers of ordinary intelligence—those who value the good opinion of their readers—would have waited until they had the bill before them. Not so the genius of the Advertiser, who evidently imagines himself possessed of the gift of prescience, which enables him to pronounce an authoritative opinion in advance of the publication of the measure. Criticism founded on ignorant imaginings —for the Tiser's prescience is only imaginary—costs but little and is worth less. The only wonder is that there are some individuals who read and believe in such idle vaporings of diseased imaginations.

The Ottawa correspondent of the Globe writes under date of April 23rd :

Mr. Bowell and his friends persist in asserting that the defeat of the Orange Bill was solely due to the votes of the Liberals, notwithstanding the fact that more Conservatives than Liberals voted for the six months' hoist.

We do not consider the correspondent in question a very reliable exponent of the opinions of Mr. Bowell and his friends ; but if such is the opinion of the Minister Customs, it is founded on the undeniable fact that, of the 59 Grits who voted in the division of the question, 50 voted against the bill and but 9 for it, and some more of the Opposition members paired against it. What is absolutely conclusive of the charge that the Grits defeated the measure is the fact that, if all the members of their party had refrained from voting, the bill would have been carried by 61 to 56.

The Mail calls it charlatanism, "Charlotonism" would do as well. The terms have become synonymous since Mr. Charlton's famous protection speech of 1876 and his subsequent action on that question.

Mr.—or, as he prefers to be called, "General"—M. Butt Howson, is doing his best to persecute and annoy Sir John A. Macdonald. He alleges that Sir John made certain promises to him to induce him to write campaign articles in the Irish Canadian prior to the general election of 1878, and that when Sir John failed to redeem his promises, and was sued for the amount pledged, he filed in his own defence affidavits containing statements he knew to be untrue. Mr. Howson has written many very bitter letters to the newspapers, complaining of his alleged ill-treatment by Sir John, and actually had a summons served upon the Premier during his recent visit to Toronto, charging him with perjury. The prosecutor appeared at the Police Court prepared to press his charge, but Sir John paid no attention to the summons, and Mr. Howson, fearing popular violence, sneaked out of the court by a private door. Howson need not fear that the public will dignify him by using violence towards him. He and such as he are too contemptible to arouse any feeling stronger than scorn.

The Newmarket Era concludes a well written article on the new Franchise Bill as follows :—" Surely political parties must be changing places. The old Reformers of days gone by will soon begin to think the political millennium is fast dawning ; and unless those who claim to be leaders of the Liberal party get out of the way, they will prove little short of stumbling blocks to the advanced liberalism and progress, as presented by their opponents. Baldwin, Lafontaine, Papineau, and Caleb Hopkins never dreamed that the party led by Sir John would become promoters of such sweeping reform. The world moves still."

A New Industry.

THE MAGOG PRINT WORKS—A COMPANY WITH $1,000,000 CAPITAL ORGANIZED.

(Montreal Star, April 23.)

A special meeting of the shareholders of the Magog Textile and Print Co. was held in this city to-day, for the purpose of electing a board of directors and other important business. The company has been formed thanks to the protective tariff of the N. P., and will as soon as the extensive works are completed commence the manufacture of textile fabrics, as well as carry on the business of bleaching, printing and dyeing at Magog. The company enters upon a field of industry hitherto untouched in Canada, the demand for such goods being at present altogether supplied from other countries.

The capital will be divided into 10,000 shares at $1,000 each. $600,000 has already been subscribed, and ten per cent called up. The shareholders present this morning elected the following gentlemen to act as directors, viz : Messrs. Thornton, M. P. P., James K. Ward, Thos. C. Keefer, C. E., A. Selkirk Cross, Joel Ledue, James Dakers, George R. Grant, Wm. Hobbs, and C. C. Colby, M. P. The By-laws of the company were confirmed, and at a subsequent meeting of the directors, Mr. Hobbs was elected President, and Mr. Thornton Vice-President. The buildings are expected to be completed in November, and operations will commence on 1st January.

Maddened by Watching Garfield's Tomb.

(From the Cleveland Herald.)

Some days ago Joseph Kashinsky, a private of Company H, Tenth United States Infantry, on duty at the late President Garfield's tomb, in Lake View cemetery, became insane. Kashinsky is a young healthy Polander, with an abundance of animal spirits, about 21 years of age, and has been a soldier some ten months. He has been on duty at Garfield's tomb some two months. It is said that the melancholy madness from which he is suffering is caused by the diseased line of thought incident to the weird monotony of tomb and mound that the guard experiences at his post at the grave. Kashinsky's talk and action since his mind has given way is said to carry out this idea of the cause of his trouble. Other men in the guard have been affected by the same fear, and some of them have resorted to drink to drown their fears and trembling. This is the third man of the Tenth Infantry that has gone to the bad since the guard has been on duty at the president's grave. About a year ago William Fogerty an old and excellent soldier of Company K, was taken to Fort Wayne, Detroit, court-martialled, dishonorably dismissed from the service, and imprisoned for a year for drunkenness. Not long after Michael Fox, of Company B, shared the same fate, and was imprisoned for a month, with loss of pay for another month, for intoxication while on duty at the tomb. General Hancock afterward removed Fogerty's disabilities, and he was reinstated. Neither returned to Lake View cemetery for duty, and thus got, by a hard road, what they sought—to be relieved. All dreaded the duty at the tomb, and one or two have expressed their dread to their comrades, and were known to utter prayers and cross themselves frequently while at their post.

Hard Lumps in Breast

DR. R. V. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y. : Dear Sir,—I write you home like to say that I thought I had a cancer. There was a large lump in my breast as large as a walnut, and had been there for months. I commenced taking your "Golden Medical Discovery," "Favorite Prescription" and "Pellets" in June and the lump is gone.

Yours gratefully, MRS. R. R. CLARK, Irvington, Mich.

The Red River Clear.

WINNIPEG, April 23.—The ice has broken and gone down the Red River. Yesterday and to-day a grand sight was witnessed by thousands of citizens. All the bridges are safe, uninjured, and no fears of a flood are entertained, the head waters of Fargo being twelve feet lower than last spring. The first steamer arrived at Emerson on Sunday. The ice on the Assiniboine is expected to break up to-morrow.

Beware of Imitations.

Since Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has become celebrated, a number of unprincipled persons have been endeavoring to palm off Electric and Eclectric Oil for the genuine DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. Beware of these similar named articles. If their originators had any faith in the healing properties of their own medicines they would, like honest men, give them name of their own, and not try to sell them the reputation of another ; but as they know their preparations have no merit, they resort to the most unprincipled means of selling them by getting a name as near as possible to Eclectric. We therefore ask the public when purchasing to see that the name Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is on the front of the wrapper, and the signature of NORTHROP & LYMAN, the proprietors for Canada on the back.

Convincing Proof.

A Montrealer's Shocking Death.

KINGSTON, Ont., April 24th.—On Sunday morning about 10 o'clock, two men were found lying beside the new railway buildings at Ardern. One of them, named McGovern, from Montreal, was dead ; the other in a stupor. A jug of whiskey lay a few feet from the dead man. It appears that on Saturday night a whiskey peddler appeared at one of the boarding shanties, and after the men had drunk considerable, he and McGovern started out. They were afterwards discovered in the condition described.

Emigration from Ireland.

A BIG SCHEME IN PROSPECT.

LONDON, April 25.—The offers relative to emigration from Ireland which Lord Carlingford referred to in the House of Lords on Monday are from the Canadian Pacific Railway and land companies interested in the opening of the Canadian North-West. Their proposal is to settle 5,000 families, numbering 25,000 persons, on Government lands under homestead laws which give each family 160 acres free. The promoters of the scheme would become security for £1,000,000, to be advanced interest free by Great Britain for ten years, to be devoted to loans sufficient to start each family, or they would become security for £2,000,000, with which they would relieve crowded districts in Ireland of 5,000 families.

It is reported by the Globe's correspondent that the Government has practically decided to accept the scheme submitted to it by companies interested in the settlement of the Canadian North-West, and is prepared to advance, for ten years without interest, a sum sufficient to meet the expenses involved in transferring Irish families from their homes to their destination in Canada, and to settle them on the free homesteads which will be provided. The companies will be responsible for the ultimate repayment of the advances. The detailed official announcement may be expected shortly.

Father Walsh's report showed a balance on hand on Jan. 9 of $12,714 ; received from branches Jan. 9 to April 9, $8,932 ; balance on hand April 8, $8,692 ; remitted for land league purposes to date, $39,100 ; for Irish relief fund, $23,562 ; balance on hand, $4,915.

Hynes report shows that during the year 83 new branches were enrolled. There are now on the roll 550 branches, of whose existence the central office has official knowledge and 298 not known officially. The total money received by the Secretary from April 12, 1882, to April 25, 1883, was $79,000. The donations amounted to $4,182 and the dollar subscriptions to $6,000 ; expenses of the year, $7,466 ; amount remitted to Ireland, $66,657 ; balance on hand, $4,915.

Patrick Egan stated that since he became treasurer he had handled $243,000, and the land league had received from all sources $385,000, a total of $1,230,000, of which nearly a million came from the Irish in America.

The resolution was finally carried by 231 to 156 to amalgamate the land league with the Irish national league. After some disturbance, the motion was made unanimous.

A WARLIKE FISH.—The St. Catharines Journal says :—" Mr. Nathan Morey, who at this season is generally busy in fixing up things along the canal, informs us that a few days ago Mr. Weaver caught a very large cat fish in the level below Lock No. 2. This in itself is not extraordinary, but when the fish was opened Mr. Weaver, who is a peaceable man, was very much surprised to find a large revolver in its inside, with four of the chambers loaded. No doubt the revolver was dropped overboard by some canal navigator and swallowed by the fish. Indeed, this appears to be the only way to account for the strange find. We understand that the superintendent of the canal intends to file a claim for the recovery of the shooting iron, as it is contrary to the rules of the canal to allow armed fish to patrol its placid waters. And this will be more fully understood by all who have any acquaintance with the laws of flotsam and jetsam. Although in the absence of our friend, the crown attorney, we doubt if the latter terms applies to the catfish."

Dominion Parliament.

FIFTH PARLIAMENT—FIRST SESSION.

OTTAWA, April 26, 2 a. m.—The cause celebre, generally known as the Kings, P. E. I. case, was concluded to-night. The debate upon the Prince Edward Island election matter was of course a legal one and as about as interesting to the general public as the legal arguments addressed to the judges sitting in Osgoode hall. The subject has been well thrashed out in the papers, and the facts and arguments have been presented in various forms to the public.

Mr. Weldon moved an amendment to the effect that Robertson, having had the highest number of votes, should have been declared elected.

Mr. Cameron (Huron) moved in amendment to the amendment that the whole matter should be referred to the Supreme Court. This was lost on division by 64 to 108.

Mr. Davies then moved an amendment to the effect that in view of the evidence brought before the Committee, and the law on the subject, there should be a new election, but the House decided in favor of Mr. McDonald by a vote of 107 to 66.

The Clerk of the Crown in Chancery was then called in, and the return was amended in accordance with the report of the Committee.

Thousands Say So.

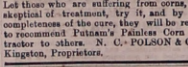

Mr. T. W. Atkins, Girard, Kan., writes : "I never hesitate to recommend your Electric Bitters to my customers, they give entire satisfaction and are rapid sellers." Electric Bitters are the purest and best medicine known and will positively cure Kidney and Liver complaints. Purify the blood and regulate the bowels. No family can afford to be without them. They will save hundreds of dollars in doctor's bills every year. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by R. Templeton.

A New Principle.

The principle upon which PUTNAM'S PAINLESS CORN EXTRACTOR acts is entirely new. It does not sink deep into the flesh, thereby producing soreness, but acts directly upon the external covering of the corn, separates it from the under layer, removes the direct pressure from the part, and so effects a radical cure, without any pain or discomfort. Let those who are suffering from corns, yet skeptical of treatment, try it, and by the completeness of the cure, they will be ready to recommend Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor to others. N. C. MR. ROBERT SIBBITT, of Toronto, to-day became the landlord of the Queen's Hotel, in this city, having purchased the interest of Mr. John Soby, in that popular hostelrie. Mr. Sibbitt comes well recommended, is a genial and sociable gentleman and will doubtless receive a deserved patronage.

On Monday, in company with Mr Reed, of Napanee, they killed 50, but on the next two days they shot alone, scoring 10 (outside the limits) on Tuesday, and 23 on Wednesday. This is the best bag of the season, so far as our local Nimrods are concerned.

ON Monday Mr. James Soby will proceed to Picton to assume the proprietorship and management of the (late Mottashed) hotel, which his father recently purchased. Mr. Soby has made himself very popular in town. He is one of our most noted rifle shots, is equally skilful with the shot-gun, and is a good cricketer, and in all these branches of sport as well as in social circles, he will be much missed. Many friends in Belleville will wish him prosperity in his new home.

Headed by the Band of their Order, they marched to the residence of their late brother, Samuel Robinson, whose funeral obsequies followed. The funeral was a large one and as it proceeded to the boat the band played a solemn dirge. The burial took place at the cemetery.

The model was supplied by Mr. Offord, who has seen the yacht in frame and says that she promises to be very fast. She will be named Victoria, after the daughter of the owner." Fatal Results of a Drunken Row.

A man named Frank Little, a painter, died in a hotel in Centreville, Northumberland County, on Saturday last, from injuries received during a drunken quarrel. An inquest was held, when the appended facts were revealed: Little engaged in wrestling with a man named Robert McLung, in the "South Monaghan House," which is kept by John Aitkins. The wrestlers became vexed, and the landlord ordered them to desist, which they did. Subsequently they again met, when McLung struck Little and knocked him down. The latter got up and in going out fell down. Aitkins and another man carried him into the kitchen, and it is alleged, let him fall several times. He was then insensible, and continued so till he died. The post-mortem disclosed the existence of several wounds on the head and limbs. The jury returned a verdict that Little came to his death by injuries received at the hands of Aitkins and McLung. They will be arrested.

MORNING DESPATCHES.

AMERICAN.

CHARGES AGAINST A MINISTER.

NEW YORK, April 26.—A Committee of Episcopal clergymen has presented charges to Bishop Potter against the Rev. R. Heber Newton. They declare he violated the church constitution, taught doctrines subversive of the supremacy of the holy scriptures, virtually denied Christ and his incarnation, discredited the miracles of the Old and New Testament, erroneously stated the doctrine of the Holy Ghost, denied the second advent of Christ, that he had been guilty of acts involving a breach in the ordination vows, that he represented the religion of the Jews as a form of nature worship, that he falsely represented the mission and teaching of the Old Testament as proper, that he represented Christianity as the outcome of revelation, and not as a direct revelation from God, and rejected the predictive character of prophecy, thus impeaching the authority and denying the testimonies of Jesus Christ. These doctrines, the Committee say, are destructive of the foundation upon which the Protestant Episcopal Church is built. The publication of such opinions by a clergyman of the Church under circumstances of the greatest notoriety has become a great scandal. The trial cannot take place before the first of July.

NEW YORK NOTES.

Geo. Francis Train, jr., has sued Freedman & Co., brokers, for the recovery of $34,000 he claims to have lost in stock speculations.

The Trunk Line representatives yesterday decided to settle in money payments balances accruing from passenger traffic to some roads, under a differential rate of agreement.

WASHINGTON SPECIAL.

The Herald's Washington special says:—Notwithstanding Gladstone's intimation that representations have been made to this Government regarding the dynamite conspirators, no note has been received by the State Department, nor has the question come before the President in any form. If the British Government should call the attention of our Government to the matter, it will be but a repetition similar to the complaint made by the United States when Minister Adams, by the direction of the Secretary of State, laid before Earl Russel copies of official correspondence relating to the manufacture of Greek fire, at Windsor, Canada, to be used in the firing of certain cities in the United States by rebel emissaries.

THE HASLAN-ROSS RACE.

ST. JOHN, April 26.—Ross is satisfied with the changes made by Haslan in the terms for the race at Ogdensburg.

FIRE IN A FOUNDLING ASYLUM.

NEW YORK, April 26.—A citizen saw flames issuing from the second story of the wing of the foundling asylum on 3rd avenue at three o'clock this morning. He gave the alarm and the firemen burst in the windows and soon subdued the flames. The sisters being aroused succeeded in removing 200 children to another part of the building without a panic.

THE GRAIN PEST.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 26.—The grain pest has appeared in several counties in California. It threatens to make serious inroads.

A SAD OCCURRENCE.

PATTERSON, April 26.—Wm. Jacobus, aged 16, started to cross Dundee Lake yesterday in a small boat, but was swept over the dam. He was thrown out, and the boat struck a rock, bottom up. After a half hour's struggle the boy swam to the boat, and stretched himself across it exhausted. His parents, brothers and sisters, and nearly a thousand persons were gathered on the shore, and great but unavailing efforts were made to rescue the boy, who called out he was dying with cold. At the end of half an hour the boat was guided to the shore by a rope, but the youth was dead.

NEW YORK, April 26.—Arrived, Abyssinia and Pawonia from Liverpool, Labrador from Havre.

STREET RAILWAY EMBEZZLEMENT.

PHILADELPHIA, April 16.—The amount alleged to have been embezzled from the People's Passenger Railway Company by George and Samuel Work, who were arrested yesterday, is nearly a million. While the officials were preparing to seize the the steamer Tropic yesterday, for violating the neutrality law, a new crew was put aboard and clearance papers were quietly procured and the steamer escaped.

MINERAL DISCOVERY.

Michael Kericlzer claims to have discovered a large deposit of minerals on his farm in Lebanon Co. which will assay $1,000 a ton. It consists of iridium, platinum, quicksilver, copper, tin, cobalt, gold and nickel.

FALL IN OIL.

PITTSBURG, April 26.—Oil dropped from 93½ to 92½ yesterday on the report that a well running at the rate of 1,000 bbls a day had been struck three miles north of the copper tract. It is expected that considerable new territory will be opened in consequence of this new strike.

THE DYNAMITE DEMONS.

LONDON, April 26.—Dr. Gallagher, Bernard Gallagher, Whitehead, Dalton, Ansburgh, Wilson and Curtin were again arraigned this morning.

A clerk employed at the American Exchange testified that Dr. Gallagher called at the Exchange and enquired for letters addressed "Galen," and showed the utmost anxiety to gain possession of them. Witness thought Ansburgh, who was with him, was passing under the name of Galen for the purpose of procuring the letters.

A Birmingham druggist testified that Whitehead bought at his store 100 pounds of nitric acid, 300 pounds of sulphuric acid, and 50 pounds of glycerene. In cross examination the witness said Whitehead was only appar ently stocking a shop with acids used by various manufacturers.

THE IRISH CONVENTION.

PHILADELPHIA, April 26th.—The Irish National convention met in the Horticultural hall this morning. The delegates from all the reputable Irish organizations in the United States and Canada in accord with the Dublin platform were entitled to seats. As a result, the delegates' seats were full, as we as the galleries. Mrs. Parnell entered, escorted by Alexander Sullivan, of Chicago, who introduced her, amid tremendous applause, as "greater than the mother of the Gracchi." Sullivan called the body to order.

The Bad and Worthless

are never imitated or counterfeited. This is especially true of a family medicine, and it is positive proof that the remedy imitated is of the highest value. As soon as it had been tested and proved by the whole world that Hop Bitters was the purest, best and most valuable family medicine on earth, many im Rations sprung up and began to steal the notices in which the press and people of the country had expressed the merits of H. B., and in every way trying to deceive suffering invalids to use their stuff instead, expecting to make money on the credit and good name of H. B. Many others started nostrums put up in similar style to H. B., with variously devised names in which the word "Hop" or "Hop" were used in a way to induce people to believe they were the same as Hop Bitters. All such pretended remedies or counterfeits no matter what their style or name is, and especially those with the word "Hop" or "Hops" in their name or in any way connected with them or their name, are imitations or counterfeits. Beware of them. Touch none of them. Use nothing but genuine Hop Bitters, with a bunch or cluster of green Hops on the white label. Trust nothing else. Druggists and dealers are warned against dealing in imitations or counterfeits.

Daily Intelligencer.

One of Earth's Angels.

"I leave the onerous duty of explaining to you, Kate," said the Doctor, before Kate could reply. "I am going down stairs to smoke."

"That provoking fellow!" Kate said, smilingly, looking after him; "it is just like him."

"Is papa here?" Rose repeated, wonderingly.

"No, my dear; papa is at Danton Hall with his wife. It was impossible for him to come."

"Then how do you happen to be here, with Doctor Frank?"

Kate laughed—such a sweet, clear, happy laugh—as she kissed Rose's face.

"For the very best reason in the world Mrs. Stanford! Because I happen to be Doctor Frank's wife!"

Rose sat, confounded, speechless—literally struck dumb—staring helplessly.

"His wife! she repeated. "His wife!" and then sat lost in over-whelming amaze.

"Yes, my dear; his happy wife. I do not wonder you are astonished, knowing the past; but it is a long story to tell. I am ashamed to think how wicked and disagreeable, and perverse, I used to be; but it is all over now. I think there is no one in all the wide world like Frank!"

Her eyes filled as she said it, and she laid her face for a moment on her sister's shoulder.

"I was blind in those past days, Rose, and too prejudiced to do justice to a noble man's worth. I love my husband with my whole heart—with an affection that can never change."

"And you forgive me?"

"I forgave you long ago. Is this the baby? How pretty! Give him to me."

She took Master Reginald in her arms, and kissed his chubby face.

"To think that you should ever nurse Reginald Stanford's child! How odd!" said Rose, languidly.

The color rushed into Mrs. Frank Danton's face for a second or two, as she stooped over the baby.

"Strange things happen in this world. I shall be very fond of the baby, I know."

"And Grace, whom you disliked so much, is your mother and after both together. How very queer!"

Kate laughed.

"It is odd, but quite true. Come, take your things off; you are not to leave us again. We will send to your lodgings for your luggage."

"How long have you been married?" asked Rose as she obeyed.

"Three weeks; and this is our bridal tour. We depart for Paris in two days. You know Frank has had a fortune."

"I don't know anything. Do tell me all about it—your marriage and everything. I am dying of curiosity."

Mrs. Doctor Danton—seated herself in a low chair, with Reginald Stanford's first-born in her lap, and began recapitulating as much of the past as was necessary to enlighten Mrs. Stanford.

"So he saved your life; and you nursed him, and fell in love with him, and married him, and his old uncle dies and leaves him a fortune in the nick of time. It reads like a fairy tale; you ought to finish with—" and they lived happy forever after!"

"Please Heaven, we will! Such real life romance happens every day, sister mine. Oh, the by guess who was at our wedding!"

"Who?"

"A very old friend of yours, my dear—Monsieur Jules La Touche."

"No! Was he, though? How did you come to invite him?"

"He chanced to be in the neighborhood at the time. D'you know, Rose, I should not be surprised if he accomplished his destiny yet, and became papa's son-in-law."

Rose looked up, breathlessly, thinking only of herself.

"Impossible, Kate! What do you mean?"

"Not at all impossible. I assure you. Eeny was my bride-maid, and you have no idea how pretty she looked: and so Monsieur La Touche seemed to think, by the very marked attention he paid her. It would be an excellent thing for her; he is in a fair way of becoming a millionaire."

A pang of the bitterest envy and mortification she had ever felt, pierced Rose Stanford's heart. Oh! what a miserable—what an unfortunate creature she had been! She turned away, that her sister might not see her face, and Kate carelessly went on.

"Eeny always liked him, I know. She likes him better than ever now. I shall not be at all surprised if we find her engaged when we go home."

"Indeed!" Rose said, trying to speak naturally, and failing signally. "And when are we going home?"

"Early in November, I believe. Frank and I are to make Montreal our home, for he will not give up his profession, of course; and you shall come and live with us if you like the city better than St. Croix."

Rose's slumbers that night were sadly disturbed. It was not the contrast between her handsome bedroom and downy pillows, and the comfortless little chamber she had slept in so long; it was not the thought of her sister's goodness and generosity; it was the image of Eeny, in silk and jewels, the bride of Jules La Touche, the millionaire.

Somehow, unacknowledged in her heart of hearts, there had lingered a hope of vengeance on her husband, triumph for herself as the wife of her deserted lover! There would be a divorce, and then she might legally marry. She had no conscientious scruples about that sort of marriages, and she took it for granted Monsieur La Touche could have none either. But now those hopes were nipped in the bud. Eeny—younger, fairer, perhaps—was to have him and the splendid position his wife must attain; and she was to be a miserable, poor, deserted wife all her days.

I am afraid Mrs. Stanford was not properly thankful for her blessings that night. She had thought, only one day before, that to find her friends and be forgiven by them would be the sum total of earthly happiness; but now she had found them, and been forgiven, she was as wretched as ever.

The contrast between what she was and what she might have been was rather striking, certainly; and the bitterest pang of all was the thought she had no one to blame, from first to last, but herself.

Oh, if she had only been true! This was what came of marrying for love, and trampling under foot prudence and honor, and truth. A month or two of joyful life long regret and repentance!

Doctor Danton, his wife, and sister, took a hurried somper over London and departed for Paris.

The weather in that gay capitol was very warm, indeed, but delightful to Rose, who had never crossed the Channel before. Paris was comparatively familiar ground to the young Doctor; he took the two ladies sightseeing perpetually; and Mrs. Stanford almost forgot her troubles in the delights of the brilliant French city.

A nurse had been engaged for baby, so that troublesome young gentleman no longer came between his mamma and life's enjoyment. Her diminished wardrobe had been replenished too; and, well fed and well dressed, Rose began to look almost like the sparkling, piquant Rose of other days.

The Dantons had been three weeks in Paris, and were to leave in a day or two en route for Switzerland. The Doctor had taken them for a last drive through the Bois de Boulogne the sunny afternoon that was to be their last for some time in the French capital. Kate and Rose, looking very handsome, and beautifully dressed, had been among the outdoors, attracting more than one glance of admiration from those who passed by.

Mrs. Danton was chatting gayly with her husband, and Rose, poising a dainty azure parasol, looked at the well dressed Parisians around her.

Suddenly the hand so daintily holding the parasol grasped it tight, the hot blood surged in a torrent to her face, and her eyes fixed and dilated on two equestrians slowly approaching. A lady and gentleman—the lady a Frenchwoman evidently, dark, rather good looking, and not over young; the gentleman, tall, eminently handsome, and much more youthful than his fair companion. Rose Stanford and her false husband were face to face!

He had seen them, and grown more livid than death; his eyes fixed on Doctor Danton and his beautiful wife talking and laughing with such infinitely happy face.

One glance told him how matters stood—told him the girl he had forsaken was the happy wife of a better man. Then his glance met that of his wife, pretty, and blooming and bright as when he had first fallen in love with her; but those hazel eyes were flashing fire, and the pretty face was fierce with rage and scorn.

Then they were past; and Reginald Stanford and his wife had seen each other for the last time on earth.

* * * * *

The summer flew by. They visited Switzerland, Germany, Italy, and were back in Paris in October. About the middle of that month they sailed from Havre to New York, and reached that city after a delightful passage. In being Rose's first sight of the Empire City, they lingered a week to show her the lions, and early in November were on the first stage of their journey to Danton Hall.

RACKED BY INNUMERABLE PANGS, restless by day, sleepless at night, rising unrefreshed in the morning, without appetite and pestered by varying and perplexing symptoms, the dyspeptic take indeed a gloomy view of human existence. For him the zest of life seems gone. Heartburn, oppression at the pit of the stomach, and the attendent annoyances of of constipation and biliousness, combine to render him utterly wretched. But there is, if he will but take advantage of it, a reliable source of reliable relief from all misery. NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY and DYSPEPTIC CURE is, as its name imports, a botanic preparation, free from mineral poison, and an all-sufficient remedy for indigestion in the most obstinate form. It not only enriches the blood by enabling the digestive organs to convert the food received into healthful nutriment, but by its powerful tonic action of the bowels and kidneys, the natural outlets for its impurities. Rids within it, leaves the bowels, is never does so violently and with pain, like a drastic cathartic. It aids, but never forces, Nature, invigorating as well as purifying and regulating the system. It thoroughly cleanses the blood diseased humors which tend to vitiate the blood, purifies the urinary secretion, and promotes a healthy action of the liver in its natural channel, besides expelling it from the circulation. Experience has proved that this standard medicine is a thorough remedy for dyspepsia, biliousness, costiveness, kidney complaints, scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, humors, and all impurities of the blood. Here is where WARNER'S SAFE CURE has achieved its great reputation. It acts directly upon the kidneys and liver and by placing them in a healthy condition drives disease and pain from the system. Oliver and Gideon in Council.

A CONVERSATION THAT MIGHT HAVE TAKEN PLACE.

(From the Ottawa Citizen.)

Mr. Striker—Mr. Mowat, I am about to file a petition against Mr. Hart's election.

Mr. Mowat—Upon what grounds?

Mr. Striker—I have evidence in my possession which will convict him of corrupt practices, both by himself and his agents.

Mr. Mowat—you are convinced that your evidence is sufficiently strong to bring about that result?

Mr. Striker—I am so persuaded. In fact, it would be impossible to make out a stronger case against him than that which the evidence contains.

Mr. Mowat—It is true that we issued instructions to our friends to lodge petitions against the return of Opposition candidates in every constituency where the voiding of the election would likely turn out favorable to our cause.

Mr. Striker—I am aware of the fact; and it was in conformity with those instructions that I took steps to invalidate Hart's election.

Mr. Mowat—You can understand our motive. When we appealed to the Province last summer, I and my colleagues felt confident that our majority would, to say the least, be equal to what it was in the late Legislature.

Mr. Striker—That was—

Mr. Mowat—Thirty two. We believed that the representations which we made on the provincial boundary question—that by making it appear that the Dominion Government had robbed Ontario of her territorial rights and had unconstitutionally interfered with our right to pass certain measures, we could work up public feeling in our favor; but, as you are aware, we were disappointed. Our majority has fallen to nine; and therefore it is desirable that we should secure all the support we can.

Mr. Striker—Quite true; the members of the party all over the Province were as much disappointed as you and your colleagues were. They were induced to look for a very different result. But it is evident that the cries raised by our party had not the desired effect.

Mr. Mowat—I am grateful to our friends for the sympathy they have expressed for me personally and for the members of my government in consequence of the elections not turning out as we predicted they would. But we cannot help that now. We must make the best of the situation, and not run any unnecessary risks connected with the opening of contituencies.

Mr. Striker—Do you refer to the cases of Mr. Crooks and Mr. Wood?

Mr. Mowat—Well, I am not at liberty to say much in reference to them at present. It was the intention, you know, that Crooks should resign. Indeed, I may as well inform you that he tendered his resignation before the general election; but when we found our position materially weakened after the contest, we induced him not to withdraw. You have seen it announced, no doubt, that Hardy will look after his Department during his six months' absence in Europe.

Mr. Striker—So Crooks will remain.

Mr. Mowat—For the present, at any rate. As I remarked a few minutes ago, we do not want to run unnecessary risks. We cannot afford to do so.

Mr. Striker—And Wood, what about him? Is he still in the Government, though not a representative of the people?

Mr. Mowat—My dear Striker, don't press me upon that point. The question of his successor is under consideration. For long, I hope you will hear something definite. With our majority reduced from 32 to 9 or 10, we have to move cautiously. It would ruin us if a new Minister should be defeated under present circumstances. You understand the position, I am sure.

Mr. Striker—Yes, thoroughly. But to come to my own case. Acknowledging you as my leader, whom I have faithfully served through evil and through good report since you first took office, and feeling that I was justified in concluding, therefore, that if a crisis should arrive—if it should so happen that as the result of the contest at the polls the Opposition should gain, say four seats, which would bring your majority down to a minimum, Hart would support a motion of want of confidence in you, and thus aid in putting the management of the affairs of the Province into the hands of Meredith.

Mr. Mowat—You may not be aware that I can rely on Hart.

Mr. Striker (warmly)—Rely upon him! After supporting me, your own candidate, after defeating me. After playing into the hands of our opponents, how, Mr. Mowat, can you say that you can rely upon him? The thing is out of the question.

Mr. Mowat—But, my dear Striker, I have assurances——

Mr. Striker—Assurances be——, I beg your pardon. They are unreliable. If I go into court against him he must go. The evidence is strong. He would be unseated as surely as that to-morrow's sun will rise.

Mr. Mowat—But if a counter protest were entered against you.

Mr. Striker—I did not think of that. But I expected that if we could expose Hart and unseat Hart I would be doing the party a service. We should secure him an opportunity of making out a case of corruption against our opponents.

Mr. Mowat—The theory is an admirable one; but, unfortunately for us, experience has proved that in the matter of the practice of corruption our friends have suffered more than the Tories. I need not enumerate the cases. The record of the election courts is before the county. You know as well as I do that our reputation has suffered. Under certain circumstances I am not averse to the spending of money in the interests of the cause. There are times when the end justifies the means.

Mr. Striker—You justify the doctrine, then, that it is right to do ill that good may come?

Mr. Mowat—It amounts to that. Of course we have to represent to the people that we, the Reformers, are the champions of purity of election, and that the Tories are the only corruptionists; but circumstances have arisen when even I have felt constrained to say in public that our friends were justified in doing those things which we all know should not be done by men of our high professions. At London, on one occasion, you will perhaps remember, I justified the bribery pra ticed by our friends there in their efforts to secure the election of Major Walker.

Mr. Striker—I remember very well; and your colleague, the present Sheriff of Wentworth, also justified a resort to bribery.

Mr. Mowat—He did, indeed.

Mr. Striker—But, Mr. Mowat, we must come to business. What shall we do with Hart? As I have already told you, he can be unseated and if a new election take place I can be elected.

Mr. Mowat—I admire your devotion to the cause, Striker. Trust follower never supported a Government; and I am only sorry that victory did not perch upon your banner on the 27th of February; but between you and me, I have come to the conclusion that little can be gained by unseating Hart. What matters it how much money was spent to secure his election, if he will only support me? A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush.

Mr. Striker—But have you the bird in hand?

Mr. Mowat—I have already informed you that I have assurances from Hart. Why, then, should you go on with the petition?

Mr. Striker—But it is not treating me fairly. I who have stood by you and fought your battles, should not be asked to sacrifice myself to accommodate a traitor.—

Mr. Mowat—Wait. It is not accommodating Hart, but to me. If he consents to support us, what need I and my colleagues care whether he won his election by corrupt or by fair means? What we want is his vote. We have been returned. I am prepared to risk him. If he were unseated, a Tory, out and out, might be found to oppose me, and possibly, might defeat you. Better far under the trying circumstances in which we as a Government are placed, to "fight Hart with" for us.

Mr. Striker—I confess I don't like the arrangement; and what's to become of me?

Mr. Mowat—Leave your case in our hands. You are obliging us by your prompt action. You are obliging us by your large numbers.

Mr. Striker—But what will our friends in Prince Edward say?

Mr. Mowat—Leave that to me. I assume the responsibility. I shall cause the Globe to make an announcement which I am sure, will prove satisfactory to them and to our friends throughout the Province.

Mr. Striker—I suppose I must give way

Mr. Mowat—I appreciate your desire to oblige the Government. Drop the protest; and trust to me to see that Hart acts squarely by us and that you are rewarded.

Mr. Striker—Well, it is a hardship, but——

Mr. Mowat—Say no more about it. Lunch with me at the club, when we shall have an opportunity of further exchanging sentiments. Meantime I thank you. Mine is not an ungrateful Government. Good morning.

Mr. Striker—Good morning. Don't forget to draw up the announcement for the Globe.

BELLEVILLE, FRIDAY, APRIL 27.

A Modern Star Chamber.

The Globe complains that the Committee appointed by the House of Commons to consider the License question is a modern Star Chamber. The Globe's comparison is not correct, and the attempted parallell is a very unhappy one, for it stirs up the recollections of the fact that this Committee are engaged in the work of abolishing Grit Star Chambers.

The Star Chamber was an irresponsible Inquisition, the proceedings of which were conducted with absolute secrecy, the judgements of which were founded upon testimony or on reasons which were never revealed, and whose decrees were final. In no sense do the proceedings of the sub-Committee in question resemble those of the Star Chamber. Their proceedings are not absolutely secret, their conclusions are made known, and their judgment is subject to revision or reversal by the free Parliament of a free and liberty-loving people.

The only bodies in this country that can be fairly termed Star Chambers are those which were created by the so-called Liberal Government of Ontario, under powers that they had illegally seized, and which are known as Boards of License Commissioners. These modern Star Chambers, like their historical prototype, are composed of three irresponsible partizans, generally speaking. Their sessions are secret; the reasons for their findings are not made public; and there is no appeal from their decisions. They differ in degree only, not in kind, from the notorious original after which they were modeled in that whilst they cannot pillory, whip, brand or maim those whom they condemn in secret without a hearing—they can deprive obnoxious individuals of the means of earning their livelihood, and can depreciate the value of their property. These powers have been relentlessly exercised in this very city of Belleville and in many other municipalities in the province, and all in the interest of the party which created them for that very purpose. True, Mr. Mowat gilded the pill which he induced the representatives of the people to swallow and which was very nauseous even to his ardent partizans, by appointing one Conservative on each so called Commission; but when the people had taken the dose, he confined the appointments (in all but a very instances) to his own partizans, and then began the infamies which are known to our readers. When cornered by a direct question on the subject, Mr. Mowat revealed the true inwardness of his plot by declaring that none but the friends of the Government could be depended upon to satisfactorily carry out the measures enacted by the Government! Such is Liberalism in Canada in 1883.

Thanks to the eminent constitutional lawyer who holds the reins of power in the Dominion, the usurpation of Mr. Mowat has been made clear, and in a short time his modern Star Chambers will be swept out of existence, leaving nought behind them but bitter memories. The fact that they had an existence will, however, serve, for many years to come, to point with unmistakable emphasis to the fact that those who, like the Grits of Ontario, are eternally prating of their regard for the liberties of the people, are themselves the real tyrants when opportunity is afforded them to put their ideas into practice. Liberty, in their vocabulary, means liberty only for those who act with them—who are ready to sacrifice everything for "the party"—and punishment and oppression for those who oppose them. Such, at least, has been the practice of the Grit party in Canada, as it has always been that of "Liberals" everywhere. No wonder that the people have tired of them after finding them out, and that to the Conservative leaders they have looked for deliverance from Grit tyranny, and happily not in vain.

Beware of Imitations.

Since Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has become celebrated, a number of unprincipled persons have been endeavoring to palm off Electron and Electric Oil for the genuine Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. Beware of these similar named articles. If their originators had any faith in the healing properties of their own medicines they would, like honest men, give them name of their own, and not try to sell them the reputation of another; but as they know their preparations have no merit, they resort to the most unprincipled means of selling them by getting a name as near as possible to Eclectric. We therefore ask the public when purchasing to see that the name Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is on the front of the wrapper, and the signature of Northrop & Lyman, the proprietors for Canada on the back.

Dominion Parliament.

FIFTH PARLIAMENT—FIRST SESSION.

OTTAWA, April 26—On the motion for the third reading of Mr. Caron's Militia Bill this afternoon, Mr. Ross (Middlesex) moved that it be referred back to the Committee for the purpose of striking out the clause providing for the enlistment of additional men to form a permanent paid corps. After some discussion this was voted down by 113 to 60, and the bill was read a third time and passed. Mr. Caron promised to embody in the departmental regulations one forbidding the sale of beer in canteens.

The long expected Factory Act was introduced by Sir Leonard Tilley this afternoon. It provides that the proprietors of factories must, under heavy penalties, take a number of specified precautions to prevent employes being injured by machinery, fire, etc. The employment of women or children at any work which may endanger their health, is by its provisions made a misdemeanor.

The Pope Speaks.

DISLOYALTY IN IRELAND CONDEMNED.

The latest Papal utterance concerns Irish affairs, and gives great satisfaction to both the English Government and the press. The Pope declares it is a pressing duty of the Catholic clergy in Ireland to exert themselves toward suppressing disloyalty, both from a sense of good policy and for the sake of the interests of the Church of God. Dwelling upon the latter motive, the declaration states that in no country in the world has the Church in a true sense been so solidly successful as in Ireland, where the faith is pure, virtue great, and Catholic education extremely fruitful of results. Over the entire globe the Pope warns Irish Catholics that as the healthy condition of the Church in Ireland is largely due to the extreme liberality of conscience allowed the Irish by the Government of which they are the subjects, and which is Protestant, a liberty which is declared to be much greater and more thorough than is accorded Catholics by any other non-Catholic government, any widespread symptoms of disloyalty to a Government which has been so generous must result in such resentment by that Government as will inevitably curtail the freedom now enjoyed, and greatly thwart the prosperity of the Church in Ireland. Organizations formed for the purpose of either resisting the law or undermining the lawful authorities are therefore denounced as enemies to the good of the Church. Individual organized attacks upon the authorities or the lawful power are prohibited as acts inimical to the true interests of the Church, and contrary to that profound gratitude which is the real spirit entertained by this Church for the Governments. The pronunciamento concludes with an expression that while the Church hopes that all true friends of Ireland and the Church everywhere will do their utmost to conform their social conduct to their religious interests as outlined above, the Pope feels it to be his solemn duty to enforce these precepts into practice as far as lies in his power, and to that end he gives notice that episcopates will be forfeited by all priests who make themselves notoriously unfriendly to the British Government by active political agitation.

"Became Sound And Well."

R. V. Pierce, M. D.: Dear Sir—My wife, who had been ill for over two years, and had tried many other medicines, became sound and well by using your "Favorite Prescription." My niece was also cured by its use, after several physicians had failed to do her any good.

Yours truly, Thomas J. Methvin, Hatcher's Station, Ga.

LARGE ARRIVAL OF IMMIGRANTS.—The Montreal Witness says, in its issue of the 26th:—"Between late last night and noon to-day 1000 immigrants arrived at the Tanneries, nearly all of the best English and Scotch laboring and artisan classes. The SS. Sarmatian's quota, via Halifax from Liverpool, arrived in two separate trains, several hours apart, the trains bringing respectively 222 and 780 souls. The immigrants ex SS. Sarnia, via Portland from Liverpool, arrived at twelve to-day, and numbered 500 persons, all, with barely an exception, such as go to make up a good future bone and sinew of the Dominion's farm population. They proceeded immediately west to Ontario and Manitoba."

COL. IRVINE AFTER THE MALCONTENTS—ANTICIPATIONS OF TROUBLE FROM THE STATES.

WINNIPEG, Man., April 26.—A telegram from Regina to-night states that Col. Irvine went west to Medicine Hat this morning, with a sergeant and fifteen police. The Indians at the end of the track are quiet, and appear to be dispirited. They complain of their condition and the treatment received, and a railroad men to make their cases known to the Lieutenant-Governor of Manitoba if Ottawa cannot be reached. Col. Irvine will see the chiefs and endeavor to conciliate them. A gentleman who has come direct from the end of the track says there is a rumor that a party of American Indians are preparing to cross the frontier, in consequence of Canadian Indians stealing horses.

A New Principle.

The principle upon which Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor acts is entirely new. It does not sink deep into the flesh, thereby producing soreness, but acts directly upon the external covering of the corn, separating it from the under layer, removes the direct pressure from the part, and at once effects a radical cure, without any pain or discomfort. Let those who are suffering from corns, rest skeptical of treatment, try it, and by the comparison of the cure, they will be ready to recommend Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor to others. N. C. Thousands Say So

Mr. T. W. Atkins, Girard, Kan., writes: "I never hesitate to recommend your Electric Bitters to my customers, they give entire satisfaction and are rapid sellers." Electric Bitters are the purest and best medicines known and will positively cure Kidney and Liver complaints. Purify the blood and regulate the bowels. No family can afford to be with out them. They will save hundreds of dollars in doctor's bills every year. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by R. Templeton.

A common, and often fatal, disease is Jaundice. Regulate the action of the Liver, and cleanse the blood with Burdock Blood Bitters, and the worst case may be speedily cured.

Let there be no mistake about this, that the Myrtle Navy tobacco is manufactured from the very finest Virginia leaf. No higher quality of leaf can be purchased for any tobacco made. It is selected with the very greatest care, and treated with the most approved processes for preserving the flavor of the tobacco.

GOOD progress is being made in the construction of the new 12 ton yacht. Her frames will be all in position by to-morrow and as they will be double, she will be unusually strong. She will be one of the best boats that Cuthbert has yet turned out. The steam yacht has been planed and caulked and is ready for the painter.

TRENTON having decided to separate from the County, it was thought a meeting of the County Council should be called in order to settle matters between the County and that town. Trenton has asked the Warden to appoint an arbitrator, but as it did not seek "an amicable arrangement" of the points at issue, an extra session will not be held.

THE Montreal Star of the 26th says:—"Columbia attracted another full house last night, the various members being well received. The Lord Chancellor, Phillis and others were called before the curtain, and several encores were given." This opera will be produced in Belleville by the same company who have given it in Montreal, on Wednesday evening next. Seats are on sale at Reynolds'.

TWO Napanee cans started to drive home from this city last night at nine o'clock. They proceeded as far as the Vinegar Factory, when the horse ran into a ditch near there, fell down and upset the rig. About eleven o'clock a passing driver heard some one groaning near there and becoming alarmed he drove for an officer and both repaired to the spot. One of the visitors was found under the buggy with a badly cut head and swollen eye, but the other was all right. The harness had to be cut to release the horse. The rig was brought back to town and the visitors went home by the midnight train.

ABOUT three o'clock yesterday afternoon Harvey Cronk, with one of his livery rigs, started to take a lady and gentleman to Tweed. About six o'clock, as the train from Peterborough was passing the locality above Corby's mill, Cronk found himself on the roadside, but how he came there he does not know. The team and waggon and the lady and gentleman could not be seen and he does not know where they are. He walked to Corby's and telephoned for a rig and afterwards went on foot to Canifton and was then brought home and he is now in bed. He complains of occasional severe pains about the head but otherwise he is uninjured.

FLEMMING, the fat fraud of "Fund W" fame, has, a telegram from Montreal states, escaped from the custody of detective Fahey, while en route to that city, on Wednesday night. No mention of that fact is chronicled in the Montreal papers, neither has his arrival there been announced by them. The Globe of to-day has the following: "That acute gentleman, Mr. "Bucket shop" Flemming, has evidently at last been successful in his efforts to escape from the confinement which was so galling to his active and enterprising spirit. When he summoned Detective Fahey from Montreal on Tuesday, it was evident that his Chicago lawyers had been successful in their efforts to "square" matters with Flemming's dupes in Montreal, and his cheerful appearance when bidding farewell to the grim portals of Toronto gaol added color to the supposition. But last night when news was received that neither Flemming nor Detective Fahey had reached Montreal all doubt was over, and it is more than likely that the syndicate of Montrealers who employed Fahey to look after Flemming, having had their claims satisfied, consented to the bucket-shop man's release."

A RATHER strange occurrence took place on Thursday afternoon on a farm on the Front of Sidney. Two of the horny handed sons of toil who reside in that municipality are reputed to be fast friends, and as they reside near one another, an interchange of visits with black bottle accompaniment, is always in order. Besides they come to town in company, and represent the characters of Damon and Pythias on a small scale. They arrive together, get full together, go home together and have a good time generally together. But the tie that bound them together was severed yesterday forcibly and unmistakably. The visitor, whom we will call K., proceeded to do the neighborly act (minus the investigator) and ambled towards his friend's premises. The friend, whom we will style O, saw K. approaching and beckoned him to go to the barn. He proceeded, so did O's wife armed with a fence rail. There was a meeting and the air for 17½ minutes was filled with imprecations and a fence rail. K begged to be excused and when the woman's strength failed she had to acquiesce. Shortly after a good natured Englishman came along with a bottle of Corby's Kidney Wort and K's wounds soon became sufficiently healed to enable him to go home. There is a coldness now between K and O, which nothing but a hot summer sun will melt. They will meet for explanation to-morrow.

MR. CUMBERLAND'S expositions of spiritualism will be selected from the following:—Spiritual mind reading and sympathetic blood writing. In this experiment Mr. Cumberland will show how the "Mediums" read names of deceased persons written on folded papers, and how the said names are brought out, in letters of Blood, on their arms. Clairvoyant and "second sight" phenomena. Table rapping and table tipping as exemplified by the notorious Fox Girls, the introducers of modern Spiritualism. De-Materialization manifestations. The famous Cabinet mysteries, as given through the mediumship of Annie Eva Fay, showing among other denizens of a spirit world, the following active inhabitants at work: Disembodied thieves, ghostly musicians, the spirit carpenter, and "sweet William," the unearthly gardener. The "Dark Circle," as given by the best known London mediums, with all the weird and startling accompaniments of floating hands, luminous guitars, and music played by invisible agency. Materialization of Disembodied Spirits. Whilst Mr. Cumberland is seemingly securely bound, "spirit forms" will, without confederacy, appear amongst the audience, bringing with them flowers and other tokens from spirit land. Thought Reading, the latest and most enthralling science.

HORRIBLE ACCIDENT.

A Man's Head Severed from His Body by a Revolving Saw.

From our own Correspondent.

TRENTON, April 26, 1883.

Yesterday afternoon a frightful accident occurred at Lyman Heaton's sawmill, about four miles from Wooler, in the 7th concession of the Township of Brighton. It appears that the mill took fire from some unknown cause, and soon filled with a dense smoke. The engine was promptly stopped, and Wm Stewart Heaton, a son of the proprietor, entered the mill in order to ascertain where the fire was, but being blinded by the smoke, he slipped and fell with his neck across a large circular saw, which, it seems, had not yet ceased to revolve. He was found about fifteen minutes afterwards, with his head completely severed from his body. By great exertions the mill was saved, comparatively little damage being done by the fire. The deceased was a sober, industrious young man, and highly respected by all who knew him.

THE FERRY.

Steam Communication Between Belleville and Ferry Point temporarily Closed.

The license granted to Belleville for ferry purposes between Amelisburg and this city expired yesterday, and the steamer Prince Edward ceased making trips last night. The Ontario Government having given the license to the Township Council of Amelisburg, that corporation transferred it to the Trenton and Bay of Quinte Navigation Company, whose steamer, the Mary Ethel, is to be used for the purposes of the contract. She was lying on the bottom when the work of fitting her out began, and she again sank while the work of raising her was being performed. Eventually she was floated, and is now being put in order for the season's work.

This morning ferry communication between this city and Ferry Point ceased. Captain Jellett could not, he informed us, run the Prince Edward without possibly involving himself in a law suit, otherwise he would gladly have done so, and the Mary Ethel was not in a condition to begin running. Neither, it is said, will she be fit to run to-morrow. This is, certainly, a state of things that is to be regretted; it has provoked a great deal of grumbling, and will occasion considerable temporary inconvenience, especially to the farmers of Prince Edward County. Certainly some provision should have been made for this emergency. The City Council are, however, powerless in the matter, and the connivance of the contractors under the new license must be awaited.

A great deal of vexation was caused today by the inability of residents on this side of the bay to cross, and many were on the other ferry landing with rigs and loads who were unable to come to this side of the bay. The Amelisburg mail was brought over in a row boat, and the driver had to leave a number of orders unfilled, because he could not take parcels with him. Some parties are so annoyed that they threaten to bring an action against either the Trenton & Bay of Quinte Navigation Company or the Council of Amelisburg (as either one must be responsible) for the non-fulfilment of the stipulations of the ferry license. The City Solicitor this morning telegraphed the Ontario Premier regarding the ferry difficulty, but up to one o'clock this afternoon had not received a reply.

LATER.—The Mary Ethel began running this afternoon, but was unable to carry any rigs, as she could not enter the ferry slips.

Marine.

It is probable that the ice in the lower part of the bay has disappeared.

The steamer Hero is expected here to-morrow.

The steambarges Belle Wilson and Saxon with lumber, from Trenton for Oswego, passed down yesterday afternoon in close company.

The Eliza Quinlan, which went ashore at South Bay Point last fall, is to be pulled off, as is also the Enterprise, which is ashore near West Point.

The D. Freeman, with 12,500 bushels of barley, left for Oswego this morning. The Olivia with 7,500 bushels of the same grain, will leave to-morrow.

L. D. Bullock will commence to fit out on Monday. She has a part cargo of barley which has lain in her hold all winter and when her fitting is completed she will finish out. Captain Eccles has his ship in excellent shape and has spared no expense to put her in thorough order.

O. Bortle, of Manchester, Ontario Co., N.Y., writes:—"I obtained immediate relief from the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. I have had Asthma for eleven years. Have been obliged to sit up all night for ten or twelve nights in succession. I can now sleep soundly all night on a feather bed, which I had not been able to do previous to using the Oil."

Nerviline, What is it?

POLSON'S NERVILINE is a combination of the most potent pain relieving substances known to medical science. The constant progress made in this department of science points upward and onward. Nerviline is the latest development in this movement, and embodies the latest discoveries. For neuralgia, cramps, pains in the head—external, internal, and local—Nerviline has no equal. Expend 10 cents in the purchase of a sample bottle of Nerviline and be convinced of its marvellous power over pain. Sold at Jas. Clarke & Co. Large bottles 25 cents, at all druggists.

IN the history of medicine no preparation has received such universal commendation for the alleviation it affords, and the permanent cure it effects in kidney diseases, as Dr. VAN BUREN'S KIDNEY-CURE. Its action in these distressing complaints is simply wonderful. Sold by all Druggists.

SAYS DRYDEN:
"She knows her man, and when you rant and swear,
Can draw you to her with a single hair."
But it must be beautiful hair to have such power; and beautiful hair can be ensured by using HAGARLOCK HAIR RENEWER. SOLD AT 50 cts. by all druggists.

NOW THAT there is a reliable remedy for kidney troubles, half the terrors attached to these complaints have been removed. For this let all be thankful, and to DR. VAN BUREN'S KIDNEY CURE award all praise for having thus removed a hitherto considered fatal disease from our path. It was never known to fail. Sold by all Druggists.

No Trouble To Swallow

THE DUBLIN TRIALS.

Ten jurors on the second trial of Kelly favored returning a verdict of guilty. Kelly will be re-tried on Monday. If the jury fail to agree he can be tried again.

The trial of Fagan was resumed. Joseph Smith, the informer, swore that Edward McCaffrey was in Phœnix Park on the evening of May 6th. Carey denied that he saw McHahon, a son of the proprietor, entered the mill in order to ascertain where the fire was, but being blinded by the smoke, he slipped and fell with his neck across a large circular saw, which, it seems, had not yet ceased to revolve. He was found about fifteen minutes afterwards, with his head completely severed from his body. By great exertions the mill was saved, comparatively little damage being done by the fire. The deceased was a sober, industrious young man, and highly respected by all who knew him.

WATCHING THE LEAGUERS.

The Herald's Washington special says that a secret service is employed at Philadelphia during the holding of the Convention of Irishmen. It is alleged that the coming together of so many representative leaders of the Land Leaguers would also attract extreme advocates of the dynamite policy, and the assemblage at Philadelphia gives the Government detectives a better opportunity of acquainting themselves with the personnel of the movement—information which, it is claimed, may be of great service in the event of the British Government calling attention to the societies of the United States inimical to the peace of the two countries.

The Bad and Worthless

are never imitated or counterfeited. This is especially true of a family medicine, and it is positive proof that the remedy imitated is of the highest value. As soon as it had been tested and proved by the whole world that Hop Bitters was the purest, best and most valuable family me icine on earth, many imitations sprung up and began to steal the notices in which the press and people of the country had expressed the merits of H. B., and in every way trying to deceive suffering invalids to use their stuff instead, expecting invalids to make money on the credit and good name of H. B. Many others started nostrums put up in similar style to H. B. with variously spelled names in which the word "Hop" or devised names in which the word "Hop" or "Hops" were used in a way to induce people to believe they were the same as Hop Bitters. All such pretended remedies of name or initials of counterfeits.

CHAPTER XXV.

Late in the afternoon of a dark November day our travellers reached St. Croix, and found the carriage from the Hall awaiting them at the station. Rose leaned back in a corner, wrapped in a large shawl, and with a heart too full of mingled feelings to speak. How it all came back to her, with the bitterness of death, the last time her eyes had looked upon those familiar objects —how happy she had been then, how hopeful; how miserable she had been since, how hopeless now. The well-known and familiar objects flitted before her eyes, seen through a mist of tears, so well known that it only seemed yesterday since she had last looked at them, and these dreary intervening months only a wretched dream. Ah! no dream, for there sat the English nurse, with the baby in her arms, a living proof of their reality. One by one all the old places spun by, the church, the presbytery, with Father Francis walking up and down the little garden, his soutane tucked up, and his breviary in his hand, all looking ghostly in the dim afternoon light. Now the village was passed, they were flying through wide open gates, and under the shadow of the dear old trees. There was Danton Hall, not the dingy weather beaten Danton Hall she knew, but a much more modern, much more elegant mansion, and there on the great stone steps stood her father, handsome and portly, and kindly as ever; and there was Grace beside him—dear, good Grace; and there was Eony, dressed in pale pink with fluttering ribbons fair and fragile, and looking like a rosebud. A little group of behind, at the sight of whom Kate uttered an exclamation of delight.

'Oh, Frank! There are Harry and Agnes! To think papa never told us! What a charming surprise!'

That was all Rose heard; then she was clasped in her father's stalwart arms, and sobbing on his breast. They all clustered around her first—their restored prodigal—and Grace kissed her lovingly, and Eony's soft arms were around her neck. Then the group in the background came forward, and Rose saw a sunburned sailor's face, and knew that it was her brother Harry who was kissing her, and her sister Agnes whose arms clung around her. Then she looked at the third person, still standing modestly in the background, and uttered a little cry.

'Jules! M. La Touche!'

He came forward, a smile on his face, and his hand frankly outstretched, while Eony blushingly hovered aloof.

'I am very happy to see you again, Mrs. Stanford—very happy to see you looking so well!'

So they had met, and that was all! Then they were in the drawing room—how, Rose could not tell—it was all like a dream to her, and Eony had the babe in her arms, and was carrying it around to be kissed and admired. 'The beauty! The darling! The pet!' Eony could not find words enough of praise. It really was quite a picture at a such a miracle of babydom and kissed Master Reginald into an angry fit of crying.

They got up to their rooms at last. Rose broke down again in the seclusion of her chamber, and cried until her eyes were as sore as her heart. How happy they all looked, loving and beloved; and she, the outcast, the wife of a convicted pity. While she sat crying, there was a tap at the door. Hastily drying her eyes, she opened it, and admitted Grace.

'Have you been crying, Rose?' she said tenderly taking both her hands, and sitting down beside her. 'My poor dear, you must try and forget your troubles and be happy with us. Now it is very sad, and we are all sorry for you; but the husband you have lost is not worth grieving for. Were you not surprised,' smiling, 'to see Mr. La Touche here?'

'Hardly,' said Rose, rather silkily. 'I suppose he is here in the character of Eony's suitor?'

'More than that, my dear. He is here in the character of Eony's affianced husband. They are to be married next month.'

Rose uttered an exclamation—an exclamation of dismay. She certainly had never dreamed of this.

'The marriage would have taken place earlier, but was postponed in expectation of your and Jack's arrival. That is why Harry and Agnes are here. M. La Touche has a perfect home prepared for his bride in Ottawa. Come, she is in Kate's room now. I will show you her trousseau.'

Rose went with her step-mother from her chamber into Eony's dressing-room. There was spread out the bridal outfit. Silks, in rich stiffness, fit to stand alone; laces, jewels, bridal-veil, and wreath. Rose looked with dazzled eyes, and a feeling of passionate, jealous envy at her heart. It might have been hers, all this splendor—she might have been mistress of the palace at Ottawa, and the wife of a millionaire.

But she had given up all for love of a handsome face; and that handsome face smiled on another now, and was lost to her forever. She choked back the rebellious throbbing of her heart, and praised the costly wedding outfit, and was glad when she could escape and be alone again. It was all bitter as the water of Marah to poor, widowed Rose; their forgiveness, so ready and so generous, was heaping coals of fire on her head; and at home, surrounded by kind friends and every comfort so long a stranger to her, she felt even more desolate than she had ever done in the dreary London lodgings.

But while all were happy at Danton Hall save Captain Danton's second daughter, once the gayest among them, the days flew by, and Eveleen Danton's wedding day dawned. Such a lovely December day—brilliant, cloudless, warm—just the day for a wedding. The little village church was crowded with the rich and the poor, long before the carriages from the Hall arrived. Very lovely looked the young bride, in her silken robe of white satin, her misty veil, and drooping, flower-crowned head. Very sweet, and fair, and innocent, and as pale as her snowy dress, the centre of all eyes, as she moved up the aisle, on her father's arm. There were four bride maids; the Demoiselles La Touche came from Ottawa for the occasion, Miss Emily Howard, and Miss La Favre. The bride's sister walked with her the general admiration—Mrs. Dr. Danton; Mrs. Stanford, all auburn ringlets and golden brown silk, and no outward sign of the tornaments within; Mrs. Harry Danton, fair as a lily, clinging to her sailor husband's arm, like some spirit of the sea; and last, but not least, Captain Danton's wife, very simply dressed, but looking so quietly happy and serene. Then it was all over, and the gaping spectators saw the wedding party leaving back into the carriages, and whirling away to the Hall.

Mr. and Mrs. La Touche were to make but a brief tour, and return in time for a Christmas home-warming. Doctor Frank and his wife went to their Montreal home, and Mrs. Stanford remained at St. Croix. The family were all to reassemble at Ottawa, to spend New Year with Madame La Touche.

Rose found the intervening weeks very long and dreary at the Hall. Captain Harry had gone back to his ship, and of course Agnes had gone with him. They had wanted her to stay at home this voyage, but Agnes had lifted such appealing eyes, and clung in so much alarm to Harry at the bare idea of his leaving her, that they had given it up at once. So Rose, with no companion except Grace, found it very dull, and sighed the slow hours away, like a modern Mariana in the Moated Grange.

But the merry New Year time came round at last; and all the Dantons were together once more in Eony's splendid home. It made Rose's heart ache with envy to walk through those lovely rooms—long vistas of splendor and gorgeousness.

It might have been mine!—It might have been mine!' that rebellious heart of hers kept crying out. 'I might have been mistress of all this retinue of luxurious ease—queen of an Eastern drama, or an Arcadian dream—with care, and trial, and trouble, monsters unknown even by name.

Mme. Jules La Touche played the role with charming grace—a little shy, as became her youth and inexperience, but only the more charming for that. They were very happy together, this quiet young pair—loving one another very dearly, as you could see, and looking forward hopefully to a future that was to be without a cloud.

Mrs. La Touche and Mrs. Stanford were very much admired in society, no doubt; but people settled into regrets over Mrs. Frank Danton. Such eyes, such golden hair, such rare smiles, such queenly grace, such singing, such playing—surely nature had created that darling of hers in a gracious mood, and meted out to her a double portion of her favors. You might think other ladies—those younger sisters of hers included—beautiful until she came, and then that stately presence, that bewitching brightness, and grace, eclipsed them as the sun eclipses stars.

'What a lucky fellow Danton is!' said the men. 'One doesn't see such a superb woman once a century.'

And Doctor Frank heard it and smiled, as he smoked his meerschaum, and thought so too.

And so we leave them. Kate is happy; Eony reigns right royally in her Ottawa home; and Rose—well, poor Rose has no home, and flits about between St. Croix, and Montreal, and Ottawa, all the year round. She calls Danton Hall home, but she spends most of her time with Kate. It is not so sumptuous, of course, as at Ottawa, in the rising young Doctor's home; but she is not galled every moment of the day by the poignant regrets that lacerate her heart at Eony's. She hears of her husband occasionally, as he wanders through the Continent, and the chain that binds her to him grows fainter day and night. Little Reginald, able to trot about on his own sturdy lega now, accompanies her in her migratory flights, and is petted to death wherever he goes. He has come to grief quite recently, and takes it very hard that grandpa should have something else to nurse besides himself. This something else is a little atom of humanity named Gracie, and is Captain Danton's youngest daughter.

Answer this Question

Why do so many people we see around us, seem to prefer to suffer and be made miserable by Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Coming up of the Food, Yellow Skin, when for 75 cts we will sell them Shiloh's Vitalizer, guaranteed to cure them. D. W. Yeomans & Co., wholesale and retail agents.

RACKED BY INNUMERABLE PANGS, restless by day, sleepless at night, rising unrefreshed in the morning, without appetite and peevish by variety and perplexing symptoms, the dyspeptic takes indeed a gloomy view of human existence. For him the zest of life seems gone. Heartburn, oppression at the pit of the stomach, and the attendant annoyances of of constipation and billousness, combine to render him utterly wretched. But there is, we will be glad to know, a relief at hand. Take advantage of it, a reliable source of reliable relief from all misery. NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY AND DYSPEPTIC CURE is, as its name imports, a botanic preparation, free from mineral poison, and an all-sufficient remedy for indigestion in its most obstinate forms. It not only enriches the blood by enabling the digestive organs to convert the food received into nutriment, but depurates it by increasing the activity of the bowels and the kidneys, the natural outlets for its impurities. But while it relaxes the bowels, it never does so violently and with pain, like a drastic cathartic. It aids, but never forces, Nature, invigorating as well as purifying and regulating the system. It thoroughly expels those diseased humors which tend to vitiate the blood, purifies the urinary secretion, and promotes a flow of healthy bile into the natural channel, besides expelling it from the circulation. Experience has proved that this standard medicine is a thorough remedy for dyspepsia, biliousness, costiveness, kidney complaints, scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, lumbago and all impurities of the blood. LOSS AND GAIN.

She walked apart, along the height,
The stars above her bending head,
And marked by many a twinkling light,
Below her steps the world was spread,
On one side drooped her shadowy hair;
As slow she moved, her white robe shone;
She lived in love's enchanted air—
The love of One!

Lo! from her dreary height she stepped,
Down to the world in lowly guise;
Strange grief within her heart she kept,
Deep wonder in her wistful eyes,
And now, as soft her footsteps move
Along the valley's winding fall,
She knows a purer, lovelier love—
The love of All!

NO MORE.

To meet no more,
I hoped that seal was set upon the past,
I hoped that you and I had looked our last,
Till life was o'er.

Not, oh, my friend,
That you can stir one quiet pulse of mine,
No words can ever join the broken line,
Time traced "the end."

Not that my name
Can bid your heart one instant faster beat;
No fair old folly blind youth found so sweet,
Such power can claim.

The idle dream
Passed as the morning mist will roll away,
When on its fairy veil of sweeping gray,
Fall sunlights gleam.

But in its reign,
Idle although it was, and false, and brief,
Came many an idle hour of baseless grief,
Came many a pain.

Its charms has fled,
But round it hangs the memory of its woe,
Jarring the sweet notes of the long ago,
To heart and head.

Therefore I say,
I fain had left unturned the silly page,
I fain had left untouched the dust of age,
To gather gray.

And thick and fast
Upon the coffer of the faded flowers
We plucked and flung away in those wild hours,
Whose spell had passed.

In calm content
lest in our sobered joys, apart we stand,
I want no spectre from the shadow land,
Of fancies spent.

And so I say,
Smooth be your path, your sky from cloudlets free,
But let life's river roll twixt you and me,
E'en to as-day.

TABERNACLE SERMONS.

Discourse by Rev. T. De Witt Talmage.

HELPFULNESS.

"Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ."—Galatians, vi, 2.

Every man for himself. If there be room for one more passenger in the lifeboat, get in yourself. If there be a burden to lift, you supervise while others shoulder it. You be the digit while others are the ciphers on the right hand side—nothing in themselves, but augmenting you. In opposition to that theory of selfishness, Paul advances in my text the gospel theory: "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ." Everybody has burdens. Sometimes they come down upon the shoulders, sometimes they come down upon the head, sometimes they come down upon the heart. Looking over the assembly you all seem well and bright and easy; but each one has a burden to lift, and some of you have more than you can lift. Paul proposes to split up the burdens into fragments. You take part of mine and I must take part of the other's and so we will fulfil the law of Christ. Mrs. Appleton, of Boston, the daughter of Daniel Webster, was dying, after a long illness. The great lawyer after pleading an important cause in the court room, on his way home stopped at the house of his daughter and went into her sick room. She said to him, "Father, why are you out to-day in this cold weather without an overcoat?" The great lawyer went into the next room and was in a flood of tears saying, "Dying, yet thinking only of me." O, how much more beautiful is care for others than this everlasting taking care of ourselves. High up in the wall of the Temple of Balbec there are three stones, each weighing eleven hundred tons. These were lifted up by a style of machinery that is now among the lost arts. But in my text is the Gospel machinery by which the vaster and the heavier tonnage of the world's burden is to be lifted from the crushed heart of the human race.

What you and I most need to learn is the spirit of helpfulness. Encourage the merchant. If he have a superior style of goods, tell him so. If he have with his clerks adorned the show window and the shelves, compliment his taste. If he have a good business locality, if he have had great success, if he have brilliant prospects for the future, recognize all this. Be not afraid that he will become arrogant and puffed up by your approval. Before night some shop going person will come in and tell him that his prices are exorbitant, and that his goods are of an inferior quality, and that his shop window gave promise of far better things than he found inside. Before the night of the day in which you say encouraging words to that merchant there will be some crank, male or female, who will come into the store and depreciate everything, and haul down enough goods from the shelves to fit out a family for a whole winter, without buying a cent's worth. If the merchant be a grocer there will be some one before night who will come into his establishment and taste of this and taste of that and taste of something else, in that way stealing all the profits of anything that he may purchase—buying three apples while he is eating one orange. Before the night of the day when you approve that merchant he will have a bad debt which he will have to erase, a bad debt made by some one who has moved away from the neighborhood without giving any hint of the place of destination. Before the night of the day when you have uttered encouraging words to the merchant there will be some woman who will return to his store and say she has lost her purse—she left it there in the store, she brought it there, she did not take it away, she knows it is there, leaving you to make the delicate and complimentary inference that you prefer to make. Before night that merchant will hear that some style of goods of which he had a large supply is going out of fashion, and there will be some one who will come into the store and pay a bill under protest, saying he has paid it before but the receipt has been lost. Now, encourage that merchant, not fearing that he will become arrogant or puffed up, for there will be before night enough unpleasant things said to keep him from becoming apoplectic with plethora of praise.

Encourage newspaper men. If you know how many annoyances they have, if you understood that their most elaborate article is sometimes flung out because there is such great pressure on the columns, and that an accurate report of a speech is expected, although the utterance be so indistinct that the discourse is one long stenographic guess, and that the midnight which finds you asleep demands that they be awake, and that they are sometimes ground between the wheels of our great brain manufacturers; sickened at the often approach of men who want complimentary newspaper notices, or who want newspaper retraction; one day sent to report a burial, the next day to report a pugilistic encounter; shifted from place to place by sudden revolution which is liable to take place any day in our great journalistic establishments, precarious life becoming more and more precarious—if you understood it, you would be more sympathetic. Be affable when you have not an axe to be sharpened on their grindstone. Discuss in your mind what the nineteenth century would be without the newspaper, and give encouraging words to all who are engaged in this interest, from the chief of the editorial department down to the boy that throws the morning or evening newspaper into your basement window.

Encourage mechanics. They will plumb the pipes, or they will kalsomine the ceilings, or they will put down the carpets, or they will grain the doors, or they will fashion the wardrobe. Be not among those who never say anything to a mechanic but find fault. If he has done a job well, tell him it is splendidly done. The book is well bound, the door is well grained, the chandelier is well swung, the work is grandly accomplished. Be not among those employers who never say anything to their employees except to swear at them and to find fault with them. Do not be afraid you will make that mechanic so puffed up and arrogant he will never again want to be seen with working apron or in shirt-sleeves, for before the night comes of that day when you praise and compliment that mechanic, there will be a law-suit brought against him because he did not finish his work as soon as he promised it, forgetful of the fact that his wife has been sick and two of his children have died of scarlet fever, and he has had a felon on the finger of the right hand. Denounced, perhaps, because the paint is so very faint in color, not recognizing the fact that the mechanic himself has been cheated out of the right ingredients and that he did not find out the trouble in time, or scolded at because he seemed to have lamed a horse by unskilful shoeing, when the horse has for months become spavined, or ringbone, or stringhalt. You feel you have the right to find fault with a mechanic when he does ill. Do you ever praise a mechanic when he does well?

Encourage the farmers. They come into your stores, you meet them in the city markets, you often associate with them in the summer months. Office-seekers go through the land, and they stand on political platforms, and they tell the farmers the story about the independent life of a farmer, giving flattery where they ought to give sympathy. Independent of what? I was brought up on a farm; I worked on a farm; I know all about it. I hardly saw a city until I was grown, and I tell you there is no class of people in this country who have it harder and who more need your sympathy than farmers. Independent of what? Of the curculio that stings the plum-trees? Of the rust in the wheat? Of the long rain with the rye down? Independent of the grasshopper? of the locust? of the army worm? of the potato bug? Independent of the drought that burns up the harvest? Independent of the cow with the hollow horn? or the sheep with the foot rot? or the pet horse with a nail in his hoof? Independent of the cold that freezes out the winter grains? Independent of the snowbank out of which he must shovel himself? Independent of the cold weather when he stands threshing his numbed fingers around his body to keep them from being frosted? Independent of the frozen ears and the frozen feet? Independent of what? Fancy farmers who have made their fortunes in the city and go out in the country to build houses with all the modern improvements and make farming a luxury, may not need any solace; but the yeomanry who get their living out of the soil, and who in that way have to clothe their families and educate their children, and pay their taxes and meet the interest on mortgaged farms—such men find a terrific struggle. I demand that office seekers and politicians fold up their gaseous and imbecile speeches about the independent life of a farmer and substitute some word of comfort drawn from the fact that they are free from city conventionalities and city epidemics and city temptations. My most vivid remembrance of boyhood is of my father coming in on a very hot day from the harvest field, and seating himself on the door-sill because he was too faint to get into the house, the perspiration streaming from forehead and from chin, and my mother trying to resuscitate him with a cup of cold water which he was too faint to hold to his own lips, while saying to us: "Don't be frightened there's nothing the matter; a little tired, that's all, a little tired." Ever since that day, when I hear people talking about the independent life of a farmer, I see through the sham. Farmers want not your flatteries but your sympathies.

Encourage the doctor. You praise the doctor when he brings you up from an awful crisis of disease, but do you praise the doctor when through skillful treatment of the incipient stages of disease, he keeps you from sinking down to the awful crisis? There is a great deal of cheap and heartless wit about doctors, but I notice that the people who get off that wit are the first to send for a doctor when there is anything the matter. There are those who undertake to say in our day that doctors are really useless. One man has written a book entitled Every Man His Own Doctor. That author ought to write one more book entitled Every Man His Own Undertaker. "O!" says some one, "physicians in constant presence of pain get hard-hearted." Do they? The most celebrated surgeon of the last generation stood in a chemical department of one of the New York medical colleges, the students gathered in the amphitheatre to see a very painful operation on a little child. The old surgeon said: "Gentlemen, excuse me if I retire; these surgeons can do this as well as I can, and as I get older it gives me more and more distress to see pain." Physicians have so many hardships, so many interruptions, so many annoyances, I am glad they have so many encouragements. All doors open to them. They are welcome to mansion and to cot. Little children shout when they see them coming down the road, and the aged recognizing the step, look up and say, "Doctor is that you?" They stand between our families and the grave, fighting back the troops of disorder that come up from their encampment by the cold river. No one hears such thanks as the doctor hears. They are eyes to the blind; they are feet to the lame; their path is strewn with the benedictions of those whom they have befriended. One day there was a dreadful foreboding in our house. All hope was gone. The doctor came four times that day. The children put away their toys and all walked on tiptoe, and at the least sound said "Hush!" How loudly the clock did tick, and how the bannister creaked, though we tried to keep it so still. That night he stayed all night. He concentrated all his skill upon the sufferer. At last the restlessness of the sufferer subsided into a calm, sweet slumber, and the doctor looked up and smiled and said: "The crisis is past." When, propped up with pillows, in the easy chair she sat, and the south wind tried to blow a rose leaf into the faded cheek, and the children brought flowers—the one, a red clover top; the other, a violet from the lawn—to the lap of the convalescent, and Bertha stood on a high chair with a brush smoothing her mother's hair, and we were told in a day or two she might ride out, joy came back to our house. And as we helped the old country doctor into his gig, we noticed not that the step was broken, or the horse stiff in the knees, and we all realized for the first time in our life what doctors were worth. Encourage them.

Encourage the lawyers. They are often cheated out of their fees, and so often have to breathe the villainous air of court rooms, and they so often have to bear ponderous responsibility, and they have to maintain against the sharks in their profession the dignity of that calling which was honored by the fact that the only man allowed to stand on Mount Sinai beside the Lord was Moses, the lawyer, and that, the Bible speaks of Christ as the advocate. Encouraging lawyers in their profession and transcendent importance—a profession honored by having on the bench a Chief Justice Story, and at the bar a Rufus Choate.

Encourage the teachers in our public schools—occupation arduous and poorly compensated. In all the cities, when there comes a fit of economy on the part of officials, the first thing to do is always to cut down teachers' salaries. To take forty or fifty boys whose parents suppose them precocious and keep the parents from finding out the mistake; to take an empty head and fill it, to meet the expectation of parents who think their children at 15 years of age ought to be mathematicians and metaphysicians and rhetoricians; to work successfully that great stuffing machine, the modern school system, is a very arduous work. Encourage them by the usefulness and everlastingness and the magnitude of their occupation, and when poor children do well, compliment the instructor, praise the teacher, thank the educator. Encourage all invalids by telling them how many you have known with the same ailments who got well, and not by telling them of their smitten eye, asking them whether the color of their cheek is really hectic, or mentioning cases in which that style of disease ended fatally, or telling them how badly they look. Cheerful words are more soothing than chlorid, more stimulating than cognac, more tonic than bitters. Many an invalid has recovered through the influence of cheerful surroundings.

Encourage all starting in life by yourself becoming reminiscent. Established merchants, by telling these young merchants when you got your first customer, and how you sat behind the counter eating your luncheon, with one eye on the door. Established lawyers, encourage young lawyers by telling of the time when you broke down in your first speech. Established ministers of the gospel, encourage young ministers by merciful examination of theological condidates, not walking around with a profundity of overwhelmingness of manner, as though you were one of the eternal degrees. Doctors established, by telling young doctors how you yourself once mistook the measles for scarlatina. And if you have nothing to say that is encouraging, O, man! put your teeth tightly together and cover them with the curtain of your lip; compress your lips and put your hand over your mouth and keep still. A gentleman was passing along, crossing a bridge in Germany, and a lad came along with a cage of birds for sale. The stranger said, "How much for those birds and the cage?" The price was announced the purchase was made and the first thing the stranger did was to open the door of the cage and the birds flew out into the sunlight and the forest. Some one who saw the purchase and the liberation said, "What did you do that for?" "Ah!" said the stranger, "I was a captive myself once and I know how good it is to be free." O! ye who remember hardships in early life, but have come beyond those hardships, sympathize with those who are in the struggle. Free yourself, help others to get free. Gov. Alexander Stephens, dying a few weeks ago, persisted in having business matters brought to his bedside. There was on the table a petition for the pardon of a distinguished criminal, the petition signed by distinguished men. There was also on that table a letter from a poor woman in the penitentiary, written and signed by herself alone. Dying Alexander Stephens said, "You think that because I have been ill so many times and got well, I shall get well now; but you are mistaken. I will not recover. Where is that letter by that woman in the penitentiary? I think she has suffered enough. As near as I can tell she has no friends. Bring me that paper that I may sign her pardon." A gentleman standing by, thinking this was too great a responsibility for the sick man, said: "Governor, you are very sick now; perhaps you had better wait till to-morrow; you may feel stronger and you may feel better." Then the eye of the old Governor flashed and he said: "I know what I am about." Putting his signature to that pardon he wrote the last word he ever wrote, for then the pen fell from his pale and rheumatic and dying hand forever. O, my soul! how beautiful that the closing hours of life should be spent in helping one who had no helper.

Encourage the troubled by thoughts of release and reassociation. Encourage the aged by thoughts of eternal juvenescence. Encourage the herdsman amid the troughs of sin to go back to the banquet at the father's homestead. Give us tunes in the major key instead of the minor. Give us "Coronation" instead of "Naomi." You have seen cars so arranged that one car going down the hill rolled another car up the hill. They nearly balanced each other. And every man that finds life up hill ought to be helped by those who have passed the heights and are descending to the vale. O! let us bear each other's burdens.

A gentleman in England died leaving his fortune by will to two sons. The son that stayed at home destroyed the father's will and pretended that the brother who was absent was dead and buried. The absent brother after a while returned and claimed his part of the property. Judges and jurors were to be bribed to say that the returned brother and son was no son at all, but only an impostor. The trial came on. Sir Matthew Hale, the pride of the English court room, and for twenty years the pride of jurisprudence, heard that injustice was about to be practised. He put off his official robe. He put on the garb of a miller. He went to the village where that trial was to take place. He entered the court room. He somehow got empanelled as one of the jurors. The bribes came around, and the man gave ten pieces of gold to the other jurors, but as this was only a poor miller the briber gave to him only five pieces of gold. A verdict was brought in rejecting the rights of the returned brother. He was to have no share in the inheritance. "Hold! my lord!" said the miller; "hold! we are not all agreed on this verdict. These other men have received ten pieces of gold in bribery, and I have received only five." "Who are you? Where do you come from?" said the judge on the bench. The response was: "I am from Westminster Hall; my name is Matthew Hale, Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench. Off of that place, thou villain!" And so the injustice was balked, and so the young man got his inheritance. It was all for another that Sir Matthew Hale took off his robe and put on the garb of a miller. And so Christ took off His robe of royalty and put on the attire of our humanity, and in that disguise He won our eternal portion. Now are we the sons of God, Joint heirs! We went off from home, sure enough, but we got back in time to receive our eternal inheritance. And if Christ bore our burden, surely we can afford to bear each other's burden. Let us pray.

BELLEVILLE, SATURDAY, APRIL 28, 1883.

A Pressing Want.

In order to utilize the natural advantages of Belleville and make her what nature intended her to be, namely a thriving seat of manufacturing industry, it is necessary that a permanent water power should be created. Twenty-five years ago manufactories were as numerous in this city as they are now, although the population has nearly doubled in the interval, and manufactories which depended upon the waters of the Moira for their motive power, exceeded considerably in number those that are now to be found on the banks of the river, at least within the limits of the City and for some distance beyond the boundaries of the corporation. The reason for the falling off is obviously the failure of the water power, which, owing to various causes, but chiefly to the denudation of the back country of its timber, cannot now be relied upon for more than seven or at the most eight months out of the twelve. In consequence, one (at one time) valuable water power has fallen into disuse and others are only used to a very limited extent.

Under these circumstances several manufacturers removed to other places where permanent water power could be had; others procured steam engines to drive their machinery during the dry season; and the rest removed from water powers and took to the use of steam as their sole motive power. It is apparent that even in those manufactories, the refuse of the raw material used in which furnishes the great bulk of the fuel that their furnaces consume, the additional cost must be considerable, as an engineer is required, whilst in those which do not produce any fuel from the refuse, the extra expense must be heavy. So serious is this item in one large establishment in the city that its removal to another place may be the consequence.

It is also certain that, in addition to the loss which the city has suffered from the removal of manufacturers because of the partial failure of the water power, others have been prevented from locating here from the same cause. There is, we have every reason to believe, a remedy for this state of affairs—a means of restoring a regular and permanent supply of water power to the Moira. We refer to the storing of the waters of the back lakes by means of dams and the liberation of the waters at the season when they are required. This scheme, has been broached before, but nothing has ever come of it; but as the advantages which would arise from it become more apparent year by year, we once more urge it upon the attention of the public, and especially upon the manufacturers, the property owners and the merchants of the city.

The time is highly opportune for such a movement. The manufacturing boom which was created by the N. P. has by no means subsided. Many capitalists, encouraged by the success of the industries which are now in existence, are prepared to engage in hitherto untried branches of industry, whilst others are seeking for locations for manufacturies in various lines which have proved successful elsewhere. An immense stream of immigration is flowing into the country, and the new-comers are generally people of the right stamp, who bring plenty of money with them. The home market is being very greatly enlarged, and thus there is ample room for additional manufactories. Could Belleville offer a permanent water power to those who propose to engage in such enterprises, some of them would beyond doubt be secured; otherwise they will continue to locate elsewhere, despite the fact that this city possesses exceptional advantages in having railway communication east, west and north by the Grand Trunk and Midland Railways, as well as water communication with the lake ports, which will soon be very greatly facilitated by means of the Murray Canal, and that it is the commercial centre of a large, populous and wealthy district.

There is thus every possible inducement for action in this matter. The question is, How can the project best be undertaken? Our opinion is that it should be undertaken by private enterprise. The owners of water powers should meet, discuss the subject, and, after having obtained such information as is necessary—such, for instance, as cost of works, of land required, &c., as well as probable amount of revenue to be derived from the works—lay their scheme before the public. In such a scheme those who are directly interested would of course have to take the largest share of the stock, and, with this condition fulfilled, there is little doubt that the remainder of the stock would be subscribed for.

We earnestly commend the matter to all concerned, and we trust that action looking to the execution of this long deferred and highly important protect will be taken at an early day.

To the Victors, &c.

Notwithstanding the loud protestations of the Grit party that "purity" is their motto, it is found their loudest cries of "stop thief" are made to draw attention from their own misdoings.

One of the chief planks in the Grit platform—if they can be said to have a platform —is "decentralization," yet in every instance where the party have been given the power they displaced almost every public officer of the other side in politics, even when such officers were in every way eminently fitted to fill the position.

We will give a few cases. In the East Hastings Agricultural Society no sooner did the majority of the Directors become Grits than the Treasurer and all the officers who were not Grits were made to step aside for other men. To the victors belong the spoils. The Township Council of Thurlow, in which there is a majority of Grits insist that Mr. Brintnell, notwithstanding his record before the Courts, should be continued in office as an assessor. To the victors belong the spoils.

The last of this sort of spoliation comes from Tyendinaga, where Mr. Edward Hollingsworth, who has served the Township acceptably as clerk for the past twelve years, has been ordered to "go" without a charge being brought against him. But then he was a Conservative, and why should a Conservative hold office under a Grit Council, no matter how efficient an officer he might be? So the mandate went forth that Mr. Hollingworth should be replaced by Mr. Randall, who deserted the Conservative party and hence his reward. The battle-cry of the Grit party is, "To the victors belong the spoils."

Editorial Brevities.

Says the Toronto Telegram :—"The results of enfranchising young men and unmarried women possessing certain property qualifications will be to throw new forces on the side of morality and nationality." By opposing the Dominion Franchise Act, the Globe shows that it does not want new forces thrown on the side of morality and nationality. It would prefer limiting the constituency as much as possible, so that bribery would be more easy, and having the lists made out by the municipal authorities, so that the old game of stuffing the lists in the Grit interest might be carried on in the future, as in the past.

The City Council of St. Catharines has passed a By-law providing that the construction of sidewalks in that city—where it is proposed to substitute flag-stones and other durable material for boards—shall be paid for out of local taxation. We commend this system to the consideration of the Council of this city.

The Hamilton Spectator remarks, with a pertinency which no one can fail to see :—"The men who voted against the Orange Bill complain bitterly because those who voted for it did not succeed in getting it through."

Regina Leader :—"Mr. Bowell has proved himself one of the most useful Ministers we ever had, and one of the best posted men in the whole House."

The Toronto Telegram thus deals with the claims of the Liberals to liberality :—"The Liberal organs say that theirs is the true Liberal party, and that the Conservative claim is a sham. If this be so it is at least noteworthy that the Liberals allowed Sir John Macdonald to get the start of them by extending the franchise to unmarried women possessed of property. What makes the matter look worse for the Liberals is that their organs are now calling out for the defeat of the proposal to enfranchise these women on the remarkable ground that the clause enfranchising them is the only liberal clause in the bill. They want to kill it for love."

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.

Collision on the Chicago and Grand Trunk.

Three Killed and Ten Wounded

A fearful collision occurred on the Chicago and Grand Trunk Railway on Friday morning, in which three persons—among them Conductor H. J. Wall, of Montreal—were killed and ten wounded, including Miss Margaret Casey, of Ottawa. Two of the wounded will probably die. The scene of the accident is about one mile west of Olivet station. The night express going west had passed and the west bound freight at the siding west of Charlotte was proceeding on schedule time, or nearly so. The express was stopped by the breakage of a pipe of the air brake, and about seven or eight minutes later the freight train came thundering along and crashed into the rear of the disabled express, the caboose going half way through the rear sleeper, and instantly both trains sadly. The engineer of the freight, an intelligent young man, of Battle Creek, says he had only about a train length warning of what was before him, but as he was on a heavy down grade, with a train of over thirty heavy cars behind him, it was impossible to stop her, though his brakesmen answered his call for brakes nobly, and stuck to their work on the top of the train, screwing down brakes with all possible despatch. The disabled train lay just around a sharp curve, and nothing could avert the crash.

Beware of Imitations.

Since Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has become celebrated, a number of unprincipled persons have been endeavoring to palm off Electron and Electric Oil for the genuine DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. Beware of these similar named articles. If their originators had any faith in the healing properties of their own medicines they would, like honest men, give them name of their own, and not try to sell them on the reputation of another; but as they know their preparations have no merit, they resort to the most unprincipled means of selling them by getting a name as near as possible to Eclectric. We therefore ask the public when purchasing to see that the name DR. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is on the front of the wrapper, and the signature of NORTHROP & LYMAN, the proprietors for Canada on the back.

IN THE history of medicine no preparation has received such universal commendation for the alleviation it affords, and the permanent cure it effects in kidney diseases, as DR. VAN DUREN'S KIDNEY-CURE. In action in those distressing complaints is simply wonderful. Sold by all Druggists.

Let there be no mistake about this, that the Myrtle Navy tobacco is manufactured from the very finest Virginia leaf. No higher quality of leaf can be purchased for any tobacco made. OBITUARY.

SUDDEN DEATH OF THOMAS EMO—UNEXPECTED CLOSE OF A WELL-SPENT LIFE.

We were greatly shocked this morning by the intelligence that our old and respected friend THOMAS EMO, of Huntingdon, had suddenly expired at his home in that township yesterday afternoon. Only a week ago—namely on Saturday, the 21st inst., he had been in town, when he appeared to be in his usual health and spirits, but this morning he was succumbed to an attack of heart disease on the afternoon of Friday, the 27th, as above stated.

Our deceased friend was one of those men whom everybody respects. A consistent Christian; a man of exceedingly temperate habits; firm in his opinions, but liberal and tolerant to a marked degree, he was respected and esteemed by all, and more particularly by those who knew him best, as is evidenced by the fact that the people of his township bestowed the highest honors that pertain to municipal government upon him year after year, and that he was elevated to the Wardenship by his colleagues in the County Council. Although rendering willing service in municipal affairs, Mr. Emo was yet of an exceedingly modest and retiring disposition. He was one of the most influential and devoted leaders of the Conservative party in North Hastings, but, although he was entitled to the highest reward in the gift of his party, he could never be prevailed upon to seek a nomination for a political position. Characters such as that of Mr. Emo are rare, but that his uprightness and ability were appreciated by his political opponents as well as his friends, is shown by the fact that he had held the office of License Commissioner for several years, he being one of the few Conservatives whom the Ontario Government maintained in that position.

Mr. Emo was born in the county of Fermanagh, Ireland, and was aged about 70. He came to Canada in 1847 or 1848 and settled in Huntingdon at Ivanhoe, at which place he was appointed Postmaster and carried on a mercantile business for several years. These occupations he continued up to the day of his death. In 1859 he first entered the County Council as Reeve of Huntingdon, and held that position for twenty years. In 1875 he was elected Warden of the County, and in 1881 he retired from public life. The other offices which Mr. Emo held from time to time were those of Auditor of Criminal Justice Accounts, Postmaster, Clerk of the Division Court, License Commissioner, and Major in the Militia. He had also occasionally held prominent offices in the Orange Association, of which he was an active member. Mr. Emo leaves a widow, but no family. We extend to Mrs. Emo our warmest sympathy in her bereavement.

Police Affairs

THE CHIEF'S ANNUAL REPORT

To the Police Commissioners of the City of Belleville :

GENTLEMEN :—I beg leave to submit for your consideration my sixth annual report for the year ending 31st December 1882.

It is a recognized fact with those who are engaged in the detection of crime that for a certain length of time it shows itself in any community in a much more marked degree in some few forms than in others, and a careful analysis of the crime committed in Belleville during the past year furnishes us with no exception to the general rule. We have had present two types of the criminal which have been persistently at work—the robber of intoxicated men and the incendiary. A large number of complaints were made by victims of the former, who were usually unable to give any information other than that when they awoke from their drunken slumber they discovered their loss.

In a city with the population of Belleville there should not, on the average, be more than ten fires, accidental and otherwise, during the space of a year; and yet we had no less a number than forty two during 1882! I have of course included in this list many attempted incendiarisms which did not occasion the alarm of the "fire bell." Incendiarism is universally acknowledged to be far more difficult to detect than any other crime. This lies chiefly in the fact that the criminal can choose —or at all events has a wide latitude in choosing—his own time for the furtherance of his designs, and that he is in a position to most effectually arrange to leave no trace behind him; and when there is added to this, an absence of any of the usual motives for such a crime, the obstacles in the way of bringing it home to the evil-doers obviously increase. The case which we have to present in the majority of instances partakes largely, sometimes entirely, of evidence of a circumstantial kind. But, whether they be right or wrong in so doing, we seldom find a jury that is willing to convict without some direct evidence being offered. Therefore about the only class of cases of this nature in which a conviction is reasonably certain to follow, is that in which the offender is discovered in the very act of crime. Since, however, he has the facilities for its commission that I have mentioned, society is seldom so fortunate as to thus summarily arrest him.

A DRIVE of logs broke away in Big Lake, north of Tweed, yesterday afternoon, and are so piled at the bridge in that village that its destruction is threatened.

IT is reported that despite the legal prohibition, large numbers of black ducks have been slaughtered in the Prince Edward marshes. An "informer" is badly needed over there.

IF the dynamiters want to do something useful, let them come over every spring and blow up the ice that extends from Cole's Point to the upper Gap, which is always the last to give way.

THE efforts made to raise the Nellie Cuthbert have thus far been unsuccessful. If she is not floated before the Bullock returns, Captain Eccles will devote a day with his vessel in order to raise her.

IN the Police Court to-day, George Clarke, for stealing a coat from a corporation employe, got three months in gaol and John Brennan for the larceny of a lamp and other articles, was sentenced to serve two months.

OWING to the absence of Mr. T. J. O'Rourke, of Trenton, through illness, the License Commissioners did not transact any business to-day. It is probable they will meet in Trenton on Monday, when the licenses for this city will be granted.

THE Oka Lacrosse Club have received challenges from the Maitlands and Independents of Toronto for matches on May 24th, but cannot be ready to play at so early a date. There is a good deal of new material in the club which it will require time to develop.

A TELEGRAM received in this city yesterday, states that Detective Fahey liberated Flemming at Brockville. The Times-of that town says Flemming was there on Thursday on his way to Montreal. The Witness of the latter city says Flemming arrived there on Thursday night, paid the claims against him and departed.

HARVEY CRONK has recovered his rig and had a conversation with the parties he was driving to Tweed. He states that they informed him he got out of the carriage along the road asserting that he would walk home. In the pocket of his overcoat he found a handkerchief saturated with ether, which he intends to show to a medical gentleman.

MR. W. P. CHARLES, the evangelist from St. Louis, and Mr. Irving, who has been here for several weeks, are expected to address the meeting to-morrow in the Bethel Hall at 4 o'clock and in the evening at 8.15. The above gentlemen have held meetings each night this week at Bethel Hall. The attendance and interest do not decline. Seats free to all.

SPORTSMEN and all others should bear in mind, that duck shooting must cease after Monday next, and that snipe cannot be shot before the 15th of August. Ducks can be shot on and after the latter date. The penalties for violating the statute in this regard are severe, that in the case of deer, elk, etc., being at least $10 and costs for each offence, and in the case of birds or eggs, not less than $5 and costs for each bird or egg.

WILLIAM GILBERT, of Trenton, well, widely and favorably known in this section of the country, died yesterday afternoon, after a long illness. The late Mr. Gilbert was born in Sidney and married a daughter of John Row, Sr. He was for a time engaged in the hotel trade in Frankford and Trenton and was a popular landlord. He had been ailing with consumption for several years and had been very low for a long period. His funeral will take place in Trenton to-morrow.

OWING to the death of Bro. S. Robinson, the Oddfellows were obliged to give up their intended celebration on Thursday last. They attended the funeral of their deceased brother. The service was held in St. Thomas' Church. Before the service began, the Rector, Rev. J. W. Burke, expressed his deep regret that the Society was unable to attend, as had been proposed, a festal occasion, and said he should be happy to see them again able to celebrate their Festival. Rev. R. S. Forneri officiated in the church, and also conducted the service at the grave.

WEATHER PROBABILITIES—Toronto, April 28.—Lakes, moderate to fresh winds, shifting to northward, partially cloudy weather, with areas of rain or snow, followed by clearing weather, stationary or lower temperature.

Mr. Cumberland's Entertainment.

The first of two entertainments by Mr. Stuart Cumberland, under the auspices of the Mechanics' Institute, was given in at night in the City Hall, before a large and intelligent audience.

Mr. Cumberland has a good presence, and is evidently a man of culture. His voice is pitched in a very high key, which renders it somewhat difficult at times to understand what he says. A committee of prominent gentlemen was selected from the audience and took seats on the platform. His first experiment was in mind reading. Mr. R. C. Hulme wrote the names of three deceased friends upon paper, and taking Mr. Hulme's hand and placing it on his forehead, Mr. Cumberland, after a short time, named each one correctly.

The most astonishing thing performed during the evening was the finding by the performer while he was blindfolded, of a pin hidden by one of the committee while he was out of the room. He first had to find it first, in company with the gentleman who hid it, but failed, and then he took the hand of another gentleman who knew where it was, and led him directly to the spot.

Another remarkably clever thing was done. Rev. Mr. Burns was told to think of some one in the audience. He did so, communicating the name to Rev. Mr. McLean only. Mr. Cumberland was then blindfolded, and taking Mr. Burns' hand, he led him directly to Usher McKinnon, who was the gentleman Mr. Burns thought of.

The entertainment concluded with the Cabinet manifestations, which were very cleverly performed.

We advise those who have not seen Mr. Cumberland to go to the City Hall to-night and be astonished.

If any desire lingered in the minds of the audience last night, it was to have an explanation of how such phenomena are produced. Mr. Cumberland promised to make darkness light, so to speak, to-night.

The Ferry.

COMMUNICATION BETWEEN THE TWO SHORES STILL CLOSED.

The stoppage of steam communication between Ferry Point and Belleville, created today a great deal of annoyance to Prince Edward people who purposed visiting this city. Numbers drove to the Amelisburg landing under the impression that they would be able to cross as usual, only to find out that there no boat was on the route. Their disappointment was expressed in strong language and they spoke anything but pleasing terms of the mismanagement of those who control the ferry privilege recently granted by the Provincial Government to the Amelisburg Council.

Some months ago, the license was granted to Amelisburg and some time since the license was transferred to the owners of the Mary Ethel. The owners of that craft measured the slips long before the ice left them and then ascertained that their steamer could not enter them. But they made no preparations to overcome that difficulty. Then again they were unfortunate in the sinking of their boat, and now it is found that her supply of wood must be obtained in Trenton, whither she went this morning. It was known that the lease held by the City would expire on the 28th, and accordingly on that evening Captain Jellett tied the Prince Edward to the dock. Yesterday afternoon the Mary Ethel made a few trips, but was unable to bring over any rigs and a great deal of grumbling resulted. In view of the lack on the City, in applying to the Government for the ferry license, intimated that a proper boat would be put on the route and needed regulations in regard to the tariff made, the situation was developed is, to put it mildly, unfortunate. Captain Jellett has repeatedly asserted his willingness to run his boat; Mr. William Anderson, Reeve of Amelisburg, has, it is asserted, through others, requested that gentleman to continue his trips with the Prince Edward; but Captain Jellett insisted that he should have a written document to that effect, in order that no legal trouble might ensue, and in the light of past events (the long and costly litigation between himself and Captain Anderson) his action is justifiable Any written communication from Mr. Anderson to Captain Jellett would, we are assured, have been received and properly responded to.

Skiffs were brought into use this morning, and the Prince Edward people whose business necessitated their presence here, patronized them, but numbers, afraid of the stability of such small craft, were reluctantly obliged to return to their homes.

The facts were telegraphed to the Government yesterday and repeated this morning, and a petition was drawn up asking that the license granted to the Township of Amelisburg be cancelled, or an additional license granted to Belleville.

Of course a loss to the city and to the people of Prince Edward is the result.

Conclusions of Committees.

There was a large representation of the City Council last night in the City building, and no less than five Committees met and transacted business.

WATER AND GAS.

At the meeting of the Water and Gas Committee, Wm. Connors put in a tender for lighting the coal oil lamps, furnishing the oil and wicks, at $11.50 each, per year. The tender was accepted.

The request for a coal oil lamp near Severn's brewery, was laid over for further consideration. It was also decided to ask the Council to discontinue the lighting of the cloof in the tower.

An account of the Belleville Gas Co. for $946 95, one from C. F. Smith for $6, and one from W. Connors for lighting, for $172, were recommended for payment.

PUBLIC WORKS.

The Public Works Committee endorsed the payment of the following accounts:—Fay sheet, $125.75; Fire, $7.47; Water & Gas, $13.20; Market, $27.30. The Committee asserted that they viewed the necessities of Foster and Coleman Wards, but were not prepared to make a report. When the Stove Foundry is completed, the Committee said they would consider the necessity for a crossing on Pinnacle Street, below Dundas Street. The Committee also recommended that the petition for planting trees be passed by the Council.

HARBOR & FERRY.

The Harbor & Ferry Committee recommended the payment of $6 to J. C. Overell, for stationery for the Harbor Master and that a safe for the latter he purchased from Wm. Sutherland for $65. The Committee reported the receipt of a letter from Wm. Anderson, Reeve of Amelisburg, to the effect that the ferry slips on each side of the bay would have to be altered to accommodate the Mary Ethel.

The Committee recommended that the holders of the Ferry License be allowed to make such repairs as are necessary; such alterations to be done under the supervision of the Street Surveyor without expense to the City; no filling in to be permitted; the slips to be vacated within 15 days after notice by the City.

FIRE.

The Fire Committee passed a number of accounts, among them being one from C. F. Smith for $7.55, another from C. Chrysler for $9 63, one from Mr. Pringle for fixing a water tank, $10 50, one from the same gentleman for $3, and another from Frank Dolan, balance of contract for the Octavia street tank, $30.

EXECUTIVE.

The Executive Committee passed the monetary requests of the other Committees.

A communication from the Solicitor was read, in which it was stated that letters had been received from the Crown Lands Department, asserting that the Hon. Bills Flint was endeavoring to obtain possession of the marsh from the Government. It appears that an Order in Council was passed many years ago when Mr. W. H. Ponton was Mayor, which it was thought gave the marsh to the City; the property was sublet to Mr. Flint at a rental of of $60 per year and now he wants the Government to permit the owners of property near there to claim the marsh in front of what they own. It was decided to instruct the Solicitor to protect the interests of the city on this subject.

As the assessment had not been completed and the various Committees had not handed in the amount of their requirements for the year, the estimates could not be thoroughly considered. Some items were discussed, but nothing could be done for the reasons named. Among the items under the head of uncontrollable expenditure, was that of the police department, the requirements for which had not been estimated for by the Commissioners.

In estimating the receipts from livery licenses, the Chairman said he proposed to place the sum available from that source at $11. Last year the estimate was $80, but only $11 was realized, as but one license was taken out. As the Council has no control over the police force, this discrepancy was to be attributed to that fact.

The Treasurer stated that several livery licenses had recently paid for their licenses, which would not expire until June.

As nothing further could be done all adjourned.

Marine.

The Hero will be up this evening.

The Olivia left for Oswego this morning. She will return with coal, as will also the D. Freeman.

The Varuna and Hiica are docked at Kingston. They were four days going down the bay.

O. Borlie, of Manchester, Ontario Co., N.Y. writes:—"I obtained immediate relief from the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. I have had Asthma for eleven years. Have been obliged to sit up all night for ten or twelve nights in succession. I can now sleep soundly all night on a feather bed, which I had not been able to do previous to using the Oil."

AMERICAN.

TERRIBLE TRAGEDY IN KENTUCKY.

A Congressman Kills His Daughter's Seducer.

The Seducer a Married Man.

THE CASE IN COURT.

THOMPSON'S CAREER.

HARRODSBURG, Ky., April 28.—Congressman Thompson, who killed Davis on surrendering made a pathetic speech in Court detailing his wrongs. There was profound silence and few dry eyes while Thompson was speaking. Thompson said, "I do not believe I will receive the censure of this people, but whatever is the will of the court I will bow to and bear with, as becomes a good citizen. This has broken up my domestic relations, done up my peace and happiness, my daughter dearer to me than all else on earth is an exile from home and is an outcast from society. This blood is a fearful atonement for her tears, and if he had a hundred lives, all of them would not atone for this great wrong. I feel that I did what every man who has a home which he loves and a daughter dear to him would do, if he has courage to do it—save them from wrong. In this I expect and feel I shall receive the sympathy of the good and the virtuous.

Thompson was allowed to give $500 bail.

There is intense sympathy for Thompson, though Davis is very popular. Davis has a wife and two children. He was 39 years of age, and Mr. Taompson 40, and prominently connected. His widow is the daughter of Governor Robinson, of Georgetown. The case went to the Grand Jury yesterday, but as yet no indictment has been found. Mrs. Davis' first knowledge of her husband's death was the arrival of his body. She fainted several times, and now suffers from nervous prostration. She never suspected her husband's infidelity.

Miss Buckner came here and went to the house of Thompson's father, Mrs. Thompson living there. The father and mother of Thompson are espousing her cause, and asserting her innocence. On Miss Buckner's arrival she left and is at a friend's house. A lady states that Mrs. Thompson told her that Davis was innocent. Thompson's son, aged 14, espouses his mother's side, and says Miss Buckner is the cause of the trouble, and if she stays here he will kill her. Miss Buckner declined to say anything.

Davis is a brother of Orit Davis, the former owner and driver of the horses Phil. Thompson, So So, and other fast horses, and was an intimate friend of Thompson's. An eye witness says that when Davis left the car he was trying to draw a pistol, but when his body was searched no pistol was found.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—The intelligence that Congressman Thompson had killed another man caused a deep sensation here, where he is well known and extremely popular. His friends think it was well understood that whenever Thompson and Davis should meet, they would shoot. Thompson bears the reputation of having great pluck and nerve; his friend says that Davis is the fifth or sixth man who has fallen by Thompson's pistol, which, however, he declares has never been drawn except in self defence. While Thompson was a member of Morgan's command during the war, he shot down two men who levelled their rifles at him. After the war, when he was prosecting attorney of the court at Harrodsburg, three of the Thompsons were sitting in the court room armed, when four Davises, with whom Thompson had a feud, entered, also armed. Shooting began, and the three Davises were killed. The Congressman was the only Thompson who escaped death. He was acquitted on the ground of self-defence. Thompson is aged 38, of small size, quiet and unobtrusive. He was quite innocent in Congress last session.

HORRIBLE MURDER.

DARWIN, Tenn., April 28.—Mrs. Mary Harrison, a prominent lady, was found dead in her bed yesterday, with two bullets through the brain. The greatest excitement prevails. It is suspected that Dr. Curry, who boarded in her house, had made proposals which she resented and to cover the crime he murdered her.

MURDER AND SUICIDE.

BROOKLYN, April 28.—It is said that Macduff, who killed his wife, child and himself, yesterday, was jealous and that he went on sprees.

The Bad and Worthless

are never imitated or counterfeited. This is especially true of a family medicine, and it is positive proof that the remedy imitated is of the highest value. As soon as it had been tested and proved by the whole world that Hop Bitters was the purest, best and most valuable family medicine on earth, many imitations sprung up and began to steal the notices in which the press and people of the country had expressed the merits of H. B., and in every way trying to induce suffering invalids to use their stuff instead, expecting to make money on the credit and good name of H. B. Many others started nostrums put up in similar style to H. B., with variously devised names in which the word "Hop" or "Hops" were used in a way to induce people to believe they were the same as Hop Bitters. All such pretended remedies or cures, no matter what their style or name is, and especially those with the word "Hop" or "Hops" in their name or in any way connected with them or their name, are imitations or counterfeits. Beware of them. Touch none of them. Use nothing but genuine Hop Bitters, with a bunch or cluster of green Hops on the white label. Trust nothing else. Druggists and dealers are warned against dealing in imitations or counterfeits.

WHEN SHE IS FAR.

When she is far, and I
Ride o'er the meadow,
Under the sunny sky,
Over the meadow—
How it is easy then
Boldly to woo her,
While down in the winding glen
Speed I unto her!

Scant while for answering
Love shall allow her—
Space while a wild bee's wing
Brushes a flower.
Nay, but the path hath grown
Nearer and nearer—
Farther and farther flown
All safe to Fear her!

A VOICE FROM THE FARM.

"You say that my life is a round of toil?"
The stalwart farmer said,
"That I scarce can wrest from the oft-tilled soil
My pittance of daily bread?
Well, what you tell me in part is true,
I am seldom an idle man,
But I value the blessing of rest, as you,
Who have much of it, never can

"And, surely, I never have worked in vain,
From the spring to the golden fall;
The harvest has ever brought waving grain,
Enough and to spare for all.
And when in the evening, freed from care,
I see at my farmhouse door
My wife and little ones waiting there,
Oh, what has a millionaire more?

"My children may never have hoarded wealth;
Their lives may at times be rough;
But if in their homes they have love and health,
They will find these riches enough.
The only land they will ever own
Is the land that the strong right arm
And the patient, fearless heart alone
Can till to a fertile farm.

'I have nothing beyond my simple wants
And a little for cloudy days;
But no grim spectre my homestead haunts,
Such as silver and gold might raise,
Around me are eyes that with sparkling mirth,
Or with placid contentment shine—
And no wealth-clogged lord upon the earth
Has a lot more blessed than mine.

"Oh, yes, I'm laboring all day long,
With the mind and the muscle, too;
But I thank the Lord, who has made me strong,
And given me work to do,
For what, indeed, is the idle drone
But a vampire on the land,
Reaping fruit that by others was sown,
And not by his own right hand!"

He Must Have Something to Hang On By.

A scissor-grinder was ringing his bell 'to grind,' on Brush street, when a young man called to him and asked:
'Say, can you sharpen everything?'
'Yes, eaferytings.'
'Can you sharpen my wits?'
'Your vits? Vhell, I guess you haf to go und get a new handle und back springs put in first? I must haf sometings to hang on py!'—Detroit Free Press.

'Pa's a long way ahead of Wiggins,' said Melancthon to one of Mr. Marrowfat's guests, as they were examining the pictures in the parlor after dinner.
'Your father is a very clever man,' politely observed the gentleman to whom the remark was addressed.
'Yes,' continued the garrulous boy, 'he can tell when there's a storm coming every time, just by looking in ma's face.'

The Ohio Way.

A farmer residing in Central Ohio recently visited his son, who owns a farm in one of the best grass counties in the Empire State, and the son one day remarked that he had lost money baling and shipping hay. The old man looked the press over and said it was a good one, and examined the hay and pronounced it good timothy, and then opened a bale of hay to see how it was packed.
'Where's the weeds?' he asked, as he separated the layers.'
'Weeds? Why we don't put in any.'
'No old straw down here?
'Not a bit.'
'No stones or dirt?'
'None father'
'And instead of using water soaked timber to bind your bales you go and wrap 'em with light wire. John Henry, it's a wonder to me that you have kept yourself out of the poor house.'—Wall Street News

Good Enough.

A waggon containing a calf in a cage was on the market on Saturday morning with a farmer's wife in charge, and a butcher with an eye to veal stepped up and inquired:
'Madam, is that calf for sale?'
'Yes, sir.'
'Is he a Durham?'
'He may be.'
'Isn't an Ayrshire, is he?'
'Like enough.'
'Don't you know his breed?' he asked in a surprised voice.
'No, I don't.'
'Then how do you expect to sell him?'
'All I know about that calf is that his father hooked a justice of the peace to death and his mother chased a female lecturer two miles, and if that ain't breed enough to ask $4.00 on you needn't take him!'
The butcher said the breed was all right.

The Patient Angler and His Bait.

The late Chancellor Bibb, a former Secretary of the Treasury and a United States Senator, was noted for his courteous manners and his old-fashioned dress. As late as 1859, he wore, in the streets of Washington, a broad-brimmed hat, a ruffled shirt, a long waistcoat, small clothes, black silk stockings, knee and shoe buckles, and his hair tied up in a cue.

The Chancellor was a devoted 'brother of the angle,' believing with quaint Izaak Walton, that 'God never did make a more calm, quiet, innocent recreation than angling.'

On one warm afternoon, the officer in command at the Washington arsenal observed the Chancellor sitting on a broken-down wharf hour after hour, intently watching his float. At last he strolled down from the quarters to inquire 'what luck?'
'None,' replied the Chancellor. 'I thought I had some bites two or three hours ago, but there is not a fish hereabouts now, apparently.'
'What's your bait?'
'A plump young frog, hooked through the fleshy part of the leg.'
Then the questioner roared with laughter and when he had so far recovered himself as to explain, pointed to a log partly out of the water. There the Chancellor saw his bait!
'The plump young frog,' getting tired of swimming about, had jumped upon the log to see what the biped at the other end of the line was doing.

Didn't Seem Possible.

A citizen of Detroit who had been to Lansing on business, was returning the other day when an old farmer, going east with his wife, took the next seat back and opened a conversation which lasted almost into the city. Then he happened to mention something about Europe which the farmer doubted and the citizen protested:
'But I have been there and know.'
'What! You bin to Yurup?'
'Yes.'
'Bin in England and France?'
'I have.'
'Bin to Rome and seen the ruins?'
'Yes.'
'Bin right in Paris?'
'I was there two months.'
'By cracky, Maria!' said the old man, as he turned to his wife, 'here's a feller who's bin all over Yurup and rides with us a hull half day before he lets on a word? Why, the Bix boys didn't go no further than Boston, and the fust night they got home they kept the hull town up till 2 o'clock in the morning to tell about pavements and pictur' halls and opera houses and street cars and door bells which would ring by pressure on a button! Wall, wall! Bin to Yurup and not bragging over it!'

An old darkey came into an Austin drug store with his head bandaged up and groaning as if every bone in his back was broken.
'What's the matter?' asked the drug clerk.
'We have had the bery dabble of a time, me and the ole woman, battering each udder wid chairs and sich.'
'Well, what do you want?'
'We needs some anarchy. Dar ain't no anarchy in de house. De bottle got smashed in de fuss, and de anarchy spilled all ober de floor.'
'If you had more harmony in your house, there would be less anarchy,' remarked the drug clerk, smiling as he filled a small bottle of arnica.
'You am right, boss. Dat's jes what de fuss was about. De reason we needs anarchy is bekase dar was no hominy in de house, and dat's why de ole woman hit me wid de chair.'—Texas Siftings.

A common, and often fatal, disease is Jaundice. Regulate the action of the Liver, and cleanse the blood with Burdock Blood Bitters, and the worst case may be speedily cured.

RACKED BY INNUMERABLE PANGS, restless by day, sleepless at night, rising unrefreshed in the morning, without appetite and pestered by varying and perplexing symptoms, the dyspeptic takes indeed a gloomy view of human existence. For him the zest of life seems gone. Heartburn, oppression at the pit of the stomach, and the attendant annoyances of of constipation and biliousness, combine to render him utterly wretched. But there is, if he will but take advantage of it, a reliable source of reliable relief from all misery. NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY and DYSPEPTIC CURE is, as its name imports, a botanic preparation, free from mineral poison, and an all-sufficient remedy for indigestion in its most obstinate form. It not only enriches the blood by enabling the digestive organs to convert the food received into nutriment, but depurates it by increasing the action of the bowels and kidneys, the natural outlets for its impurities. But while it relaxes the bowels, it never does so violently and with pain, like a drastic cathartic. It aids, but never forces, Nature, invigorating as well as purifying and regulating the system. It thoroughly removes those diseased humors which tend to vitiate the blood, purifies the urinary secretion, and promotes a flow of healthy bile into the natural channel, besides expelling it from the circulation. Experience has proved that this standard medicine is a thorough remedy for dyspepsia, biliousness, costiveness, kidney complaints, scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, lumbago and all impurities of the blood. Price $1.00. Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac-simile of their signature. Sold by all medicine dealers

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS.

Mr. S. Stephenson, Printer, Before the Committee.

No Grounds for Complaint in the Contract Awarded.

The Usual Price for the Work Paid.

Mail's Correspondence.

OTTAWA, April 25.—In the Public Accounts Committee this morning Mr. S Stephenson, of the firm of Messrs. S. Stephenson & Co., Chatham, was called to give testimony with reference to the printing of the report of the Canada Pacific Railway Commission.

Mr. Stephenson, in reply to a series of questions, stated that the contract for this printing was made by the brother. The work was commenced in his office at Chatham. After it had been commenced, it was found that the work was very complicated, and as they had had a good deal of trouble with Mr. Davin, who got as many as six revises. It was therefore decided to make arrangements with Messrs. McLean, Roger & Co. to do the work, and the type that had to that time been set up was distributed without being printed from.

Mr. Ross (Middlesex)—What sum did you pay Messrs. McLean, Roger & Co, for the work?

Mr. White (Caldwell) said that was a matter between the witness and Messrs. McLean, Roger & Co., and even though the witness answered the question, it would not prove that too much had been paid.

Mr. Charlton said the refusal to give the information looked very suspicious and showed that there was something very bad to conceal. The contract was evidently fraudulent, and there was something requiring it which witness and the Government desired to hide.

Sir Leonard Tilley said the simulated indignation of the last speaker (Mr. Charlton) could not have exceeded the feelings of the committee Even while he was speaking, there was playing upon his face a smile which was no doubt prompted by the reflection that he was an ardent supporter of a Government which gave out work in precisely the same manner as the work under discussion was given out, and at the same price. It was a Conservative Government that adopted the principle requiring that the ordinary printing work of the Government should be done by contractors at Ottawa. When that principle was adopted it was complained that there would be too much of a concentration of such work at the capital, and since then, though the main body of the work had been done here, much of it had been distributed throughout the country to be done by printers in various localities. The late Government had hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of printing done by parties other than the contractors. He would ask the Queen's printer whether the price allowed in the present instance was higher than allowed by the late Government.

Mr. Chamberlain—The price allowed was the price allowed during the late Administration. It was a fair contract price, and no extra price was paid.

Mr. Somerville (Brant) stated that the Minister of Customs had said at the last meeting that the work was done by contract, but is was not. It was merely catalogue work. Still it was charged double price.

Mr. Chamberlain—It is not charged double price.

Mr. Bowell stated that when the bill came in he thought the work was well paid for. He therefore communicated with the Queen's printer and learned that the price was the same as that which the late Government paid, whereupon he allowed it.

Mr. Chamberlin—That price has been charged since I have been Queen's printer.

Mr. Bowell proceeded to express his regret that Mr. Charlton should have attempted to blacken the character of Mr. Stephenson, the witness, by stating that he had been guilty of fraud. In common decency Mr. Charlton should have refrained from making an unmanly attack upon the character of a witness, who was not a member of the committee, and therefore could not repel the slander. If the gentleman wanted to attack anybody with regard to the affair, he should attack the Government, the members of which could defend themselves.

Mr. Charlton—It matters not to me whether the Administration of Mr. Mackenzie was guilty of practices that we should condemn or not I am as free and as ready to condemn irregularities committed ten years ago as to-day.

Mr. White (Cardwell)—Oh, yes, irregularities of ten years ago, but not irregularities of six or eight years ago. (Hear, hear).

Mr. Somerville said that the contract price for the work in question was $75 cents a thousand, but Mr. Stephenson had charged 75 cents.

Mr. White (Cardwell)—If the hon. gentleman knows so much it is unnecessary to ask Mr. Stephenson what he paid Messrs. McLean, Roger & Co. for doing the work. I would like to ask the Queen's printer if the price he paid is the price he has always paid.

Mr. Chamberlain—Yes.

Mr. Ross (Middlesex) moved that Mr. Stephenson be required to give the nature of his business arrangements with Messrs. McLean, Rogers and Co.

The Bees and the Wasps.

The attitude of the respective parties at Ottawa may be compared to that of the Bees and the Wasps. The Liberal Conservatives have been working hard for the general hive, and the good things they stored are in striking contrast to the shrivelled emptiness of Mr. Mackenzie's time. But the Wasps have been busy, and, undeterred by hinder and destroy. They have been busy in making attacks which have been simply spiteful, not containing within them any ground of public usefulness. The verbal tricks and traps which, without metaphor, the Grits have been engaged in making do not seem to have been appreciated by the public. And the reason is evident. People will not believe that to be bad which has given so many evidences of being excellent; nor go back from the high way of success to thy swamps and bogholes of failure, associated with so called philosophic principle. The work that has been done is great. The interests that have been created are numerous. The future has been well provided for. There is really nothing to be set up in opposition to these potent facts other than the warning of critics who have themselves proved the most conspicuous failures of the age. Did not Canada try them, and were they not found wanting, even in the very elements of success? Did they not promise and protest, and when accepted out of their very importunities did they not prove themselves to be the most ineffective botches that ever cumbered the purlieus of a Council Chamber? While the people at large are quite content to make use of existing opportunities, and are satisfied with them, the Opposition men are sitting in the seat of the scorner. Unabashed at the failure of former predictions they are reproducing the role of a Wiggins or telling us of dark and howling days to come. And they expect the people to pay attention to their lyings. Many persons had some faith in Mr. Wiggins until his merits as a prophet fell below zero. And so it is with the Grits. When the National Policy was first propounded they foretold its failure. They "prophesied" that it would neither protect manufacturers nor produce a revenue. It has done both. They "prophesied" that it would intensify distress and arrest immigration. It has not done either. They "prophesied" that it would be a burden upon the people; that had been that it has strengthened the national shows and sinews in an unmistakable manner. It would be modest, to say the least, if the Opposition worthies would bear such facts in mind. But they are once more posing as prophets of evil and calling down maledictions upon a policy which they are unable to understand, on account of the riveted prejudices which they are the slaves of. If they would but accept that which has been demonstrated there would be some hope for them. If they would but look at the beams cast before them instead of endeavoring to wander again in the blackness of their own past history, there would be more hope for them. If they schooled themselves by the lessons of experience, and did not rise in anger against those whose convictions are fraught with wisdom, there would be some hope for them. But when holding on to such opinions as those which Mr. Mackenzie recently uttered, viz., during evil times and closing their eyes to evidences of prosperity, they can but be regarded with compassion. Meanwhile, the industry of those who have worked for the common good in so remarkable a manner continues from day to day, giving forth evidences of a sincerity of purpose and a devotion to their task which has never been excelled.—London Free Press.

"Their Occupation Gone."

R. V. Pierce, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y.: I was attacked with congestion of the lungs, soreness over the liver, severe pain in the joints, a burning fever, and general giving a way of the whole system. Failing to find relief in remedies prescribed, I tried your "Golden Medical Discovery." It effected my entire cure. Your medicines have only to be used to be appreciated. If every family would give them a trial, nine-tenths of the doctors would, like Othello, find their occupation gone.

Daily Intelligencer.

BELLEVILLE, MONDAY, APRIL 30.

"Sold" Again.

For many months past there have been in the Grit press, mutterings of a coming storm over alleged corruption on the part of the Dominion Government, in giving some public printing to the Messrs. Stephenson, sons of Mr. Rufus Stephenson, ex M. P. It was alleged that this printing had been paid for at an exorbitant rate—at least twice as much as it was worth—and that it had been executed by the Parliamentary printers. Unhappily for himself, Mr. James Somerville, editor and proprietor of the Dundas Banner, who was last year elected M. P. for North Brant, undertook to prove the truth of these allegations. He, as an old printer and as a generally well informed party journalist, thought he knew all about it, and no doubt he beheld himself, in his own imagination, hailed as the successful exponent of Tory corruption—the great stopper of leaks in the Treasury—the chief Grit detective—the vindicator of his party to the title of "purista," which circumstance that it is unnecessary to mention, because of their painful nature, had deprived them of. He doubtless remembered the fact that the present Minister of Customs had exposed the corruption of ex-Speaker Anglin, who, when holding that exalted position, had not hesitated to line his pockets with commissions from work that was not and could not be executed in his office, and in consequence of which violation of the independence of Parliament Act he forfeited his seat in Parliament; and good, simple Mr. Somerville burned to distinguish himself as Mr. Bowell had done. When the item in connection with which Mr. Somerville sought to earn historical distinction came up in the the Public Accounts Committee, he attacked it with all his heavy artillery, and succeeded—to a certain extent. That is to say, he showed that the work had been done by the contractors at Ottawa. Mr. Somerville's partial success was fatal to him. With all the impetuosity of the unskilful tactician he pushed his success too far, and found that instead of the victory which had seemed within his grasp, defeat was his portion. On his questioning the price paid for the work, which he declared was exorbitant, the Queen's Printer was summoned and declared that the rate paid was the usual one. Mr. Mackenzie hereupon came to his friend's assistance and asked the indulgence of the Committee for him on the ground that he was a new member. Mr. Somerville resented the apology for his but too evident verdancy, and pressed forward to total discomfiture. The Committee, in order to satisfy him, summoned Mr. Stephenson to give evidence, and on the 26th that gentleman appeared before the Committee and made a statement (reproduced in another column) which completely disproved the allegation of corruption on his part, whilst the Queen's Printer absolutely floored the ambitious member for North Brant by stating that the price paid for the work was that which the Mackenzie Government had paid for work of like character. Fancy Mr. Somerville's feelings, and imaging those of the other Grit members of the Committee!

But here we charitably allow them to veil themselves in obscurity.

The Illiberality of the Liberals.

A so-called Liberal newspaper sums up its objections to the Dominion Franchise Bill as follows:

"At present the result of an election cannot be looked upon as expressing the true opinion of the people, but as the result of the work and money expended by the successful candidate. Such evils will increase with every lowering of the franchise."

Such is the idea of the Canadian Liberals concerning a measure of reform which extends very considerably the power and the liberties of the people! Surely the Canadian Liberals must be strongly imbued with the ideas of the tyrants whom, in Ontario, they have successfully imitated. They profess to be the advocates of popular rights, but they distrust the people and rob them of the rights and privileges which they had acquired under Conservative rule, whenever opportunity offers. They profess to favor the lowering of the franchise, but they advocate the defeat of the measure which provides for doing so. Their utterances are at variance with their acts in all things, and their patriotism is on a par with their consistency. We thank the organ above alluded to for its candor. The real object of the Grits is, as above stated, and as we had previously inferred from the opinions expressed upon the subject by their press, to restrict the constituency as much as possible, so that there may be fewer voters to bribe. That the people understand the motives of the Gritocracy and have estimated them at their true worth, is evidenced by the result of the general elections of 1878 and 1882.

Editorial Brevities.

The Peterborough Examiner speaks of the "betrayed" Orangemen! Who betray ed the Orangemen? The Grits, of course, whose votes defeated their incorporation bill.

The Waterloo Chronicle (Grit) says of the Franchise Bill: "So far we have nothing but commendation for the bill. Its tendencies are liberal, and Sir John cannot be blamed for stealing a march on Mr. Mowat by extending the franchise in just the direction the Ontario Premier intends to move next session."

The Globe asks "Are we Careless or Corrupt?" Supposing that the organ's question is intended to elicit public opinion as to its own course, we answer: "Corrupt," with a big C.

The Toronto World (Independent Grit) is hard on Mr. Mowat, but not too hard. It says:—

If report be true, Mr. Mowat has added one more to the long list of political offence which are fast nailing down his political coffin. The charge is made that Mr. Gideon Striker, the defeated candidate at the recent election in Prince Edward, had accumulated evidence warranting the filing of a petition against the return of his successful opponent Mr. Hart, but was persuaded not to carry out his intention by Mr. Mowat. Now, if corruption were practiced in the election, it was an offence against the law and as such should have been made the subject of an investigation in the courts. But the little Premier winks at the alleged offence and connives at a man representing the constituency who may have, legally speaking, no possible right to do so. In criminal law the compounding of a felony is a crime only less than the felony itself.

The report ought to be true, for the Globe made an evidently inspired announcement which has not been contradicted by or an behalf of Mr. Mowat.

The Mail remarks: "The circumstances attending the release of Bucket-shop Fleming are not very creditable to those concerned. Had he been kept in Toronto gaol on the bona fide capiases which were forthcoming, it is more than likely he would in time have satisfied the claims of his Canadian victims. Flemming, however, knew how to manipulate his ill gotten gains, and now he is at liberty, and supposed to be en route for Europe. So enraged are his victims in the Western States that his life would not be considered safe in that district for twenty-four hours." The Mail might have used stronger terms, and still have kept within bounds. The creditors here and elsewhere in Canada whose claims are still unsatisfied have been duped out of their remedy by Detective Fahey allowing him to escape. We should like to know Fahey's authority for allowing the notorious swindler to go without first appearing before the Montreal Magistrate who issued the warrant for his arrest.

Marine.

The Flora Carruth, with barley, from Trenton for Oswego, passed down on Saturday afternoon.

The steamer Hero made her first appearance here this year, at 9.30 on Saturday evening. She looks neat and trim, is newly and attractively fitted out, and being under the command of capable and popular officers, should do an encouraging trade.

The steam barges Saxon and Belle Wilson from Oswego, light, for Trenton passed up yesterday afternoon. They will load lumber at Gilmour & Co's. for Oswego, as will also the schooner A mandale, which passed up this morning from Kingston.

The Mary Foster arrived on Saturday with wood from Trenton.

The D. Freeman, with coal from Oswego, is expected to-morrow.

The Varuna made her first trip here this season, this morning. She passed up from Kingston for Trenton yesterday morning. She is in fine shape and looks neat and clean.

The scow Frank Smith loaded with withes at Mill Island for Collinsby, last week and was going to take them there, when a Sheriff's officer put a piece of red tape on the craft it appears that the cargo was to be forwarded to the Rafting Co, at Collinsby, but Mr. John Hall, of this city, had a claim for $200 against the cargo and he had her tied up. The claimants to the ownership of the withes including Mr. Hall, were to appear in court to day and hear the issue decided.

Beware of Imitations.

Since Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has become celebrated, a number of unprincipled persons have been endeavoring to palm off Electron and Electric Oil for the genuine DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. Beware of these similar named articles. If their originators had any faith in the healing properties of their own medicines they would, like honest men, give them name of their own, and not try to sell them the reputation of another; but as they know their preparations have no merit, they resort to the most unprincipled means of selling them by getting a name as near as possible to Eclectric. We therefore ask the public when purchasing to see that the name Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is on the front of the wrapper, and the signature of NORTHROP & LYMAN, the proprietors for Canada on the back.

IN THE history of medicine no preparation has received such universal commendation for the alleviation it affords, and the permanency of its effects in kidney diseases, as DR. VAN DUZER'S KIDNEY CURE. Its action in these distressing complaints is simply wonderful. Sold by all Druggists.

Let there be no mistake about this, that the Myrtle Navy tobacco is manufactured from the very finest Virginia leaf. No higher quality of leaf can be purchased for any tobacco made. It is selected with the very greatest care, and treated with the most approved processes for preserving the flavor of the tobacco.

Ferry Question.

To the Editor of the Intelligencer.

SIR,—Is it possible that the all-important question of a ferry between West Hastings and Prince Edward is to be settled between two red-hot parties of politicians? for although I myself have frequently heard certain members of both parties on either side of the bay proclaim it as their decided opinion that either side can easily dispense with the visits of the other, we all know perfectly well that this is nothing more than what is called playing a big game at the expense of the public. Now until this ferry and in fact all ferries are regarded, as they should be, as substitutes only for bridges, justice will never be done to the people. As regards the actual settling of the question by the various intelligent bodies who's business it really is to look after the general interests of the public, instead of lining their own pockets, the matter rests entirely with the people themselves. Let them place in office men, good and true, placing them there as a reward for probity and ingenuousness, and for evincing by all their actions an honest and anxious desire to do all the good they can for the city and its inhabitants.

I am, Sir,
Yours faithfully,
J. IRBY ILES.

A New Principle.

The principle upon which PUTNAM'S PAIN LESS CORN EXTRACTOR acts is entirely new. It does not sink deep into the flesh, thereby producing soreness, but acts directly upon the external covering of the corn, separates it from the under layer, removes the direct pressure from the part, and at once effects a radical cure, without any pain or discomfort. Let those who are suffering from corns, yet skeptical of treatment, try it, and by the completeness of the cure, they will be ready to recommend PUTNAM'S PAINLESS CORN EXTRACTOR to others. N. C. THE hardware dealers of this city expect to do a large trade in hinges this summer, as they have ordered large invoices of such goods which are noiseless and self closing, and are worth eight dollars a piece. This has been done in anticipation of the early coming of "the swinging on the garden gate" season.

THE stonework of the buildings of the Stove Foundry Company has been completed, and to-day the laying of brick was commenced. The contractors, the Wickett Bros., are showing commendable energy in the prosecution of their work, and as they themselves and their employees are excellent workmen, an excellent job will be the result.

ABOUT 75 barrels of cheerfulness lay along the edge of the sidewalk, in front of a liquor dealer's premises the other day. An old lady who was passing by, sized up the collection and noticed that all bore the same mark, "25 U. P." This apparently threw her off her mental horizontality, as she went into a drug store near at hand, and wanted to know if coal oil had gone up 25 cents. The clerk explained.

THE remains of the late John Emerson, P.L.S, were brought here on Saturday night, and this morning were interred at Rosslin. The deceased was widely known in this section, was held in high esteem by all who held his acquaintance, and must have been in the vicinity of 90 years of age. His name appears on many a printed form, attesting to certain property having been surveyed by him. He was indeed a "landmarker."

THE reply of the Deputy Attorney General to the telegram from Mayor Lingham, on Saturday, stating that ferry traffic between Belleville and Ameliasburg had ceased, and asking the cancellation of the present license, or the granting of an additional license to Belleville, has been received. It stated that nothing could be done until Ameliasburg was heard from and the complaint from Belleville answered by the municipality to which the license had been granted.

THE Church Parade of the 15th Batt., A.L.I., was a feature yesterday. The members of that corps met at their Armory, on Bridge Street, at 3 p. m., and, headed by the Oddfellows' and Military Band, marched to St. Andrew's Church, where a sermon was preached by Rev. M. W. McLean. The Rev. gentleman took his text from the 1st chapter of James, 12th verse: "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation, for when he is tried he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord has promised to them that love Him." The line of march was up Front and Hotel Streets, and the return by Church and Bridge Streets. The men presented a fine appearance, and the sacred music played by the Band was greatly admired.

"IOLANTHE."—A good deal of interest is manifested in theatre-going circles in the production of Gilbert and Sullivan's latest comic opera "Iolanthe," in which Messrs. Collier and Rice's company open at the Metropolitan Hall, one night, Wednesday, May 2nd, and the sale of seats is such already as to indicate that the attendance will be large. "Iolanthe" is a work which will perhaps find a more ready appreciation amongst our own people than with the American public, though its success in the States has been remarkable. Dealing as it does, indirectly of course, with the questions of the usefulness of that august body, the House of Lords, of which Mr. Gilbert has said in the "Pirates of Penzance" that "with all their faults, we love our House of Peers," it will have a special attraction for an audience in any part of the Empire. That the dialogue is bright and sparkling, we need not say; it is in Mr. Gilbert's happiest vein, as many of our readers who have read the published copies of the opera will have recognized.

A TRIED OFFICIAL.—The Madoc Review says:—"There is probably no municipal official in the Province that has been in continuous service as long as John R. Ketcheson, Esq., Clerk of Madoc township. He represented this district one year in the old District Council, and the following year, 1850, was elected a member of the first Council of the Township of Madoc. From that up to 1864 he successively held the positions of Councillor, Deputy Reeve and Reeve, and on the 4th of June in that year he was appointed Clerk, which position he has since held with credit to himself and profit to the municipality. Mr. Ketcheson is well posted in municipal law, has a ready grasp of municipal requirements, and is withal both courteous and obliging. He is in fact the mainstay of the Council. In the light of our own business relations with the municipal Council of the Township of Madoc, our best wish is that he will long continue to fill the position. Thirty-four years of active and continuous public life, and still holding the confidence of the people, is a record of which any one might well be proud." We copy the above with entire approval, cordially agreeing with our contemporary's estimate of Mr. Ketcheson's ability, and joining in the wish expressed that he may long live to serve the public in his present capacity.

WEATHER PROBABILITIES—Toronto, April 30.—Lakes, moderate winds, mostly east and south, fair weather, probably local showers to-night, stationary or slightly higher temperature.

GONE TO REST.—After 18 years of suffering, which he bore with christian resignation, George Egerton, son of Wm. R. Dempsey, departed this life on Thursday evening, 12th inst., deeply regretted by all who knew him. Age, 25 years, 2 months, 11 days.

"And so thy hand shall help us till at last,
Each billow breasted—every storm-wave past,
Our feet shall tread the golden streets above,
Brought there by Thine own hand and by Thy love."

Stuart Cumberland.

The second entertainment given by Mr. Stuart Cumberland was quite as successful as the first. A committee selected by the audience, composed of Messrs. John Bell, R. M. Roy, W. H. Biggar, J. W. Johnson, H. C. Clute, Thos. Holden and Dr. Gibson took their seats upon the platform. The first experiment was with Mr. Johnson. He had written the name of a gentleman in the audience on a card and handed it to Mr. Bell. Mr. Cumberland was then blindfolded and led Mr. Johnson after a little delay to Mr. W. N. Ponton, the gentleman whom Mr. Johnson had selected. The next experiment was with Mr. Thos. Holden. Mr. Holden thought of a number, which Mr. Cumberland wrote upon paper in full view of the audience. A similar experiment was with Mr. Thos. Ritchie, but failed. The same number, however, was written out by Mr. Cumberland when he substituted Mr. Holden for Mr. Ritchie.

The most interesting and marvellous thing done during the evening was with Mr. Holden, who, Mr. Cumberland said, was the best subject he has found in Canada. He told Mr. Holden to think of an object in the hall and of some one to whom he desired that object conveyed. After being blindfolded Mr. Cumberland led Mr. Holden to Judge Lazier and took his cane and at once proceeded to the end of the hall and gave it to Mr. D. Ockerman. The cane was the object and Mr. Ockerman the person to whom Mr. Holden desired it to be conveyed. Loud applause greeted Mr. Cumberland after this experiment.

Mr. Cumberland next asked any person in the audience who was suffering pain to come upon the platform. Mr. Taylor, painter, appeared, but Mr. Cumberland, after trying to locate the pain, failed to find it. He requested Mr. Taylor to tell Dr. Gibson where it was and then taking the latter gentleman's hand he at once pointed to the spot where Mr. Taylor was suffering.

The Cabinet manifestations were gone through before the audience and the spiritualistic humbug was laid bare.

The audience frequently testified by applause their satisfaction with Mr. Cumberland's efforts.

We have heard not a few remark that Mr. Cumberland bears a striking resemblance to the Marquis of Lorne.

AFTERNOON DESPATCHES

DEATH OF AN EMINENT ARTIST.

PARIS, April 30.—Jules Goupil, painter, is dead.

RECONCILED.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 30.—The Czar and the Grand Duke Constantine, the former's uncle, have been completely reconciled through the mediation of Princess Dolgoroski.

ANOTHER MURDER TRIAL.

DUBLIN, April 30.—The trial of Fitzharris, charged with participation in the murder of Cavendish and Burke, began this morning.

The prisoner pleaded not guilty. Pender, Attorney General for Ireland, argued that although Fitzharris did not personally stab Burke, yet he was cognizant of the act and was an implement of the murder, as he drove off the assassins red-handed. The defence will endeavor to prove that Fitzharris merely drove the murderers in the course of his avocation as a cab driver, and did not know the object of their errand.

ONE MORE INFORMER.

Nevin, arrested on a charge of being concerned in the murder conspiracy, has turned informer.

HOMICIDE ON A STEAMER.

BOSTON, April 30.—Albert Beals, a spice dealer, Boston, shot and killed his partner, Tricket Pearly, on the Fall River steamer Bristol, early this morning. Both occupied a state room together. Pearly got out of his berth and went to the window. Beals was awakened by the rattling of the blinds, and thinking somebody was trying to enter the room he fired. The bullet passed through Pearly's head. He lived an hour and a half. Beals was arrested.

MORE ARRESTS.

CLIFDEN, Ireland April 30.—O'Keefe and Conn, merchants, have been been arrested on the charge of being connected with the murder conspiracy. An informer implicated a number of apparently respectable persons in the conspiracy.

THE TIMES ON THE IRISH CONVENTION.

LONDON, April 30.—The Times says that the Irish Convention at Philadelphia began with a claptrap of folly and malignity and closed after the same fashion. The whole affair would be painful were it not supremely ridiculous. The only practical suggestion made by the Convention was for injuring Great Britain. It is the advice to the people of Ireland to buy nothing from England unless they are obliged to. It is a confession of impotence when Irish malice is driven to such a paltry expedient, which if tried would injure its adaptors. The lesson for Great Britain is to ignore Irishmen and abandon the hope of bringing them to a better frame of mind by the continuance of unmerited favors. The have already convinced the rest of the world that they are unfit to have National Independence and they must be made to feel the strong hand of the law.

ASSAULTING THE POLICE.

LIMERICK, April 30. — Several drunken members of the militia regiments in uniform, last night attacked the police. Several of the militiamen and police were injured.

THE PARNELL FUND.

DUBLIN, April 30.—The Freeman announces the receipt of £2,500 subscriptions to Parnell fund, most of which came from Tipperary. The fund now amounts to £6,000.

O. Bortle, of Manchester, Ontario Co., N.Y., writes:—"I obtained immediate relief from the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. I have had Asthma for eleven years. Have been obliged to sit up all nights for ten or twelve nights in succession. I can now sleep soundly all night on a feather bed, which I had not been able to do previous to using the Oil."

NOW THAT there is a reliable remedy for kidney troubles, half the terrors attached to these complaints have been removed. For this let all be thankful, and to DR. VAN BUREN'S KIDNEY CURE award all praise for having thus removed a hitherto considered fatal disease from our path. It was never known to fail. Sold by all Druggists.

MORNING DESPATCHES.

AMERICAN.

BRADSTREET'S WEEKLY REPORT.

NEW YORK, April 27.—Bradstreet's report 186 failures in the United States during the last week, 39 more than in the preceding week, and 81 more than in the corresponding week in 1882, and 84 more than in the like week of 1881. Canada and the Provinces had 39, an increase of 7 over the previous week.

AN INSANE WOMAN'S RASH ACT.

NASHVILLE, April 30.—Mary Ballerane on Saturday night poured oil over her clothing, ignited it, and stood on the floor watching the progress of the flames. Efforts to rescue her were futile, she resisting any approach until burned from head to foot, the flesh peeling off wherever touched. Though suffering acute pain, she makes no complaint. It is thought she will die. She became insane two months ago, on account of the death of a child. She attempted suicide twice before.

MURDERED TO RIFLE HIS BILLIARD GUN.

CAMBRIDGE, Ohio, April 30.—Darius Davis, a well known citizen, and Jules McHenry, formerly a prominent business man, quarrelled on Friday, while playing billiards. Davis struck McHenry with a billiard cue, and the latter fell senseless and died on Saturday evening. Davis was arrested. He cried, and said he was drunk at the time.

THE PISTOL.

BRAZORIA, TEXAS, April 30.—Two convict guards, John Leonas and S. Boudreaux, in a row at a colored people's festival, fired at Jim Wright, colored, nine ineffectual shots. Wright fired, killing Leonas, and fatally wounding Boudreaux.

TUCSON, April 30.—Joseph Casey and another Indian, who made an attempt to escape from the jail, shot at Holbrook, the Jailor. Holbrook has died.

THE REBELLION IN HAYTI.

NEW YORK, April 30.—Advices from Hayti to April 15 state that Meragoona is still in possession of the rebel chiefs, who have been joined by several hundred more insurgents. Several unsuccessful efforts have been made by the Government to dislodge the rebels. A determined effort to oust the insurgents from Meragoona was to have been made on April 20th. The Government has ordered the execution of all captured rebels.

ENGLAND AND IRELAND.

CHICAGO, April 30. – A Washington correspondent says in an account of an interview with a person supposed here to be an attache of the British legation The attache says Parnell sent several dispatches to Mooney, Egan and Brennan, at the Philadelphia convention, warning them to act with the utmost caution, as threats against England would be a sign for strong measures by the British Government, and might endanger the future usefulness of the Irish members of Parliament. Before the convention met, the leaders of the dynamite party agreed that the resolutions should not countenance anything but constitutional agitation, but acts of violence were not condemned.

The attache also says that the council of seven will be closely watched by England. I understand that one member is a U. S. Senator. That increases the danger of a rupture between the two countries. Great Britain will never give up Ireland and the Irish patriots know it. Certain demands have been made by Great Britain and are in the hands of your State Department and they will be passed upon very soon. The peaceful tone of the Irish Convention may lead to hesitation on the part of your Government, but the decision must of necessity be reached in a few weeks. There will be more arrests in England and Ireland and increased activity on the part of the conspirators here. You can put it down as a positive fact that Parnell is afraid of his personal safety, as he is implicated in the worst classes of Irish conspiracies. He knows the platform of the new League will not prevent a continuance of the outrageous crimes perpetrated in the name of Irish freedom. Parnell had better keep a close watch over himself. Egan had better reconsider his decision to return to Ireland at an early day; also it would be advisable for Brennan to be circumspect in his utterances, before these gentlemen and know where they are, there will be a thunderclap from the neighborhood of the "right little, tight little island" which may stop for ever the floodgates of their patriotic eloquence.

THE GREAT BRIDGE.—The great bridge connecting the cities of New York and Brooklyn is at length completed. This immense structure has been sixteen years in building, and has cost $15,000,000. It is 1,595 feet long between the towers, 3,500 feet between the anchorages, and 5,989 feet from one end to the other. The two towers are each 276 ft. 8 in. high, which leaves a clearance of 135 feet under the bridge at the centre, and the width of the structure is 85 feet; the outsides are used for carriage-ways, in the centre are two tracks for elevated cars, over which is the walk for foot passengers, who will not be required to pay any toll.

The Bad and Worthless

are never imitated or counterfeited. This is especially true of a family medicine, and it is positive proof that the remedy imitated is of the highest value. As soon as it had been tested and proved by the whole world that Hop Bitters was the purest, best and most valuable family medicine on earth, many imitations sprung up and began to steal the notices in which the press and people of the country had expressed the merits of H. B., and in every way trying to induce suffering invalids to use their stuff instead, expecting to make money on the credit and good name of H. B. Many others started nostrums put up in similar style to H. B., with variously devised names in which the word "Hop" or "Hops" were used in a way to induce people to believe they were the same as Hop Bitters. All such pretended remedies or cures, no matter what their style or name is, and especially those with the word "Hop" or "Hops" in their name or in any way connected with them or their name, are imitations or counterfeits. Beware of them. Touch none of them. Use nothing but genuine Hop Bitters, with a bunch or cluster of green Hops on the white label. Trust nothing else. Druggists and dealers are warned against dealing in imitations or counterfeits.

Dominion Parliament.

FIFTH PARLIAMENT—FIRST SESSION.

OTTAWA, April 27.—Sir John Macdonald's bill to consolidate and amend the Dominion Land Acts occupied the attention of the House during the whole of to-day's sitting. The Premier, in moving the second reading, gave a resume of the new clauses in the bill.

Mr. Charlton, Dr. Orton, and all the Manitoba members made speeches on the motion. They were unanimous in pronouncing the bill in the main an excellent one, but they suggested some further amendments that they thought would be in the interests of the settler.

The Manitoba men all urged strongly that cultivation instead of residence on land should be made the condition of granting patents. They pointed out that this would give settlers going in with small capital an opportunity to take employment from older settlers to enable them to earn money to cultivate their land. As the law now stands, if a man leaves his land for this purpose, he runs a risk of being euchred by the claim jumper.

Dr. Orton favored selling the land for cash to bona fide settlers in parcels of not more than 160, nor less than forty acres.

Mr. Ross (Lisgar) strongly urged that the right of pre-emption should be abolished. He said the poor settler was the greatest speculator in the Northwest, for he took homesteads on pre-emption, which was twice as much land as he wanted, merely for the purpose of selling his pre-emption as soon as he got a patent for it.

Several other changes were proposed; all of which Sir John Macdonald promised to take into consideration.

The House went into Committee on the bill.

A Surprise Party.

April 27th being the 79th birthday of Mrs. Sarah Hogle, of Sidney Crossing, her children and friends thought to give her a surprise on that day. So in the morning about 10 o'clock her children, grand children, great grand children, and friends, commenced coming in. The old lady felt overjoyed to see her children coming in, and looking around and missing one of her sons, she said, calling him by name, "Now if he was only here!" One of the party spoke and said that he was coming. "Why, how do you know?" she said. The excitement was getting too much for her, and one of the friends took her aside and told her that it was a surprise on her birthday. There being a lot of the friends expected from Ernestown and Belleville, a team was sent to the station to meet them. The carriage could not hold them, and it had to return the second time to bring the party. After they had partaken of a sumptuous repast, there being about 100 that sat down, they presented her with an elegant dressing Bureau. At the same time her friends from Ernestown presented her with a new dress and silk apron. Major Bonesteel then read the following address:

DEAR MOTHER HOGLE: We, your children, grandchildren and friends, have met together to-day to celebrate with you your seventy-ninth birthday. Kind Providence has permitted you to exceed your three score years and ten, and if by reason of strength they be fourscore years, yet is there strength, labor and sorrow for it is soon cut off and we fly away. During those years you have given repeated evidence of your maternal love and thoughtfulness towards us and to say we deem it a fitting opportunity to express our united appreciation of all your kindness and endeavor to cheer your heart in advanced age by strewing your pathway with blessings. As a tangible proof of the sincerity of our hearts in this matter, we ask you to accept this present, which is, indeed, a very slight memento of our esteem for you, hoping that it may recall many sweet memories of our associations to-day. We thank Almighty God for having spared you so long while many other loved ones have been taken away from us by death, and we pray that He may continue to guide and protect you, and that peace and happiness may attend you during the remainder of your days here below, and as we are called, one by one away from earth, may we as children and loved ones, have a happier reunion in heaven than here, where we shall meet to part no more forever.

YOUR LOVING CHILDREN AND FRIENDS.

Sidney, April 27th, 1883.

Rev. Mr. Wilkinson then spoke, at Mrs. Hogle's request, on her behalf, saying:

DEAR FRIENDS,—On behalf of Sister Hogle, who is the centre of interest to this Company to-day, I wish to offer a few remarks in reply to the address to which we have listened.

There are many reasons why this gathering should be pleasing to all. The expressions of tenderness and love just uttered by children to a mother in her declining years, will no doubt be remembered with pleasure by all. There is no better type of heaven than a family living in peace and love, and purity together.

The recognition of God's goodness to the family, as expressed in the address, is worthy of notice. A parent spared till nearly four score years is not very common. It no doubt is pleasing to the aged parent to know her children recognize the hand of a kind providence in sparing her life, and the reference to her maternal care and kindness, is also pleasing to her. There is nothing more desired by parents than to know that their children feel and appreciate their care.

But above all else, is the hope that may be strengthened in her breast to-day, as expressed by her children, that precious hope of a glorious reunion when earthly ties are all broken. I am sure nothing else is more firmly grasped by your aged parent than this hope. She knows and feels the evidence, in her increasing infirmities, that these family meetings will soon end with her, and there is no meeting can give such joy as a meeting in heaven.

This has been no doubt, a sweet surprise to her, and has given her much pleasure and will leave a brighter sky, a green spot she will not soon forget.

Her children deserve, and have her thanks, for this very appropriate expression of their affection and their care for her, and on her behalf I earnestly hope the spirit this gathering has manifested will continue until the end, and when the family no longer can send or bring greetings to a fond and faithful parent, all hands may join on the other shore at the great marriage supper of the Lamb, where no ties are ever broken, no hearts are sad and no tears ever flow. Until then, may all family ties be made stronger and firmer by the blessing of divine grace.

Bro. Abel Finkle, being present, was called and said he was very much pleased with the company, as he met many of his old friends. He felt it did him good, as he always enjoyed such gatherings, and especially at the dinner table he did his part nobly. But he was glad that the family felt such a regard for their mother, which they had a right to do. From his knowledge of her he knew she had always been a kind, sympathizing mother, and he hoped the family would all seek to have the same assurance and hope of Heaven as she had. She gave her heart to God when young. As we never are likely all to meet again, he said, it was gloriously possible for all to meet in a happier company.

Sister Hogle then said she was very much pleased and thankful to think her friends thought enough of her to come and see her on this her birthday. She did not expect to ever see another gathering like this, but she wished to thank all her friends for their kindness in coming to see her. She could not express herself as she felt, but thanked them all, and thanked God for all his goodness to her.

The company separated after an exceedingly happy reunion.

Dr. E. C. West's Nerve and Brain Treatment is a never failing cure for Nervous Neuralgia, Nervous Headache, Overworked

RACKED BY INNUMERABLE PANGS, restless by day, sleepless at night, rising unrefreshed in the morning, without appetite and pestered by varying and perplexing symptoms, the dyspeptic takes indeed a gloomy view of human existence. For him the zest of life seems gone. Heartburn, oppression at the pit of the stomach, and the attendant annoyances of of constipation and biliousness, combine to render him utterly wretched. But there is, if he will but take advantage of it, a reliable source of reliable relief from all misery. NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY and DYSPEPTIC CURE is, as its name imports, a botanic preparation, free from mineral poison, and an all-sufficient remedy for indigestion in its most obstinate form. It not only enriches the blood by enabling the digestive organs to convert the food received into nutriment, but depurates it by increasing the action of the bowels and kidneys, the natural outlets for its impurities. But while it relaxes the bowels, it never does so violently and with pain, like a drastic cathartic. It aids, but never forces, Nature, invigorating as well as purifying and regulating the system. It thoroughly removes those diseased humors which tend to vitiate the blood, purifies the urinary secretion, and promotes a flow of healthy bile into the natural channel, besides expelling it from the circulation. Experience has proved that this standard medicine is a thorough remedy for dyspepsia, biliousness, costiveness, kidney complaints, scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, lumbago and all impurities of the blood. Price $1.00. Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac-simile of their signature. Sold by all medicine dealers

KIDNEYS, LIVER AND URINARY ORGANS.

THE BEST BLOOD PURIFIER.

There is only one way by which any disease can be cured, and that is by removing the cause—whatever it may be. The great medical authorities of the day declare that nearly every disease is caused by deranged kidneys or liver. To restore these, therefore, is the only way by which health can be secured. Here is where WARNER'S SAFE CURE has achieved its great reputation. It acts directly upon the kidneys and liver and by placing them in a healthy condition drives disease and pain from the system. For all Kidney, Liver and Urinary troubles; for the distressing disorders of women; for Malaria, and physical troubles generally, this great remedy has no equal. Beware of impostors, imitations and concoctions said to be just as good.
